

PRESENTED TO THE LIBRARY

OF

PRINCETUN THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

Professor Henry van Dyke, D.D., LL.D.

,

a continue in the second and the second of the second o

to the state of th

WORKS

Q F

JAMES HERVEY, M.A.

LATE RECTOR OF WESTON FAVELL,

IN NORTHAMPTONSHIRE.

A NEW AND COMPLETE EDITION,

IN SEVEN VOLUMES.

VOL. I.

HIS LIFE-MEDITATIONS AND CONTEMPLATIONS.

LONDON:

PRINTED FOR F. C. AND J. RIVINGTON, NO. 62, ST. PAUL'S CHURCH-YARD; BY BYE AND LAW, ST. JOHN'S SQUARE, CIERKENWELL.

1804.

MEMOIRS

OF THE

LIFE AND WRITINGS

OF THE

REV. JAMES HERVEY, A.M.

WHENEVER we meet with an intelligent or superior Character, we naturally feel a Wish again to fall into his Company, to listen to his Conversation, to observe his Manners, and to improve our Acquaintance with him; yet this natural Curiofity is feldom gratified to the Extent of our Wishes. The Differences of Ages, of Places, and of Ranks, must limit the Acquaintance of Man. Every Situation has its Duties to be performed. This rational Curiofity, which perfonal Intimacy cannot often gratify, Biography may fupply in a Degree; and it is one of the most pleasing and useful Labours of a Biographer to trace the Opening of Genius, to purfue the Progress of Learning, to observe the Formation of superior Habits of Piety and Benevolence.

Vol. I.

Perhaps few Men were ever better known by their Writings, or less known in the common Circles of Society, than the Rev. James Hervey, the Subject of these Memoirs: at all Times he was studious and contemplative; generally he was sequestered in a Country Village, and often he was confined by Sickness and great Languor. He had no Taste for the Amusement, or the Converse of the Generality of the World. The particular Events of his Life were not diversified with much Variety of Circumstances, but the Temper of the Man, the Course of his Studies, the Bent of his Mind, and the Benevolence of his Heart, exhibit a most useful Lesson, and may be partly discovered in his various Works.

He was born February 14, 1714, at Hardingflone, a Village near Northampton, where the Family had refided fome Time. His Father was Rector of Weston Favell and Collingtree, both in that Neighbourhood. The Herveys were an antient and opulent Family in that County; formerly having large Possessions at Hardingstone and at Weston: an Ancestor of their's had been a Judge, and Mr. Hervey's Great Grandsather represented the Town of Northampton in Parliament. Mr.
f. Hervey had the peculiar Advantage, which never can be too much valued, of being descended from a pious and respectable Family.

He had two Brothers and three Sisters. His Brothers settled in London, and deserved the Characters of respectable Tradesmen: one was a Packer, whom he attended in his last Illness; the other was a Wine Merchant, who survived him many Years. His Mother superintended the first Part of his Education, and taught him to read. At seven Years of Age he was sent with his Brother to the Free Grammar School at Northampton, of which the Rev. Mr. Clarke, Vicar of St. Sepulchre's, in that Town, was the Master.

In the common Routine of a School Education the Marks of future Genius may be entirely overlooked; or most probably they have no Ways discovered themselves; like beautiful Flowers which do not open till late in the Spring or Summer. Boys are more like to each other than Men. A Lad may be thoughtless or idle, who hereaster shall appear in a very different Light. The superior Mind may not be discovered, without impeaching the Master's Judgment, or imputing it to the mean Motives of Jealousy and Envy.

With a common Share of School Learning, with but little Knowledge of the World, and with general Impressions of Piety, young Mr. Hervey was entered at Lincoln-College, Oxford; the Joint-Tutors at that Time were the Rev. Richard Hutchins, afterwards Rector of that College; a Man of Abilities, Integrity and Piety, reserved in his Manners, but who perplexed the Refinements of a strong but not a brilliant Mind with philofophical Necessity; and called the Attention of the Public to the supposed Fate of Children dying in their Infancy, from the Good or the Evil which God knew or foreknew they would have done, had they been permitted to live. A long Life and a placid old Age was the Reward of his Temperance and Regularity.

For some Time Mr. Hervey lived like the Generality of the young Men who come to College; released from the Consinement and Discipline of School, they are pleased with a Liberty which they know not how to enjoy, and are entrusted with Opportunities which they are not eager to improve. Without a direct Object before it to engage and concentrate its Powers, the youthful Mind wanders in the Fields of Fancy, or sinks in the Slumbers of Indolence; the Example and the Conversation of the Generality of their Superiors is not calculated to excite the Spirit of Emulation, to disfuse the Charms of Knowledge, or to advance the Cause of genuine Piety.

His other Tutor was the Rev. J. Wesley. Few Men have ever lived who have caused more Conversation or excited more Censure or Applause: but now the Subject is removed, and the Mist of Prejudice and the Glare of Partiality are gradually dying away. Whatever Irregularities or Excentricities might at one Time have marked the Conduct or the Writings of Mr. Wefley, yet it must be allowed, that he possessed a strong Understanding, acute reasoning Powers, a clear and simple Style, a ready Elocution, lively Conversation, combined with great Activity of Mind and remarkable Strength of Constitution. In Love with a College Life, it is no Wonder that he attracted the Notice and encouraged the literary Pursuits of young Hervey; he frequently read and conversed with him out of the customary Hours of Lecture; he prescribed to him a Plan of very early rising and of strict Discipline, which would not agree with every Constitution.

Without defending every Sentiment which Mr. Wesley adopted, or vindicating every Measure which he pursued, yet it must be allowed that few Men ever collected together more Knowledge or displayed more Zeal.

With fuch a Character it is no Wonder that Mr. Hervey was much pleafed; whose Conversation was calculated to improve and enlarge his Mind, whose Time was carefully employed, whose Temperance was exact, if not severe; and whose Piety was uniform and exemplary.—A Member of the College at that Time has informed me, that often when he retired from the Common Room at four o'Clock in the Morning, Mr. Wesley and Mr. Hervey were up and studying together.

To a young Mind the Contrast must have been great between the smoaky Atmosphere of a common Room, and the quiet Apartments of a Tutor, which were marked by Devotion, Application, Temperance and Health.

At College, Mr. Hervey became particularly attached to Kecl's Anatomy, to Durham's Aftro and Physico Theology, and to the Spectacle de la Nature. He acknowledged much Obligation in the Improvement of his Style to Spence's Essay on Pope's Odyssey. By these Means he laid that Foundation for a general Knowledge in the various and wonderful Works of Nature, which he afterwards was so successful to apply in displaying the Greatness of the Author of Nature, and in illustrating the Wisdom of his facred Word.

About this Time, he attempted to learn the Hebrew Language, without any other Help than the Westminster Grammar; but the unexpected Difficulties discouraged him, and, for a Time, he relinquished the Attempt rather than the Intention: afterwards he became a Prosicient in that antient, if not most antient Language, that he might thus be better enabled to teach others, and to draw purer Water from the Wells of Salvation.

The Period of Ordination, when a new and important Character is affumed, was a Season of much Thought and Reflection, of Prayer and folemn rolemn Resolutions, to sulfil the interesting Obligations which he was entering into. Mr. Hervey was ordained the 19th of September, 1736, by Dr. Potter, then Bishop of Oxford, when he voluntarily relinquished an Exhibition of £.20 per Ann. which he received from College, thinking that it would be unjust to detain that necessary Help to defray the academical Expences, which another might stand in greater Need of.

At the first, he assisted his Father, but afterwards ferved the Curacy of Dummer, in the County of Hampshire, which he continued about twelve Months. He then paid a Vifit to a College Acquaintance, Paul Orchard, Esq. of Stoke Abbey, in Devonshire, a Gentleman of eminent Worth and Piety*, to whose Son he stood Godfather, and for whose particular Imitation he has drawn the Character of his excellent Parent. While on a Visit with Mr. Orchard, he was induced, for the Enjoyment of fuch Society, at the Request of the Parishioners, who approved his Preaching, and at the Appointment of the aged and infirm Rector, to undertake the Curacy of Biddeford in that County, at the yearly Salary of As a Mark of their Affection and Esteem, the Congregation of themselves added f..20 per Annum. Yet this, with some small Allowance from Home, was often inadequate to the various Claims on his Benevolence; and although he was exceedingly temperate and frugal in all his Expences, yet he was often obliged to straighten himself to supply the more pressing Wants of others.

^{*} See his Character drawn by Mr. Hervey, Vol. I. p. cciii

In this pleasing Retreat he faithfully and chearfully discharged his parochial Duties, preaching two or three Times on a Sunday; and on the Wednesday and Friday expounding the Epistle and Gospel of that Week; the Remainder of his Time was spent in enriching his Mind, in improving his Heart, and in partaking the Pleasure of Christian and social Conversation, which Mr. Hervey was well calculated to improve and to enjoy.

His Character was now forming, and the Impulse of indignant Zeal was sometimes suppressed, by the Timidity or Modesty of Youth, when he was offended, if not directly insulted, by profane or obscene Conversation in his Presence. He entertained a most tender Sense of the Interest of Religion, and a deep Concern for Men's spiritual Welfare; therefore he was grieved and dejected whenever the Hours of social Intercourse were polluted by obscene Mirth, or degraded by farcastic Ridicule on Religion. When a grand Characteristic and Excellency of Man is abused to insult infult the modest Ear, and to confuse the timid and unfuspicious Female, such Conduct can never be too feverely condemned; but it demands the feverest possible Reprehension when proceeding from Characters whose Age, Learning and Profession, should be a Protection to Modesty, and might reasonably excite Hopes of Improvement. A wife Man will prefer the completest Solitude before Society fo degraded; a Society from which he is glad to escape, although amidst the Sneers of the Scoffers; and he reproaches himself for more than Time loft; he finks in his own Esteem*. Mr. Hervey's Character was foon fo established for Piety, and his Conduct animated with fuch becoming Zeal, that he was not again likely to be offended by meeting with fuch Conversation.

Mr. Hervey cultivated Friendship as the Means of promoting Religion. One of his choicest Friends at Biddeford was Miss Jane Burnard, a pious and distinguished Christian, who died in the Flower of her Age, of a lingering Consumption. Mr. H. paid the last Respect to her amiable and excellent Character, by preaching her Funeral Sermon †.

Whilst residing at this Place, he contracted the too seducing Habit of sitting up late to pursue his beloved Studies: late Hours at Night must intrude on the Morning; and the bright and fresh Hours of the opening Day are more favourable to Health of Body, and to the Exertions of Mind. Knowledge may be purchased at too high a Price; and, surely, to endanger Health, and to undermine a tender Constitution, is to forget the great Purpose of Life, while indulging in a mental Intemperance. This Habit was afterwards corrected.

^{*} See Vol. I. Page 404, 405. † See Vol. IV. Page 200-204.

On the Death of his Rector in 1742, he left the Curacy of Biddeford; and on a final Separation from fuch a Pastor, it is but natural to expect, that the Regret should be mutual; particularly when he delivered his farewell Sermon. He was so much approved by the Congregation, that they not only requested the Rector to permit him to continue the Curacy, but they offered to pay the Whole of his Salary by voluntary Contribution.

In this Place he formed the Plan of his Meditations*. From Biddeford he removed to Weston-Favell, where he officiated as his Father's Curate.

In the Year 1746, he attracted much general Attention by the Publication of his Meditations among the Tombs, Reflections on a Flower Garden, and a Descant on Creation. The Year following produced the second Volume, containing Contem-plations on the Night and the Starry Heavens, and a Winter Piece. A particular Account can scarce be necessary of a Work so generally read and admired. Mr. Hervey displays great and general Knowledge, which he always usefully applies to enlarge the Mind, to elevate the Heart, and to promote the purest Morality and Devotion. In many of his Writings he combines the descriptive Powers of Thomson with the sublime Reslections and moral Energies of Young.

^{*} The Scene of them is laid at Kilkhampton, in Cornwall; and in a ride to that Place he first entertained the Idea of such a Work.

About the Year 1750, he occasionally resided in London, at his Brother's, to try the Benefit of Change of Air, to be relieved from too sedentary a Life, and to enjoy the Converse of religious Friends. Here he was attacked by a violent Fever, and once escaped the Calamity of Fire, which destroyed the adjoining House.

On the Death of his aged Father in May, 1752, he succeeded him at length in the two Family Livings of Weston-Favell and Collingtree, about five Miles Distance from one another, which did not produce above £.160 per Annum together. He had some Scruples at the first on accepting the latter Living; and it was some Time before he took it; but every Scruple of the most upright Mind may not be reasonably formed, and ought not to be pertinaciously adhered to. The Livings were near each other; and, if Mr. Hervey was compelled to keep a Curate, which was more than than probable, from his increasing Infirmities, and the precarious State of his Health, one Living would not have supplied his necessary Expences, on the most frugal Plan. On this Account he complied with the repeated Wishes of his Mother and Friends; took his Degree of Master of Arts at Cambridge, having been admitted of Clare Hall, and was presented with the Living of Collingtree. An Apology to the Bishop, on Institution to the fecond Living, feems to have been needless, only for doing what the Law of the Realm allows, and the inadequate Provision of the Church in general renders absolutely necessary. Mr. Hervey had no Reason afterwards to blame himself for this Line of Conduct, but faw fufficient Reason to approve the Step which he had confented to take.

He next published his Remarks on Lord Boling-broke's Letters on the Study and Use of History, so far as they relate to the History of the OLD Testament, and especially to the Case of Noah denouncing a Curse upon Canaan, in a Letter to a Lady of Quality.

In 1753, he preached the Sermon at the Archdeacon's Visitation at Northampton, and published it for the Benefit of a poor afflicted Child, under the Title of, The Cross of Christ the Christian's Glory.

In the same Year he wrote a recommendatory Epistle to Burnham's pious Memorials, or the Power of Religion on the Mind in Sickness and Death, exemplified in the Experience of many eminent Persons at those important Seasons.

But his most favourite Work, and on which he bestowed uncommon Pains and Attention, were the Dialogues, and the Letters of Theron and Aspasio, on most of the leading Subjects of the Gospel, but particularly on the Mode of Salvation by the Imputation of the Righteousness of the Saviour. This Subject Mr. Hervey labours to prove by Argument, to support by Authority, and to illustrate by various Figures and Modes. He displays great Ingenuity, Learning and Industry. much critical Acumen, and a great Extent of Reading; and yet many wife and good Men have doubted whether this is the exact Method of Salvation which the Gospel holds forth, without either attempting to diminish from the Glory of the Saviour, or to ascribe any Merit to the Works of Man.

Mr. Hervey abundantly succeeded in his Plan of writing a popular Book; on which Account it abounds with varied Descriptions. He ranges through the Works of Nature and the Pages of History, to collect useful Information, to charm the juvenile Reader, to lead him insensibly to high and heavenly Things. His Language, like his Imagination was rich and luxuriant; like a well cultivated Garden in Summer. It was profuse in Flowers and Fragrance.

This Work met with great and deserved Applause, and some Opposition: three Editions were sold in the first Year. It was attacked by Mr. John Wesley, his former Tutor, and by Mr. Robert Sandeman, by Mr. Bellamy, of New England; but it was defended by Mr. Cudworth and Mr. David Wilson: a rash and injudicious Desence is worse than a violent Attack; but the Warmth of Controversy soon cools, the Attention of the Public is engaged with other Subjects, and a Debate once highly interesting, is soon forgotten.

The next Year he enlarged on the Commendation he had paffed on Marshall's Gospel Mystery of Sanctification, which was published as a Preface to it.

The fame Year he also published a new Edition of his favourite Author, Jenks's Meditations, with a Preface, in which he strongly recommends them.

This Year he printed his three Sermons on the General Fast. As a Preacher, Mr. Hervey was eloquent, energetic and animated; his Manner was striking, but never vulgar and low; he seemed to forget his feeble Frame and his delicate Constitution, whilst more immediately engaged in his Master's Service, and labouring for the best Interests of Men.

Of Mr. Hervey's Piety, Devotion, Zeal, Charity, and Knowledge, there will be but one Opinion; yet it will not thence follow that every Sentiment which he entertained was equally true and important: a Distinction must always be made between the Integrity of a Man's Life and the Truth of his Opinions; here we are more immediately and pleasingly concerned with the former.

His more particular Friends were some of the first religious Characters of the Time; in which Class are to be reckoned Lady Frances Shirley, the Rev. George Whitefield, Rev. William Romaine, Rev. Philip Doddridge, Rev. J. Ryland, and Dr. Stonbouse, his Physician, who afterwards entered into Holy Orders, by his particular Advice.

True Piety is of no Party, it can embrace and honour whatever Excellencies it discovers in others. On this Principle Mr. Hervey entertained a high Opinion, and cultivated a cordial Friendship with several who were not Members of the National Established Church; if they did but acknowledge the Divine Saviour, and walk in Holiness of Life, he was ever ready to honour them with his Esteem, and to allow them the right Hand of Fellowship. Mr. Hervey himself was perfectly regular in his Conduct as a Member of the Establishment:

He shone as a Correspondent and as a Companion. His Letters and his Conversation were remarkable for Ease and Elegance, for Extent of Knowledge, Knowledge, and Fervour of Devotion. He always wished to be useful, and ever conducted himself as standing in the Divine Presence, and employed in his Master's Service. It is almost needless to say, that his Converse was free from any Thing which could tend to depreciate the Character of another: he was as ready to conceal their Faults, as to publish their Excellencies.

His Life was a practical Comment on his Writings: an Example of what a Christian ought to be; marked by the sincerest Devotion to God; the most facred Regard to his holy Word, and a conscientious Attention to all his various Duties as a Pastor, a Son, a Brother, and a Friend.

With strong natural Powers and much acquired Learning, he was yet modest, humble, and diffident; lowly in his own Eyes, and making much of those who seared the Lord. He was particularly solicitous for the spiritual Improvement of the Patients in the Northampton Insirmary, and frequently visited them, when his declining Health would permit him.

In the Cause of Truth he was firm and zealous; he was justly offended at the Treatment which his Writings received, particularly from the Critical Reviewers; perhaps Languor and Pain might contribute their Share, and render him more quickly irritable, and he warmly expressed the Indignation which he selt: he prepared to attack them with Sarcasm and Ridicule; but most probably he was handling Weapons in which he could not excel, and might only have exposed himself and his Writings to his unknown Antagonists, who might have been more than equal to him at such a Contest; but happily the Calm of Restlection interposed, the earnest Entreaties of his Friends prevailed, and the Design was relinquished.

them

Another Work, of a different Kind, in which he was engaged, was rebuilding the Parsonage at Weston, on a neat and proper Size, suitable to the Living. The Person he employed disappointed, if he did not deceive him; and it seemed as if he must have Recourse to the disagreeable Expedient of a Law-suit, to settle the Affair: but one builds and another inhabits; before Mr. Hervey occupied his new House he was removed to his House not made with Hands. The rebuilding the Parsonage cost him sour hundred Pounds, besides the old Materials. This Sum he was enabled to supply by letting out some of his Land for the Cultivation of Woad, which always produces an extraordinary Rent for a Time.

Mr. Hervey was both exceeding liberal and judicious in the Distribution of Relief to the Poor, the Aged, and the Sick: giving them Clothes and proper Food rather than Money; yet this was never withheld when the necessity of the Case required it; as to a prudent Housekeeper, reduced by Sickness or Misfortune, to whom he would give several Guineas at a Time.

He often would procure the Advice of Physicians, and Medicine from Apothecaries, for the Benefit of the sick Poor: this was a favourite Method with him of doing good, and often his kind Attention to the Sickness of the Body prepared the Way to relieve the greater Maladies of the Soul. He also gave away great Numbers of small religious Books, but particularly Bibles.

Mr. Hervey was extremely temperate and frugal in his Diet; plain in his Dress, if not inattentive to his Person. A suitable Appearance has its Use. The Young, the Thoughtless, and the Stranger, may not know the real Worth of the Man; or reslect that he may easily become inattentive to Dress, while the Mind is intensely engaged in the Pursuit of Knowledge or the Exercises of Devotion; or while the Body is languishing under Infirmity and Sickness.

Mr. Hervey for many Years had struggled with much Weakness and Languor, was frequently confined by severe Fits of Sickness: but in the latter End of the Year 1758, he grew worse. On the first Sunday in December, after Family Prayer in the Evening, he was seized so extremely ill that his Dissolution was apprehended to be very near: with great Difficulty he was got up Stairs, and after that never left his Room. The Cramp returned with Violence. He was grievously afflicted with a hectic Cough in the Night, that obliged him to rife very early. He was fentible of his Danger, yet was willing to use proper Means to mitigate the Pain and to prolong Life. On the 15th of December, he complained of a Pain in his Side, for which, at his own Desire, he was blooded, but the Surgeon, perceiving his Weakness and Danger, took but a finall Quantity of Blood. Mr. Maddock, his Curate, was much with him, to whom he pathetically spoke of his Assurance of Faith and of the great Love of God in Christ. " How much," fays he, " has Christ done for " me, and how little have I done for fo loving " a Saviour! If I preached even once a Week, it " was at last a Burden to me. I have not visited " the People of my Parish as I ought to have " done; and thus have preached from House to " House. I have not taken every Opportunity " of speaking for Christ."

These Expressions were accompanied with Tears: "but," says he, "do not think that I am "afraid to die, I assure you I am not. I know "what my Saviour hath done for me, and I want to be gone. But I wonder and lament to think "of the Love of Christ in doing so much for me, and how little I have done for Him." And in another Conversation, calmly speaking of his approaching Dissolution, and our Ignorance of the facred Word, he observed, "How many pre-"cious Texts are there big with the richest

"Truths of Christ, which we cannot compre" hend, of which we know nothing; and of " those we do know, how few do we remember.

" A good Textuary is a good Divine: that is the " Armour; the Word of God is the Sword.

" They are the Weapons I must use when that

" fubtle Spirit the arch Adversary of Mankind

"comes to tempt and fift me in my last Conslict.

" Surely I had need be well provided with these " Weapons: I had need have my Quiver full of " them, to answer Satan with Texts out of the " Word of God when he affaults me."

On the 19th the Pains of his Body abated, but he grew drowfy and lethargick: and in the Night his Diffolution was expected.

The next Day he was visited by his worthy Friend Dr. Stonhouse, who declared his Opinion that Mr. Hervey could not survive above two or three Days: and speaking of the Consolations which a good Man enjoys in the Prospect of Death, Mr. Hervey replied, "True, Doctor, true: the "only valuable Treasures are in Heaven. What "would it avail me now to be Archbishop of "Can erbury? Disease would shew no Respect to "my Mitre. That Prelate (Dr. Secker) is not "only very great, but I am told he has Religion

" really at Heart: yet it is Godliness and not Grandeur that will avail him hereafter. The "Gospel is offered to me, a poor Country Parson, the same as to his Grace. Christ makes no Difference between us. Oh! why then do Ministers thus neglect the Charge of so kind a Saviour, fawn upon the Great, and hunt after worldly Preferments with fo much Eagerness, to the Difgrace of our Orders: These, these are the Things, Doctor, and not our Poverty or Obscurity, which render the Clergy so justly contemptible to the Worldlings. No Wonder " the Service of our Church, grieved I am to so fay it, is become such a formal lifeless Thing, 66 fince it is alas too generally executed by Perfons dead to Godliness in all their Conversation. whose Indifference to Religion, and worldly-66 minded Behaviour, proclaims the little Regard " they pay to the Doctrines of the Lord who

When the Doctor was going away, Mr. Hervey reminded him of a dangerous Fall from his Horse which he had met with not long before, by which he had been much bruifed, and observing that he looked pale, he hoped he would think on fuch narrow Escapes, so often fatal to others, as a Warning to him from God, and remember them as fuch, adding, "How careful ought we to be 66 to improve these Years which remain, at a "Time of Life when but few can remain to us." At that Time both were turned of forty.

" bought them."

The Day before his Death, Mr. Hervey attempting to walk a few Steps in his Room, his Strength failing him, he must have fallen if not supported, a fainting Fit ensued, and it was some Time before he recovered. When he came to himself, his Brother William, who was come from London to see him, said, "We were asraid you were gone." He answered, "I wish I had."

On the 25th, his Curate paying him his Morning Visit, Mr. Hervey, sitting in an easy Chair, for he was unable to lie in Bed, said, "Sir, I cannot talk with you to-day." He complained much of a great inward Conflict which he had, and laying his Hand on his Breast, said, "Oh you know not how great a Conflict I have." During this Time his Eyes were almost constantly elevated to Heaven, and his Hands clasped in Prayer, he frequently said, "When this great "Conflict is over, then"—but added no more.

Dr. Stonbouse came to him about three Hours before he expired; to whom he strongly urged the Importance of his everlasting Concerns, as here is no abiding Place; and entreated him not to be overcharged with the Cares of this Life; but in the Multiplicity of his Eusiness to attend to the one Thing needful:

- "Which done, the poorest can no Wants endure,
- " And which not done, the richest must be poor."

The Doctor observing the Difficulty with which he spoke, from the Phlegm which oppressed him, and finding by his languid Pulse that his Dissolution was near, defired that he would spare himself. " No, Doctor, no," was his Reply, "you tell " me that I have but a few Moments to live: " Oh let me spend them in adoring our great "Redeemer." He then faid, "Though my " Heart and my Flesh fail me, yet God is the "Strength of my Heart and my Portion for ever." He expatiated also on those Words, All Things are your's, Life and Death, for ye are Christ's. "Here," fays he, " is the Treasure of a Christian. Death " is reckoned among this Inventory, and a noble "Treasure it is. How thankful am I for Death, " as it is the Passage through which I pass to the " Lord and Giver of eternal Life; and as it frees " me from all this Mifery you now fee me en-" dure, and which I am willing to endure, as long as God thinks fit; for I know He will in " his own good Time, difmifs me from the Body. "These light Afflictions are but for a Moment: " and then comes an eternal Weight of Glory.-" Oh welcome, welcome Death,-Thou mayst " well be reckoned among the Treasures of the " Christian. To live is Christ, but to die is " Gain."

When the Doctor was taking his final Leave, Mr. Hervey expressed great Gratitude for his Visits, though Medicine had been unable to relieve him. He then paused a little, and with great Compofure, although the Pangs of Death were upon him, faid, Lord, now lettest thou thy Servant depart in Peace, according to thy most holy and comfortable Word, for mine Eyes have seen thy precious Salvation. "Here, Doctor, is my Cordial: what " are all the Cordials given to support the dying, in Comparison of that which arises from the " Promises of Salvation by Christ? This, this " fupports me." About three o'Clock he faid, " The great Conflict is over. Now all is done." After which he scarce spoke any Words intelligibly, except now and then, precious Salvation. During the last Hour he said nothing, but leaned his Head against the Side of an easy Chair, and, without the least Struggle, expired between four and five o'Clock in the Afternoon on Christmas-Day, 1758, in the forty-fifth Year of his Age, on that Day when he had so often displayed the Mercy and Dignity of his Redeemer.

He was interred three Days afterwards, under the Middle of the Communion Table, in the Chancel of Weston Favell. His Funeral was exceeding plain, according to his particular Request, but numerously attended by his pious and affectionate Relations; by a grateful and forrowful of the Rev. James Hervey, A.M. XXV

Congregation, deeply lamenting the Loss they had sustained. This was the only Monument which he desired; and, indeed, for many Years, there was no Memorial of the Place of his Sepulture, until his excellent and only surviving Sister caused the following to be inscribed on the Place where his Body was deposited:

Here lie the Remains of the Rev. James Hervey, A.M.
(late Rector of this Parish)
That very pious Man,
And much-admired Author,
Who died Dec. 25th, 1758,
In the 45th Year of his Age.

Reader, expect no more to make him known, Vain the fond Elegy and figur'd Stone; A Name more lasting shall his Writings give; There view display'd his heav'nly Soul, and live.

The Mind finds a melancholy but pleafing Satisfaction, in contemplating the latter End of the righteous: the Death-Bed of the good Man is a privileged Spot; we dwell with Attention on his last Moments, and are pleased with every new Proof of the Sincerity of his Devotion, and the Confidence of his Hopes.

As a Clergyman, Mr. Hervey performed all the Duties of his Station in the best and strictest Manner.

xxvi Memoirs of the Life and Writings

Manner. Not content with the public Duty on a Sunday, he established a Lecture on Wednesday Evening, except during Hay-time and Harvest: the Expence of lighting the Church during the Winter Months he paid out of his own Pocket, that he might not put the Parish to any Expence; but, for some Time before his Death, he was unable to make the usual Change with his Curate at Collingtree, to visit his Parishioners from House to House, or to continue his Weekly Lecture. Perhaps this might give him too much Concern; but it is a difficult Task, with the Desire of being useful, quietly to submit to be laid aside.

He preached on Sundays to numerous and very attentive Congregations; many of whom came from very distant Parts. His voice was clear and harmonious, though not strong; and he was a very excellent Reader as well as Preacher. He always preached without Notes, or those very fhort ones, except on fome particular Occasions. When his Strength would permit him, he generally preached about an Hour; and his Discourses were judicious, clear, and free from any vain Repetitions. In his public Addresses, he studied Simplicity and Plainness: he did not wish to captivate by the Elegance of his Language, or the Display of the Variety and Extent of his Learning, but to inform the most ignorant, to interest the careless, and to do good to all.

of the Rev. JAMES HERVEY, A.M. XXVII

In catechizing the Children, he was affectionate, familiar, and engaging; leading them by short and pertinent Questions to think for themselves, and to understand what they said. Observing fome of his Parishioners indolent on a Sunday Morning, or engaged in fecular Concerns, he thus catechifed the Children on the fourth Commandment: "Do they keep holy the Sabbath-Day " who lie in Bed till eight or nine o'Clock in the " Morning, instead of rising to say their Prayers, " and read the Bible?" " No, Sir."-" Do those " keep the Sabbath who fodder their Cattle when " other People are going to Church?" " No. " Sir."—" Does God Almighty bless such People " who go to Alehouses, and do not mind the In-" struction of their Minister?" " No, Sir."-" Don't those who love God read the Bible in " their Families, particularly on Sunday Evenings, " and have every Day Family Prayers, Morning " and Evening, in their Houses?" "Yes, Sir." In this eafy and fimple Manner did he lead the young Mind, and guard them against the Conduct of Parentsor Masters who ought to have set them a better Example.

Mr. Hervey's deep Humility was a conftant Protection to him: he was always watchful over himself, and was never known to be in a Passion. When he was unjustly aspersed, he would say; "Our Enemies are sometimes our best Friends, xxviii Memoirs of the Life and Writings

- " and tell us Truths; and then we should amend
- " our Faults, and be thankful for fuch Informa- "tion: and if what they say be not true, and
- " only spoke through Malice, then such Persons - " are to be confidered as diseased in Mind, and
- " that he would pray for them. They are to be
- " pitied; and I might as justly be angry with a - " Man who is difeafed in Body."

His Gratitude to God and Man was very great and uniform: the least Acts of Kindness called forth the most lively Expressions of Thankfulness from him.

Although he had collected much Knowledge, and was able to shine with Scholars, yet he often submitted his Writings to be corrected by those who were far inferior to himself; and he was never better pleased than when several Alterations were made. His Industry and Application will appear the more extraordinary, when it is considered, that in the latter Years of his short Life he was seldom free from Languor and Pain; his Constitution being very delicate, and suffering from every Cold and Exertion. In these States he exhibited the useful Example of Meekness and Resignation, patiently submitting himself to the divine Disposal.

His numerous Writings, and the Success which they met with, formed a Source of Charity which was entirely appropriated to the poor and needy: of the Rev. JAMES HERVEY, A.M. XXIX and yet this was not equal to the Extent of his Benevolence. He was literally his own Executor; and, at the last, desired, if there was any Money remaining, it might be distributed in warm Clothing to the Poor at that inclement Season.

Mr. Hervey was never married, although he highly approved of that Estate; and often said, that he should certainly have married, but from his continued ill Health and Infirmity.

He was fond of the Exercise of riding on Horseback, as favourable to Meditation and Health, which he partook when the Weather and his Strength would permit him.

With every Part of Learning, either ornamental or useful, he was well acquainted. He made no small Proficiency in Hebrew, Greek, and Latin; and, indeed, composed with Ease in the last: but all his Attainments were devoted to the Service of Religion; and he regarded no Book, and no Subject, but as it might advance the great Object which he had constantly in view.

With his Genius and Variety of Powers, he might easily have shone as a Poet; but he had no Ambition of this Kind: some few Poems, which he wrote when young, he was careful to destroy. Most of his Works, particularly the Meditations and the Dialogues, would easily assume a poetical Form: the former of them have been turned into Blank Verse, by Mr. Newsemb of Hackney, after the Manner of Young's Night Thoughts. Mr. Hervey faw Part of this Versification, and it met with his warmest Approbation. (Vol. V. p. 388.)

In the recommending of Books, and the Characters which Mr. Hervey gave of them, you may fometimes discover, that the Benevolence of his Temper warped his critical Judgment; and being well pleased himself, he has, at Times, rather been profuse in his Praises.

His Family-Worship was regular and exemplary: he made the Servants read a Portion of the Scripture, on which he occasionally made short, pertinent, and useful Remarks, which he expected they should recollect when he questioned them again: this was followed by earnest and humble Prayer. In the Character of Camillus (Vol. IV. p. 274, 275) he has drawn the Picture of his own Family-Worship; and had Mr. Hervey been a Father, there can be no Doubt but he would have proved such an exemplary Parent as he has described Camillus to be.

Some Observations may naturally be expected concerning his numerous posthumous Letters, and especially the Eleven to Mr. John Wesley, which have caused so much Conversation. In the eager Desire to publish all the literary Remains of a great or good Man, there is often displayed more warm and indiscreet Friendship than cool and accurate Judgment, and a strict Regard to what he himself would have done. The easy Confidence of free and familiar Intercourse is too often violated; and Secrets are betrayed, or unfavourable Conjectures indulged, which can gratify no useful Purpose. No Man is equally wise; and although exemplary in his Conduct, he does not wish to appear before the Public in every little Note which he has written, or in every Opinion which he may advance. As a confidential Conversation is not to be divulged, so the epistolary Intercourse of Friends in general should be equally referved. What is not originally intended for the Public, is feldom fit to appear before them. This was clearly Mr. Hervey's own Opinion and Conduct. (Vol. V. p. 436.) These Remarks may be faid scarce to apply to the Eleven Letters to Mr. Wesley, which were certainly written by Mr. Hervey, and intended for the Press. Had his Life been spared, it is well known that he intended to have foftened the Asperity of some Expressions; and, I believe, there is not a Doubt but that fome Friends, more zealous than judicious, added to this Acrimony, and were glad to attack their Opponent with Severity, under the Shelter of fo exemplary a Man, and so distinguished a Writer: on this Account I conceive that those Letters must be read with some Grain of Allowance; and if they contain his Sentiments, they do not altogether breathe his Spirit: fome Indulgence must xxxii Memoirs of the Life and Writings, &c.

be made for a fuffering and languid Mind, irritated by Controversy; and some Censure may deservedly be past on the Considence of Friendship abused, and the Sanction of his extensive Reputation given to the Severity, which was not his own.

Few Characters in antient or modern Times have combined more Excellencies, or displayed more Virtues, than Mr. J. Hervey, whether we consider his Sincerity as a Friend, his Zeal as a Divine, his Knowledge as a Scholar, his Mildness and Patience, his Charity and Love, as a Man and a Christian.

THE KNOWLEDGE OF SALVATION PRECIOUS IN THE HOUR OF DEATH;

PROVED IN A

SERMON

PREACHED JANUARY 4, 1759,

UPON THE

D E A T H

OF THE

REV. MR. JAMES HERVEY,

By W. ROMAINE, M.A.

LECTURER OF ST. DUNSTAN'S IN THE WEST, LONDON,

Righteousness delivereth from Death. Prov. x. 2.

SERMON

0 N

MR. HERVEY'S DEATH.

Luke ii. 29, 30.

LORD, now lettest thou thy Servant depart in Peace, according to thy Word: for mine Eyes have seen thy Salvation.

CCORDING to the ancient Prophecies, in the Fulness of Time, God sent forth his Son. He came to his own, when there was a general Expectation of his Birth. Many just and devout Persons in Ferusalem were then looking out for the Redeemer's coming in the Flesh; and among them good old Simeon, and Anna a Prophetess, are particularly mentioned. St. Luke says, There was a Man in Jerusalem, whose Name was Simeon, and the same Man was just, a justified Person, and devout, fearing to offend GOD, as the Greek Word fignifies, waiting for the Consolation of Israel; he was waiting for the Incarnation of the divine Comforter, by whose Birth all the Promises of Comfort were to be ratified and fulfilled, and the Ifrael of God was to receive everlafting Confolation. The Lord was pleafed to vouchsafe a particular Revelation of his Will in this Matter to Simeon: For the Holy Spirit was upon him, and it was revealed unto him by the Holy Spirit, that he should not see Death before he had seen the Lord's Christ incarnate. And he came by Direction of the Spirit into the Temple; and when the Parents brought in the holy Child Fefus, to do for him after the Custom of the Law, then took he him up in his Arms, and bleffed God that he had lived to this happy Hour, when he could take up the Prophet's Words, and fay, Lo this is our God, we have waited for him, and he will fave us; this is the Lord, we have waited for him; we will be glad and rejoice in his Salvation. Simeon waited to fee God incarnate; and having feen him, he wanted to live no longer. He defired his Difmission. All the Ends of living were answered; and therefore he put up this sweet Prayer;— Lord, now lettest thou thy Servant depart in Peace, according to thy Word: for mine Eyes have seen thy Salvation.

With these same Words one of our dear Brethren, now with the Lord, finished his Course. They were the dying Words of the Rev. Mr. James Hervey. He had long defired to depart, and to be with Christ, which he knew was far better than to abide in the Flesh; but he waited patiently for the Lord's Time; and when it was come, he thus expressed the Thankfulness of his Heart, Lord, now lettest thou thy Servant depart in Peace, according to thy most holy and comfortable Word: for mine Eyes have seen thy precious Salvation. The Lord heard him, and gave him a gentle Dismission. He died, as he had lived, in a perfectly even and calm Composure of Mind. Death shewed that he came to him as a friendly Messenger to call him to Glory, for he chearfully obeyed the Summons. There was no Fear, no Struggle, not a Sigh or Groan, but he departed in Peace, and in full Affurance of Faith. Oh that you and I, my Brethren, may fo live by the Faith of the Son of God, that when we come to die, we may be able able to use this same Prayer, and may receive of the Lord a like gracious Answer.

These sweet dying Words of our dear Brother have made a great Impression upon several of his Acquaintance: for they have been led to consider them more closely than perhaps they ever did before, and several have meditated upon them with great Comfort. In order that others might do the same, and that his happy Death might be the Means of stirring up many to seek to die the Death of the Righteous, and that their latter End might be like his, I have determined to speak upon the Words this Day. May the same Spirit by which Simeon spake them be in all your Hearts! may he teach you their true and full Meaning, and in God's due Time may he give you the comfortable Experience of them! Under his Guidance let us consider,

First, That when Simeon had seen the Salvation of God, he was prepared to depart:

Secondly, He therefore defired it, and prayed for it; and,

Thirdly, He expected he should depart in Peace according to God's Word, which was fulfilled to him. And, under each of these Particulars, I shall speak of the Experience of our deceased Brother.

First, Simeon had it revealed to him by the Holy Spirit, that he should not die until he had seen the Lord's Christ; and when Jesus was brought into the Temple, he was directed to go and receive him for the promised Messiah; and taking him up in his Arms, he blessed God, and said, Lord, now lettest thou thy Servant depart in Peace, according to thy Word: for mine Eyes have seen thy Salvation. It is evident he spoke these Words in their primary Sense, of his seeing JESUS with the Eyes of his Body; but this could have been no great Cause of Joy to him, unless he had before seen Christ some other Way; for Multitudes saw him with their bodily Eyes, while he was upon Earth, who were no better for the Sight; and Multitudes will hereafter fee him in his glorified Body, but it will be to their everlafting Confusion. There is another Kind of Sight to which our Church referred you this Afternoon, when each of you took up these Words and said, For mine Eyes have seen thy Salvation. If you knew what you faid, and spoke the Truth as you had experienced it, you meant that you had feen the Salvation of God with the Eye of Faith; according to what is faid of Moles, That by Faith he saw him who is invisible. (Heb. xi. 27.) He faw him by the Eyes of his Soul, who was invisible to the Eyes of his Body: for the Soul has its Eyes as well as the Body: but Sin darkened them; it put them into the State in which the Eyes of the Body are when they have no Light: then they can see nothing. So the Soul is faid, in Scripture, to be in Darkness and Blindness until the Eyes of the Understanding be enlightened. They cannot fee any spiritual Objects until the Sun of Righteousness shine upon them; nor, when he does shine, can they see any Loveliness in those Objects, until they be able to act Faith upon them; for the Eye of Faith not only beholds the Object, but also distinguishes its own Interest in it. Faith keeps all the Senses of the Soul in Act and Exercise upon the proper Object, which each apprehends; here the Eye of Faith is fixed upon Salvation, not only viewing it as a Bleffing belonging to others, but also appropriating it to itself. Mine Eyes have feen thy Salvation: here Simeon, speaking of our Saviour, calls him Salvation, because all Salvation is in and from him. He is the Author, and he is the Finisher of it. The great Plan of it was laid by the co-equal and co-eternal Persons of the ever-blessed Trinity, before the Foundation of the World; it was carried carried into Execution by our divine Saviour in the Fulness of Time; and he is an eternal Salvation, an eternal Deliverance from all Evil, and an eternal Poffession of all Good. Upon the Entrance of Sin into the World, this great Salvation of our God was revealed, and by Faith Believers under the Old-Testament Dispensation enjoyed the Benefits of it. At the appointed Time Jebovah took a Body of Flesh, and our divine Immanuel stood up to save his People from their Sins. He undertook to fatisfy all the Demands of Law and Justice. The Law he satisfied, by paying it a perfect unsinning Obedience; which being a divine, as well as a human Obedience, did therefore magnify the Law, and make it more honourable, than if all the Creatures in Heaven and Earth had never offended against it. Justice he fatisfied, by enduring the threatened Punishment; and after his Sufferings and Death, Justice had no more Demands upon him; for he came out of the Prison of the Grave with a full Discharge. This Satisfaction, made to Law and Justice by the Obedience and Sufferings of the Lord Jesus, is what the Scripture calls the Righteousness of God, because it is a divine and infinitely-perfect Righteousness, a divine Righteousness wrought out by Jehovah himself, and as infinitely perfect a Righteousness as Jehovah could make it. In this all-glorious Righteousness of the God-man, Christ Jesus, confifts the Sinner's Salvation: for he is accepted and justified by it; the Fruits of this Righteousness are his Sanctification, and the Robe of this Righteousness is his Glorification. So that Salvation in Time and in Eternity depends upon the Righteoufness of the incarnate This is the fundamental Doctrine of the Chriftian Religion, for which our dear Brother was a noble Champion. He faw, he experienced the Importance of it, and therefore in his Conversation and in his Preaching it was his favourite Topic. How fweetly, how profitably CA profitably have I heard him dwell upon it! and how excellently has he defended it in his Writings? Read his Theron and Aspasso; and when you are thoroughly convinced that Christ is the End of the Law for Righteousness to every one who believeth, and can fay with Faith, In the Lord have I Righteousness and Salvation, then your Mind will be fettled in Peace and Comfort, and you will be delivered from those dangerous Errors which are now propagated concerning the Righteousness of the Lord Jesus. Thank God for the masterly Defence of it in these Dialogues *. In them Mr. Hervey being dead, yet speaketh the Praises of his adorable Redeemer, and 'clearly proves that we have our Salvation through his Righteousness. Immanuel the Saviour is the Justifier, as he says himself, Is. xlv. 21, 22. There is no God elje beside me, a God that gives Rightcousness, and a Saviour, there is none beside me. Look unto me and be ye saved, all she Ends of the Earth; for I am God, and there is none

* About a Week before Mr. Hervey was taken ill, I mentioned to him a Report that was spread about, concerning Mr. Sandeman's Letters en Theren and Aspasso, to this Effect: That he (Mr. Hervey) had written a Letter to Mrs. Cooke, and therein had faid, that Mr. Sandeman was in the Right, and had convinced him of his Error; or Words to that Purpole. To which he answered, That he had written a Letter to Mrs. Cooke, and therein he had acknowledged, that many of Mr. Sandeman's Remarks were judicious, and that he had corrected fome of his Expressions and Inaccuracies. But he faid, that he was very far from having changed his Opinion as to the Substance and Matter of the Argument; for therein he thought Mr. Sandeman was entirely wrong. Whereupon I defired he would infert an Advertifement in some of the London Papers, signed by himself, to set this Mistake right, lest it might hinder the Sale and Reading of his Books, and thereby prevent much Good. To which he agreed; and added, that he would let that Paragraph stand in his Answer to Mr. Wesley, relating to Mr. Sandeman, only foftening the Expression a little: But all this was prevented by his Illness and Death. The Truth of this I am ready to attest.

ABRAHAM MADDOCK, Curate of Weston-Favell. elje. How could they be faved by looking unto Christ? Certainly not by a Look of their bodily Eyes, Simeon's Toy did not arise from having Christ in his Arms, and looking upon him; but from being able to look upon him by an Act of Faith. He knew him to be bis Saviour. Thence arose his Joy, and from thence must your's arife. It is the Look of Faith which faves; the Eve of Faith kept in Exercise upon its proper Object, even upon Jesus, the Author and Finisher of Faith. It is this Act of Faith which our Lord requires:—Look unto me, with this Promise annexed, and be ye faved. There is Salvation in the Look of Faith: for it fees and receives Jesus, as he is offered in Scripture, for a free, full, and complete Saviour. And whoever keeps the Eye of Faith in constant Exercise, is prepared, with good old Simeon, to depart in Peace: because, by having an Interest and Property in the Salvation of our God, he is thereby delivered from every Thing that can make Death dreadful, and is in Possession of every Thing that can make Death defirable.

What is it that makes Death dreadful? Is it not Guilt in the Conscience, accusing the Sinner for the Breach of the holy Law, and alarming him with Fear of the threatened Punishment, which the Justice, and Holiness, and Truth of God, are concerned to see inflicted, in Time and in Eternity? Thus we read, The Sting of Death is Sin, and the Strength of Sin is the Law. Death has Power to sting, so long as the broken Law gives Sin a Right to accuse and condemn: all unpardoned Sinners therefore are afraid of Death. From this State of Fear and Bondage our Lord came to fave his People; He came to deliver them, who through Fear of Death were all their Life-time subject to Bondage; and he does deliver them, when their Sins are forgiven, and his Righteoufness is imputed to them: for then the broken Law cannot condemn, nor Justice punish, there being no Condemnation demnation to them that are in Christ Jesus. Upon which Death loses its Sting; and when the pardoned Sinner looks upon it, he sees nothing terrible in its Appearance, but can boldly and without Presumption say, Yea, when I walk through the Valley of the Shadow of Death, I will fear no Evil: for theu my God art with me.

And he is not only prepared to die because he is delivered from every Thing that could make Death dreadful, but also because he is in the Possession of every Thing that can make Death defirable. He knows he has an Interest in Christ, and Christ is the Possessor of Heaven and Earth. He has all Things in his Hands, and has promifed to make them all work together for the Good of his redeemed People: fo that whoever has Christ has all Things. All Things, says the Apostle, are yours, whether Life or Death, or Things present or Things to come, all are yours. And the Reason follows, and we are Christ's, and Christ is God's. As all that Christ has is yours, and all that God has is Christ's, confequently all is yours. And Death by Name is yours: no longer a Curse and a Punishment, but turned into a real Bleffing; for it is the Gate and Entrance through which you pass into endless Life and never-fading Glory.

Thus he is prepared to depart, who has feen with the Eye of Faith the Salvation of God. The doctrine is clear from Scripture; but how is it, my Brethren, in your Experience? Are you prepared to depart? and on what do ye build your Preparation? on the Lord Jefus, or on what? Search and fee; for nothing can comfort you in the Hour of Death, but having received him into your Hearts by Faith and Love. You must fee his Salvation, and be able to keep the Eye of Faith intent upon it, before you can be prepared to depart; but when this is your happy Case, then in whatever Shape Death comes, you will be able to say with our dear Brother, Brother, Lord, now lettest thou thy Servant depart in Peace, according to thy Word: for mine Eyes have feen thy Salvation. He might well fay, Mine Eyes have feen thy Salvation: for all that came near him were convinced that he had feen it. The Effects shewed it. He had put off the old Man, and had put on the new: and was under the Influence of divine Love to his adorable Saviour. The Love of Jefus ruled in his Heart: and was therefore constantly uppermost in his Mouth. He loved to be telling of his Salvation all the Day long. And he did not talk like a Professor full of mere Head-Knowledge; but what he spake had a Warmth, and Life, and Power in it, which shewed that it came from his Heart. He was perfectly inflamed with the Love of his divine Lord and Mafter; and if you fat any Time in his Company, you could not help catching some of the holy Flame. So that if Strangers to his Person may doubt of his Experience of a Saviour's Love, we who have converfed with him cannot. We are fure from what we faw and heard, that he had feen the Salvation of God, and therefore was prepared to depart. He knew in whom he had believed, and was certain the Power and the Love of the dear Immanuel were in his Interest: so that neither Death, nor he that had the Power of Death, could hurt him.

A Friend of mine was much with him on the 15th of December, and the Discourse turned upon what Christ had done for his Soul. Mr. Hervey spake strongly and earnestly of the Assurance of his Faith, and of the great Love of God in Christ to him. He declared, that the Fear of Death was taken from him; and it asterwards appeared, that Death had no Sting to hurt; nor the Grave any Power to get Victory over him: for when Death came, it found his Mind in perfect Peace. He had no uneasy Apprehensions of dying, but had Hopes full of Glory and Immortality. Doubtless then he had feen the Salvation of God. The Knowledge of Salvation had been precious to him in Life, and therefore he experienced the Preciousness of it in Death: for then he could give Thanks to God for giving him the Victory through Jesus Christ his Lord. Happy are they to whom God has given the Knowledge of their Salvation; they believe on good Grounds, that their Saviour has brought them into a State of Salvation; and therefore they are prepared to meet Death, yea they can desire and pray for it, as Simeon did; which is the second Particular I was to consider.

Simeon knowing that he was prepared, therefore defired to depart. And this is the Believer's Case. He longs for Death, not out of an imparient discontented Temper, but out of a real holy Affection. When worldly Men are oppressed with Troubles on all Sides. and see no Way to escape, they are apt to desire Death, that it may bring their Misery to an End, and put them out of their Pain. And there are some most miserable and abject Cowards, who murder themselves to get rid of the Troubles of Life. These Men court Death as a less Evil, but the Believer desires it as a real Blessing. He knows that his Death will be to the Glory of his Saviour; for it grieves him to the Heart that he should ever do any Thing displeasing to such a kind Benefactor. After receiving so many Tokens of Christ's Love, Oh it is indeed afflicting to give him the least Offence. I appeal to yourselves. You that have the Love of Jesus in your Hearts, are not you forry that you love him fo little? Have not you Reason daily to mourn for your Ingratitude to him? and what will fuch Thoughts fuggest, but a Defire to be where the very Occasion of Offence will be removed? It was on this Account that Mr. Hervey defired Death: for the last Morning of his Life, when his Brother came to enquire after his Welfare, he faid, "I have been thinking of my great Ingratitude gratitude to my God." And these Thoughts made him wish to be delivered from the Bondage of Corruption, into the glorious Liberty of the Children of God.

And he defired it as Simeon did, and all Believers do. upon another Motive, namely, because the Lord will get himself Honour, by the Honour which he will give to his People in his Kingdom. He will be glorified, favs the Apostle, in bis Saints; he will get himself Glory by the great Glory which he will bestow upon them. And as the Believer has, in all Things, an Eye to God's Glory, fo has he especially in his Desires to be dissolved and to be with Chrift. He knows that God is glorified in him, and by him at prefent; but then it is imperfectly, and that grieves him. Self, or the Creature, will be trying to share the Heart with God, and thereby to rob him of his Glory. A bare Thought of this, when only rifing in the Mind, hurts the Believer. He would have every Thought brought into Subjection to Christ; and that makes him defire to be where Temptation and Sin shall be no more, and where he shall glorify God, and God shall be glorified in him for ever and ever. With this View Mr. Hervey defired to depart. His great Love to his Saviour's Glory made him wish for Death. He longed to be diffolved, that he might be freed from the Frailties and Infirmities of this mortal Life, under which he laboured, and could not always, nor in a perfect Degree, promote the Glory of his redeeming God; therefore he defired to be with them who follow the Lamb whitherfoever he goeth, and are ever receiving Glory from him, and ever giving Glory to him. And the Lord granted his Defire; he literally answered his Prayer; for he departed in Peace, according to the Word of God, as I purposed to shew under my third Head.

What it is to be at Peace with God, and to depart with a Sense of this Peace upon our Minds, I cannot better express, than in the excellent Words of the prefent Archbishop of Canterbury, in his Nine Sermons, p. 132. "The Peace of God is that Sense of being in Friendship with him, that feeling of Comfort and Joy slowing from him, which passeth all Understanding, exceeds the Conceptions of those who have not experienced it, and will exceed hereafter the present Conceptions of those who have." And the Believer, even when he is departing this Life, has a Sense of his being in Friendship with God, and has a Feeling of Comfort and Joy slowing from him. This is promised in Scripture, and this is sulfilled to them who, being justified by Faith, have Peace with God: being reconciled to the Father through the Son of his Love, they live, and they die in Peace.

I suppose some weak in the Faith are thinking thus within themselves: "Well, is it so, that true Believers die in Peace and Joy? I am sure I could not at present; for I am dreadfully afraid of Death; and what would not I give to be delivered from these Fears? for they make my Life miserable." My Brethren, why are you in Bondage to them? God offers you Deliverance. There are many general Promises in his Word, that let what will happen to Believers, the Peace of God shall rule in their Hearts. Thus, If. xxvi. 3. Thou wilt keep him in perfest Peace, whose Mind is staid upon thee. And as it is a perfect, so it is a continual Peace. The Lord of Peace himself, says the Apostle, 2 Thess. iii. 16. give yeu Peace always by all Means; for after he has once given this Peace, he makes all Means, even the most unlikely, tend to the promoting of it; therefore Death can by no Means weaken, and much less destroy, this Peace of God. These general Promises he fulfilled to the Patriarchs: - for St. Paul fays, Heb. xi. 13. That they all died in Faith:—they acted Faith in their Death, and confequently had a fweet Senfe of the Peace of God in their Hearts when they died. David shews us the Reason of their dying in Faith, Psal. xlviii. 14. This God is our God for ever and ever, he fact he cur Guide even unto Death. They knew that their God would be with them to guide and keep them, when the Body returned to Dust, and the Spirit returned to God who gave it: and therefore David spoke for himself what each of them also could say,—When I walk through the Valley of the Shadow of Death, I will fear no Evil, because thou my God art then with me: thy Rod and thy Staff comfort me even then. Pfal. xxiii. 3. With this Faith they looked upon Death as difarmed of its Sting and Power to hurt; and therefore they laid down their Heads, and fell afleep in the Arms of Death, with as much Composure as any weary Traveller ever longed for Rest. They fell asleep. The Scripture speaks of their Death under this beautiful Image, to teach us that Death was as fweet to them as ever Sleep was to a hardlabouring Man. The Faithful fell affeep quietly and composedly. And how should it be otherwise? They had no Evil to fear; for they were at Peace with God. And what could Death do to hurt that Peace? It does indeed diffolve all other Bonds, but it strengthens this. It is the happy Instrument of fastening the Bond of Peace with a Tie which never, never can be dissolved. And when the Faithful look upon Death in this Light, what is there in it but Joy and Peace, even a Joy unspeakable, and a Peace that furpaffeth all Understanding?

Perhaps fome of you think this is not always the Case; because there are very good Men who have had strong Conflicts and Struggles before Death. Nay, my Brethren, think not so wickedly of God. Is it according to his Word that the Faithful shall depart in Peace, and do they not? What! can the Word of God be broken? No; it shall stand fast for ever and ever. And in the Case which you state, it does not follow that this

T

Peace is weakened or destroyed, because it is tempted: by no Means. The Sense of this Peace may remain when it is most furiously attacked; for it is the Peace of God. God gave it, and God keeps it; and he may fuffer the Devil to tempt, but not to destroy it. The more it is tempted, the more Honour redounds to God for preferving it in the fiery Trial. It was more to God's Glory to preferve his Children in the fiery Furnace, than to have kept them out of it. Doubtless he that has the Power of Death, will make his last Efforts, and try to shake the Faith of a dying Believer. The Devil will then fet upon him with all his Fury. But though he be a roaring Lion, yet he is chained; and the Almighty Saviour fo over-rules his Malice and Rage, that he makes them work together for his Glory and his People's Good; as he did remarkably in the last Efforts which the Enemy made against our dear Brother. He faw him in great Weakness of Body, and then made a furious Onset against his Faith; but the dear Immanuel was with him, and would not give him over into the Enemy's Hands. His Faith was tried, and it came like Gold out of the Fire. He knew that it would be tried, and had therefore prepared himself for the fiery Trial. Speaking of it to a faithful Minister of Christ, who was often with him in his last Sickness, he said,-" How many precious Texts are there, big with the rich Truths of Christ, which we do not comprehend, which we know nothing of; and of those which we do know, how few do we remember? Bonus Tentuarius est bonus Theologus, and that is the Armour. The Word of God is the Sword; these Texts are the Weapons, which I must use when that subtle Spirit, that arch Adversary of Mankind, comes to tempt and sift me in my last Conflict. Surely I had need be well provided with these Weapons, I had need have my Quiver full of them, to answer Satan with Texts out of the Word of God

me

God when he affaults me." Satan did affault him, but found him prepared and armed. Mr. Hervey faid to his Friends the Day that he died, "Oh you know not how great a Conflict I have." And after he had fat for fome Time with his Eyes constantly lift up towards Heaven, and his Hands clasped together in a praying Form, he faid, "Now this great Conflict is over." Jesus made him Conqueror over all the Powers of Darkness; having endeavoured to rob him of his Peace; but in vain, they left him in the Saviour's Arms, never more to be tempted; and he watched over him with the tenderest Love, until he took him Home. And when he went, he indeed departed in Peace. His Body feemed to be ready as well as his Soul. When Death came, he had not one Struggle with it. There was not a fingle Groan or Sigh, or any Thing that could shew the least unwillinguess to depart. He had such a gentle Dismission as he had prayed for in Simeon's Words. He departed in Peace, and fell afleep.

I have now finished what I had to offer upon the three Particulars mentioned in my Text; and it appears, that when a Sinner is convinced of his Want of a Saviour, and is convinced that Jefus is fuch a Saviour as he wants, able and willing to fave to the uttermost, and when he is made to fee his Interest in the perfect complete Righteousness of this adorable Saviour, and is affured of it from the Word and Spirit of God, and from the Fruits of Righteousness produced in his Life and Conversation, then he is prepared to die; then he may desire it with Submission to God's Will; and whenever Death comes, he may expect to depart in Peace, according to the Word of God. These great Truths I have illustrated from Scripture and from Experience, more especially from the Experience of our dear Brother, now with the Lord, of whom I have spoken nothing more than what the Words of my Text naturally led VOL. I. d me to fay. If I were to attempt to draw the Character of this excellent Man, I would confider him in the feveral Relations in which he flood to God and Man, and would exhort you to follow him, fo far as he followed Christ. But the Compass of this Discourse will not fuffer me to enlarge. I can only just observe some particular Instances, from whence it will evidently appear that he had feen the Salvation of God. He had a clear View of it by the Eye of Faith, and was able to act Faith upon it, for his was a Faith working by Love. We love God, fays the beloved Apostle, because he first loved us; because we know by Faith that he first loved us: fo that our Love is the reflex Act of his Love to us. And Mr. Hervey had great Experience of God's Love to him, and therefore his Heart was full of Love to God: and out of the Abundance of his Heart his Mouth spake. There was such a Sweetness of Heart-Love upon his Tongue, that he used to speak of the Love of the adorable Redeemer, like one who had feen him Face to Face in the Fulness of his Glory. He would, with all the Power of Language and Dignity of Sentiment, speak for a long Time together in Praise of the everbleffed Saviour. But you might plainly fee, though every Body else was pleased, yet he was not satisfied with what he had faid. He thought he had not faid enough, and what he had faid fell far below his Lord's Merit. But still he would try again, and indeed was never weary. You could not hear him speak for any Time upon this his favourite Subject, without being convinced that he felt what he faid; and if you had any Love of God, when you went into his Company, his Conversation would inflame it. He had an Excellency, which I never faw to so great a Degree in any other Person. He never let an Opportunity flip of speaking of the Love of Chrift. He would take Occasion from the most common Incident, and yet it would not appear forced: for he had a wonderful Talent at spiritualizing and improving whatever happened about him; by which Means he hindered the Conversation from turning upon trifling Matters, and, at the same Time, kept it up with Spirit and Usefulness. Having set the Lord always before him, he saw the Love of God in every Thing, and therefore it is not to be wondered that all Objects and Events should give him Occasion to speak of it. In his last Sickness it continued still to be his favourite Theme; for whenever my Friend, who was much with him. came into the Room, he would begin to talk of the Love of Christ, and of the great Things which Christ had done for him, until his Breath failed him; and as foon as he had recovered himfelf a little, he would proceed upon the fame fweet Subject; fo that he might have truly applied to himself the Words of the Prophet. -My Mouth shall be telling of thy Righteousness and of thy Salvation all the Day long; for I know no End thereof.

This Heart-Love to God appeared evidently in every Part of his Character. As a Minister, his Faith wrought by Love to the Souls of Men in all the Offices of his Function. While his Health permitted him, he watched like a faithful Shepherd over his Flock. He used to visit them from House to House, and to speak freely to them of the State of their Souls; and when the Weakness of his Body obliged him to drop these religious Visits, he would often grieve, that he could not be more ufeful, and would speak with great Concern and Uneasiness of his not being able to preach oftener, and to do more for Christ. In the Pulpit he was fervent and earnest with his People, and would often exert himself beyond his Strength: for he preached the great Doctrines of Salvation, as one who had experienced the Power of them. It was manifest to all who heard him, that he felt what he fpake. And when we fpeak what we know, and testify what we have seen, then God d 2 bleffes bleffes this experimental Preaching. He puts a divine Power and Energy into it, and renders it effectual to awaken Sinners, to comfort them that mourn for Sin, and to edify and build up the Faithful. Mr. Hervey had many happy Proofs of the Usefulness of his preaching for each of these Purposes; and therefore he did not think it enough to preach once a Week on the Lord's-Day, but he set up a weekly Lecture at Weston-Favell, which was very well attended, and was blessed to many of his Neighbours, who will be his Glory and Crown of rejoicing in the Presence of the Lord Jesus Christ, at his coming.

He did not forget that he was a Minister in his own House; for he called his Family together twice a Day to serve God. It was his Custom in the Evening, after the Servants had read the Psalms and the Second Lesson, to explain some Part of what had been read. In this Exercise he would sometimes dwell for half an Hour; and when he met with a sweet Passage upon the Love of Christ, I have heard him speak for three Quarters of an Hour, and then he concluded with Prayer.

In the Morning, when the Family were met together, he used to ask the Servants,—" Well! where was our Text last Night?" And after they had repeated it, he made them give an Account of what had been said upon it; and then he would repeat and enforce his last Night's Discourse, concluding with Prayer.

In the Afternoon, when he was called down to Tea, he used to bring his Hebrew Bible or Greek Testament with him, and would either speak upon one Verse or upon several Verses, as Occasion offered. This was generally an improving Season. The Glory of God is very seldom promoted at the Tea-Table; but it was at Mr. Hervey's. Drinking Tea with him was like being at an Ordinance; for it was sanctified by the Word of God and Prayer.

As

As a Member of Society, his Faith wrought abundantly by Love to his Neighbour: for he was full of good Works. His Charities to the Poor were very large; and that he might be liberal to them, he was very frugal in his own Expences. He chose rather to clothe the Poor, than to give them Money. He used to get some judicious Person to buy Linen, coarse Cloth, Stockings, Shoes, &c. for them at the best Hand, alledging that the Poor could not buy so good a Commodity at the little Shops, and with Driblets of Money. I am God's Steward," says he, "for his Poor, and I must husband the little Pittance I have to bestow upon them, and make it go as far as possible." But where Money would be particularly serviceable to a Family long afflicted with Sickness, or to a prudent House-keeper who had met with great Losses in Trade, he would give five, ten, or sisteen Guineas at a Time, taking Care it should not be known from whence the Money came.

He gave away a great Number of good Books, with fuitable Instructions for their Use, and especially Bibles. In the blank Leaf he frequently wrote something striking, or else stuck in a printed Paper, relating to the Promises of God in and through Jesus Christ.

Mr. Hervey's Income was but fmall, and it may be wondered how he managed it fo well as to have fuch Sums to spare for charitable Uses; but what Money was left, after the Family Expences were paid, and all the Profits arising from the Sale of his Books, which was a very considerable Sum, he gave away in Charity. He made of it a Bank for the Poor. "And this," says he, "I have devoted to God. I will on no Account apply it to any worldly Uses. I write not for Profit or for Fame, but to serve the Cause of God; and as he has blessed my Attempt, I think myself bound to relieve the Distresses of my Fellow-Creatures with the Profit that comes from this Quarter." And he is still relieving them. He was not willing that his Charities should die with him; for he ordered all the Profit arising from the future Sale of his Books to be constantly applied to charitable Uses. Thus, having believed in God, he was careful to maintain good Works, knowing that these Things are good and profitable unto Men.

In his private Life he was under the Influence of the fame Faith, working by Love to the Will and Conimandments of God. His holy walking was very exemplary. What he faid, in Words, concerning his Interest in the Redeemer's Righteousness, he proved by his Actions; for he was very fensible of the Importance of this Scripture, He that faith he abideth in him, ought bimself also to walk, even as he walked. (I John ii. 6.) Mr. Hervey walked very close after Christ; and sound that the Belief of Christ's Righteousness being imputed to him for his Justification, was so far from being a licentious Doctrine, that it inspired him with the noblest Motives to a grateful Obedience. His holy Life was an excellent Recommendation of his Principles: for I never faw one who came up fo near to the Scripture-Character of a Christian. God had enriched him with great Gifts, and with great Graces, and had made him humble: for he was humbled by the Power of Grace. He had been a very vain proud young Man; but the Grace of God emptied him of Pride and Self, and clothed him with Humility. Having put on Christ, he had put on with him the Ornament of a meek and quiet Spirit; which appeared in his great Patience and Refignation to the Will of God. He had some very sharp Trials of his Faith and Patience, both from God and from Men, and he learned Obedience by the Things which he fuffered. It was very remarkable, that in his long Illness he was never known to fret or be uneasy; nor did the Persons about him ever hear one angry, or one hasty Word come out of his Mouth.

The fame Principle of Faith working by Love was manifest in his Studies, which he directed to the Glory of God. He was once a great Reader of the Greek and Roman Authors, and his Writings shew that he had a good Taste for classical Learning; but for some Years past he chiefly applied himself to the Study of the Sacred Scriptures. God had bleffed him with a fine Underftanding, and a great Memory, which he exercised in reading the Bible in the original Languages. He was very well skilled in the Hebrew, and was an excellent Critic in the Greek, and was a Scribe instructed unto the Kingdom of Heaven, who, like unto a Man that is an Householder, bringeth forth out of his Treasure Things new and old. He had a great Veneration for this Treasure of the Old and New Testaments. He used to talk of them in the highest Terms, next to that adorable Person of whom they treat. They were sweeter to him than Honey and the Honey-comb; and so they will be to every one who reads them, as he did, with Faith. Whoever can act Faith upon the exceeding great and precious Promises contained in the sacred Volume, will find so much Sweetness in it, that he will have but little Relish left for other Books.

As to his Writings, I leave them to speak for themselves. They stand in no Need of my Praises. They are in the Hands of the Public, and every Reader will form his own Judgment. Oh that the Spirit of the living God may direct it, that whoever reads his Writings may learn to have no Confidence in the Flesh, but to make Mention of Jehovah's Righteousness, even of his only.

The Time would fail me, if I was to enlarge upon all the Particulars of his Life and Death. That was not my Design. I only intended briefly to relate some Things, from whence a tolerable Judgment might be formed of Mr. Hervey's Character. But I cannot finish without taking Notice of the last Scene of his Life, which was very triumphant and glorious. The last and great Trial of his Faith was more precious than that of Gold which perisheth. Its Preciousness never appeared more than in the Hour of Death; for then he evidently saw by Faith, and apprehended the Salvation of God, and could rejoice in a clear View of his own Interest in it. When Dr. Stonbouse saw him for the last Time, namely, on Christmas-Day, about two Hours before he expired, Mr. Hervey pressed Home upon him his everlasting Concerns, in the most affectionate Manner; telling him that here is no abiding Place, and begging of him to attend, amidst the Multiplicity of his Business, to the one Thing needful.

The Doctor, seeing the great Difficulty and Pain with which he spoke, (for he was almost suffocated with Phlegm and frequent Vomitings), and finding, by his Pulse, that the Pangs of Death were then coming on, defired that he would spare himself. "No," says he, "Doctor, no. You tell me I have but a few Moments to live; Oh, let me fpend them in adoring our great Redeemer. Though my Flesh and my Heart fail me, yet God is the Strength of my Heart and my Portion for ever." He then expatiated in the most striking Manner upon these Words of St. Paul, 1 Cor. iii. 22, 23. All Things are yours, Life and Death: for ye are Christ's. "Here," fays he, " is the Treasure of a Christian. Death is reckoned amongst this Inventory;—and a noble Treasure it is. How thankful am I for Death, as it is the Passage through which I pass to the Lord and Giver of eternal Life, and as it frees me from all this Mifery you now fee me endure, and which I am willing to endure, as long as God thinks fit; for I know he will, by and by, in his own good Time, difinifs me from the Body.

Body. These light Afflictions are but for a Moment, and then comes an eternal Weight of Glory. Oh welcome, welcome Death!—Thou mayst well be reckoned among the Treasures of the Christian.—To live is Christ, but to die is Gain."

of After which, as the Doctor was taking his final Leave of him, Mr. Hervey expressed great Gratitude for his Visits, though it had been long out of the Power of Medicine to cure him.—He then paused a little, and, with great Serenity and Sweetness in his Countenance, though the Pangs of Death were then on him, repeated these triumphant Words—

" Lord, now lettest thou thy Servant depart in Peace, according to thy most holy and comfortable Word: for mine Eyes have feen thy precious Salvation. Here, Doctor, is my Cordial. What are all Cordials to the dying, compared to the Salvation of Christ? This, this supports me."-He found this supporting him in his last Moments, and declared it, by faying, twice or thrice, Precious Salvation! and then leaning his Head against the Side of the easy Chair in which he sat, he thut his Eyes, and fell afleep. Oh precious Salvation! How precious must it be to the dying Man, who, interested in it, can thank God for Death, and reckon it among his Riches; who, supported by Faith in the Salvation of God, can account it his gain to die; and can gladly fay, Oh welcome, welcome Death! May this Faith support you, my Brethren, when all other Supports fail, and make Salvation as precious to you as it was to Mr. Hervey! and of this you may be affured, that what the Lord did for him he is able also to do for you. He was indeed a glorious Instance of the Power of Grace; for by the Grace of God he was what he And Grace is free; as free for you as it was for him; able also to make you live and die as much to the Glory of God as he did. He was truly a burning and fhining shining Light; but the Lord's Hand is not shortened. It can make your Light shine also before Men, and enable you to adorn the Doctrine of God your Saviour as much as Mr. Hervey did. And the great Use to be made of his Example is, to stir you up to glorify Godfor the Gifts and Graces bestowed upon him, and to desire the same may be bestowed upon you. With this View I shall apply it,

First, To those Persons who have never seen the Salvation of God, and, consequently, are not prepared to depart in Peace; and these are all careless Sinners, who live secure in the wilful Commission of Sin. Mr. Hervey knew, that whenever the Lord should call him out of this Life, he should be found in Christ, not having his own Righteousness, which is of the Law, but that which is through the Faith of Christ, the Righteousness which is of God by Faith; and, clothed in this Righteoufness, he was certain that he should appear at the Bar of Justice without Spot of Sin, unto eternal Salvation. But this is not your Experience. Nay, you have never been awakened to defire it. You have never been humbled under a Sense of your lost Condition, nor broken down under a Conviction of your Helplessness: so that you have never seen your Want of a Saviour, and, confequently, have never feen the Salvation of our God. If you entertain any Hopes of departing in Peace, while you are in this State, you are of all Men the most deceived; for when Death comes, it will find you in your Sins unpardoned, without any Faith in the Redeemer's Righteousness to make Death defirable, but with every Thing that can make it terrible. The holy, just, and good Law of the most high God will accuse, Conscience will plead guilty, Justice will condemn and punish, and the Wrath of God will abide upon you for ever and ever. How is it possible you should depart in Peace, unless you die insensible? and that would be dreadful indeed. If Sin should so far far infatuate you, that you never awake out of its delufive Slumbers until you are called to receive the Wages of Sin, Oh think what Sort of a Peace you fpeak to yourselves! since it leaves you in the greatest Danger, and, at the same Time, insensible of it. To depart in such a salse Peace, would be your everlasting Destruction. Oh Sirs, consider then what a Delusion you are under! The Wrath of an offended God abideth on you. the Curses of his broken Law hang over your guilty Heads, and you are liable to the Vengeance of his almighty Justice; and yet you think yourselves safe. You are faying, Peace, Peace, while all the Powers in Heaven and Earth are at War with you, and in a Moment you may be cut off, and delivered over to the Tormentors; and then you will have a fad and eternal Experience of that awful Threatening, There is no Peace. faith my God, to the wicked.

Men and Brethren, what do you fay to these Things? Are they true, or are they not? If they be true, why are you not influenced by them? And if you think them not true, why do you make any Profession of the Christian Religion? Why do you come to the House of God to attend upon his Ordinances? Your Appearance here ranks you among Professors; and if you keep up the Form without the Power of Godliness, I have for you, in the Second Place, a Word of Reproof.

There have arisen, in the latter Days, Mockers, who pretend to ridicule the feeing of the Salvation of God, and the being thereby prepared to depart in Peace. Possibly there may be some such amongst us To-day, who laugh at all vital and experimental Religion. If there be, I would ask them, whether the Scripture has not promised Deliverance from the Fear of Death? Is it not written, (Heb. xi. 15.) That Christ came to deliver them who through Fear of Death were all their Life-Time subject to Bondage? Observe, they were in Bondage to the Fear of Death, but Christ came to deliver them. And did not he attain the End for which he came? Most certainly he did. I have finished, says he to his Father, the Work which thou gavest me to do. Now, it was Part of the Work to deliver his People from the Fear of Death; and as the Work was finished, consequently they are delivered. And they fay they are. They attest it, and they have given the most convincing Proofs of their having conquered all Fear of Death: they have been afflicted, tormented, stoned, sawn afunder, put on the Rack; and yet they would not accept Deliverance, because they were sure of obtaining a better Resurrection. And of these there have not been two or thee only, but a noble and numerous Army, yea a great Multitude, whom no Man could number; and, Glory be to God, it is an increasing Multitude: there are some who daily depart in Peace, and there are Hundreds, Thousands, now alive, who are waiting for their Departure with Hopes full of Immortality; and why should you think they will be disappointed of their Hope? Will Christ break his Word? Can his Promise fail? No: his Word and his Promise shall be established. when Heaven and Earth shall be no more; and until the Place of them shall not be found, the Lord will always have fuch Witnesses of the Truth of the Doctrine in my Text, as Mr. Hervey, who will depart this Life in the Triumph of Faith.

Against these plain Facts what can you object? They are sounded upon the clear Promises of Scripture, which are literally sulfilled at this very Day; and you can have no Pretence to reject their Authority, unless you run into downright Scepticism, and deny the Authority of the Holy Scriptures. If any of you have arrived at this Pitch of Ridicule, I shall not reason with you at present. Let the Day decide the Point. If Death does not, Judgment will. You will be forced to be tried by that Book which you reject, and by that Judge whom you have infulted and vilified. O that you may be convinced of your Error before it be too late! May God open your Eyes to fee your Guilt and your Danger, that you may fue for Mercy along with them who are feeking the Experience of the Doctrine in my Text; to whom I have, in the Third Place, a Word of Comfort.

I suppose there are many Persons here, who find the Sting of Death in their guilty Consciences, and who therefore desire to be delivered from the Fear and from the Power of Death. My Brethren, there is a glorious Deliverer, who has, in his own Person, conquered Death, and him that had the Power of Death; and he is able to make you Conquerors. His Power is Almighty: for he is the Lord God Omnipotent; and he is an all-loving Saviour, who is more ready to give, than you are to ask, his promised Help. Since he has shewn you your Want of it, ask and you shall have, seek and you shall find.

You do feek, you fay, but it is with many Doubts and Fears. Of what do you doubt? of Christ's Power or of Christ's Love? He can deliver you. All Things are possible to him, because all Power in Heaven and Earth is in his Hands. And he is a God of Love; he has shewed Mercy to the greatest of Sinners, and has shed his Love abroad in their Hearts. He has given them Faith to see their Interest in him, and then they were happy living or dying: for whether they lived, they lived unto the Lord; or whether they died, they died unto the Lord: so that living and dying they were the Lord's.

True, fay you, I believe this was the happy Case of Mr. Hervey, and of many others; but I am full of Doubts and Fears, because I am such an unworthy. Creature, that I do not deserve any Mercy. Nor did they: God did not treat them upon the Footing of Defert; what he gave them was mere Bounty, flowing from the Riches of his unmerited Love. That is the Way in which he bestows his great Salvation. All the Bleffings of it are free, as free for one Sinner as for another. None are excluded, because they are great Sinners; Paul found Mercy: and none are rejected. because of their Unworthiness; Mary Magdalen was pardoned; and why may not you? For all the Gifts of God flow from his free Grace, and are bestowed upon unworthy Sinners; and if you are one of them, you are a proper Object to receive the Bleffings of free Grace; and the Sense of your Unworthiness should make you more earnest in asking, but it is no Bar to your receiving, all the Bleffings of Salvation; for Jefus Christ assures us in his Word, that he came to seek and to fave that which was lost; fuch lost Sinners as you are.

Thus you see what Encouragement you have to believe in God. You have his Word and his Promise to rely upon; you have the Testimony of God's People, declaring that they were once, as you are, as a fraid of Death, but now Christ has taken away the Fear of it. They have seen the Salvation of God, and know by Faith, that all the Blessings of it are freely given them in Christ Jesus; therefore they are ready, they desire to depart. May the tender Mercies of our God bring every one of you into this happy State! And to those who are already in it, I make my fourth Remark.

My Christian Friends and Brethren, you have seen the Salvation of God, and are delivered from the Fear of Death: what Return will you make unto the Lord for all the Benefits which he hath done unto you? Certainly you will not forget the great Things which he has already given you, and the greater Things for which you are waiting; and let these Considerations constrain you to love this divine Benefactor, and to serve him without without Fear, in an holy Obedience, all the Days of your Lives. Give Evidence of the Sincerity of your Love, as your Lord requires; If ye love me, keep my Commandments:—Keep near to me in my Ways, and walk close with me in mine Ordinances, and you will not only thereby give Proof of your Love, but it will also grow exceedingly; and as it grows, your Defire to depart will grow with it; for when the Love of Christ rules in the Heart, you will be ready, yea, you will defire to depart, and to be with him. This was the happy Experience of our deceased Brother; and let his Example stir you up to great Care and Watchfulness in your holy walking heavenwards, that your Faith may be always working by Love, as his did. Confider the Graces of his Life, and feek the fame. Stop not short, but try to get beyond him. Consider his Death. Remember with what perfect Assurance he spake of his Interest in Christ, and what strong Proofs he gave of it; and then pray that your Faith may stand as unshaken as his was in that great Time of Trial. And, above all, forget not what supported him in his last Moments; it was the clear View he had of his Interest in the great Salvation of God: "This, this," says he, "fupports me,"—now at the Approach of Death. Oh how precious did Salvation then appear to him, when he found Death coming difarmed, and without a Sting! and it grew still more precious, when, with his last Breath, he declared, that Death had no Power to hurt the Peace of God, which ruled in his Heart; for even then he found Salvation precious. You need not fear, my Brethren, but this will be your happy Experience. God has given you the Knowledge of Salvation by the Remission of your Sins; and as your Faith grows exceedingly, Salvation will grow exceedingly precious. The greater Experience you hereby get of the Love of Christ, the more will you be supported under the Trials of Life, and the better prepared for the Trials of Death. You will find, that the sweet Sense of Christ's Love in the Heart will enable you to rejoice in Suffering, and then you need not fear but it will enable you to rejoice in the Sufferings of Death. For who or what shall feparate Believers from the Love of Christ? Shall the Troubles of Life, or the Pains of Death? Shall Tribulation, or Distress, or Perfecution, or Famine, or Nakednefs, or Peril, or Sword? No; in all these Things we are more than Conquerors through him that loved us. More than Conquerors! Oh glorious Warfare, in which Believers not only conquer their Enemies, but also reap innumerable and endless Blessings to themselves. Even Death is to them a real Blessing; they expect it, they find it so, and they are more than Conquerors over it, through him that loved them.

In the last Place, I must put you all in Remembrance, that neither the Words of my Text, nor what has been faid upon them, will be of any Benefit without a Bleffing from God. We cannot fee his Salvation with the Eye of Faith, nor Experience the Power of it, without the Help of his Grace. It is from him, who has done all for us, that all must be done in us; and if some good Impressions have been made this Day upon any of your Hearts, they will foon wear away, unless he preferve and strengthen them. If you defire, at present, to live Mr. Hervey's Life, and to die his Death, this Defire will be ineffectual, unless it be carried into Act by the mighty working of God's Spirit: he is all in all. For which Reason we always begin and always end the hearing of the Word with Prayer; being affured, that if Paul should plant, and Apollos should water, yet it would be to no Purpose, unless God should give the Increase. Oh that it may be abundant this Day to his Glory, and to the Good of your Souls. To that End let us pray-

"O almighty and most merciful God, we humbly befeech thee to look down with Mercy upon this Congregation, and to bless the Words which we have heard this Day with our outward Ears. Make them the Means of opening the blind Eyes which have never feen their Want of thy Salvation. Lord, enlighten them, and help them to feek, until they find Pardon and Peace in thee. Be gracious to those who are now waiting upon thee, believing, that after they have feen thy Salvation, they shall be able to depart in Peace. O Lord God, manifest it unto them, and add this Day to the Number of those who have seen and experienced it. We defire to glorify thee for every living Christian who knows in whom he has believed, and is ready and prepared to depart in Peace. We give all the Praise to the Riches of thy free Grace. And we also bless thy holy Name for all thy Servants departed this Life in thy Faith and Love, befeeching thee to give us Grace fo to follow their good Examples, as they followed Christ; that with them we may be Partakers of thy heavenly Kingdom. Grant this, O Father, for Jesus Christ's Sake, our only Mediator and Advocate; to whom, with thee, and the Holy Spirit, three co-equal Persons in one Jehovah, be Honour, and Glory, and Blessing, and Praise, for ever and ever. Amen."

Vol. L C THE

MEDITATIONS

AND

CONTEMPLATIONS.

CONTAINING

MEDITATIONS AMONG THE TOMBS;
REFLECTIONS ON A FLOWER-GARDEN;

AND,

A DESCANT ON CREATION.

CONTEMPLATIONS ON THE NIGHT;
CONTEMPLATIONS ON THE STARRY HEAVENS;

AND,

A WINTER-PIECE.

By JAMES HERVEY, M.A. Late Rector of Weston-Favell, in Northamptonshire.

Miss R— T—.

MADAM,

Other on the gayest Scenes of Nature; when they proceeded privately from the Pen, were addressed to a Lady of the most valuable Endowments. Who crowned all her other endearing Qualities, by a fervent Love of Christ, and an exemplary Conformity to his Divine Pattern. She, alas! lives no longer on Earth; unless it be in the Honours of a distinguished Character, and in the bleeding Remembrance of her Acquaintance.

It is impossible, Madam, to wish You a richer Blessing, or a more substantial Happiness, than that the same Spirit of unseigned Faith, the same Course of undefiled Religion, which have enabled Her to triumph over Death, may both animate and adorn your Life. And you will permit me to declare, that my chief Inducement in requesting your Acceptance of the following Meditations, now they make a public Appearance from the Press, is, that they are designed to cultivate the same facred Principle, and to promote the same excellent Prastice.

Long, Madam, may you bloom in all the Vivacity and Amiableness of Youth, like the charming Subject of one of these Contemplations. But at the same Time remember, that, with regard to such inserior Accomplishments, You must one Day sade, (may it prove some very remote Period!) like the mournful Objects of the other. This Confideration will prompt You to go on, as you have begun, in adding the Meekness of Wisdom, and all the Beauties of Holiness, to the Graces of an engaging Person, and the Refinements of a polite Education.

A 2

And might—O! might the enfuing Hints furnish You with the least Assistance, in prosecuting so desirable an End; might they contribute, in any Degree, to establish your Faith, or elevate your Devotion; they would, then, administer to the Author such a Satisfaction, as Applause cannot give, nor Censure take away: A Satisfaction, which I shall be able to enjoy, even in those awful Moments, when all that captivates the Eye is sinking in Darkness, and every Glory of this lower World disappearing for ever.

THESE Wishes, Madam, as they are a most agreeable Employ of my Thoughts, so they come attended with this additional Circumstance of Pleasure, that they are also the sincerest Expressions of that very great Esteem, with which I am,

MADAM,

Your most Obedient,

Most Humble Servant,

Weston-Favell, near Northampton, May 20, 1746.

JAMES HERVEY.

PREFACE.

THE first of these occasional Meditations, begs leave to remind my Readers of their latter End; and would invite them to set, not their Houses only, but, which is inexpressibly more needful, their Souls, in Order: That they may be able, through all the intermediate Stages, to look forward upon their approaching Exit, without any anxious Apprehensions: And, when the great Change commences, may bid Adieu to terrestrial Things, with all the Calmness of a chearful Resignation, with all the Comforts of a well-grounded Faith.

The other attempts to sketch out some little Traces of the All-sufficiency of our Redeemer, for the grand and gracious Purposes of everlasting Salvation. That a Sense of his unutterable Dignity, and infinite Perfections, may incite us to regard Him, with Sentiments of the most profound Veneration; to long for an assured Interest in his Merits, with all the Ardency of Desire; and to trust in his powerful Mediation, with an Assure not to be shaken by any Temptations, not to be shared with any Performances of our own.

I flatter myself, that the Thoughts conceived among the Tombs, may be welcome to the serious and humane Mind. Because, as there are few, who have not consigned the mains of some dear Relations, or honoured Friends select Repositories; so there are none, have been that this is the House appointed for all I was a select that they themselves, are shortly to remove into the same selemn Mansions.—And who would not turn aside, for a while, from the most savourite Amusements, to view the Place, where his once-loved Companions lie? Who would not sometimes survey those Apartments, where he himself is to take up an Abode, till Time shall be no more?

As to the other little Essay, may I not humbly presume, that the very Subject itself will recommend the Remarks? For, who is not delighted with the Prospect of the blooming Creation, and even charmed with the delicate Attractions of Flowers? Who does not covet to assemble them in the Garden, or wear them in a Nosegay? Since this is a Passion fo universal, who would not be willing to render it productive of the sublimest Improvement? - This Piece of holy Frugality, I have ventured to suggest, and endeavoured to exemplify, in the second Letter; that, while the Hand is cropping the transient Beauties of a Flower, the attentive Mind may be enriching itself with solid and lasting Good.—And I cannot but entertain some pleasing Hopes, that the nicest Taste may receive and relish religious Impressions, when they are conveyed by such lovely Monitors; when the instructive Lessons are found, not on the Leaves of some formidable Folio, but stand legible on the fine Sarcenet of a Narcissus; when they favour not of the Lamp and Recluse, but come breathing from the fragrant Bosom of a Jonquil.

[vii]

ADVERTISEMENT

TO THE

THIRD EDITION.

I MUST entreat the Purchasers of the former Editions, to excuse the Freedom I have taken, in making several considerable Additions to this. It has been done at the Persuasion of some judicious Friends, who apprehended, the Piece might be more useful, and less unworthy of the public Patronage, if it touched upon some very interesting Subjects, hitherto omitted. As I had no Views, but to render the Performance more pleasing and serviceable; no Reader, I hope, will be offended at my Practice, or complain of it as injurious. Nevertheless, as I would willingly avoid, whatever might seem to stand in Need of an Apology; I defire Leave to declare, That no future Inlargements, or Alterations, shall be suffered to depreciate what, with the deepest Gratitude for their past Encouragement, I now commit to the Candour of the Public.

[viii]

VERSES TO MR. HERVEY,

ON HIS

MEDITATIONS.

IN these lov'd Scenes, what rapt'rous Graces shine, Live in each Leaf, and breathe in ev'ry Line! What facred Beauties beam throughout the Whole, To charm the Sense, and steal upon the Soul! In claffic Elegance, and Thoughts-his own, We see our Faults as in a Mirror, shown: Each Truth, in glaring Characters exprest, All own the Twin Resemblance in their Breast: His easy Periods, and perfuasive Page, At once amend, and entertain the Age: Nature's wide Fields all open to his View, He charms the Mind with fomething ever New: On Fancy's Pinions, his advent'rous Soul Wantons unbounded, and pervades the Whole: From Death's dark Caverns in the Earth below, To Spheres, where Planets roll, or Comets glow.

See him explore, with more than human Eyes, The dreary Sepulchre, where Granville lies.

Converse with Stones, or monumental Brass,
The rude Inscriptions,—or the painted Glass:
To gloomy Vaults descend with awful Tread,
And view the filent Mansions of the Dead.

To gayer Scenes he next adapts his Lines, Where lavish Nature in Embroid'ry shines:

The Jess'mine Groves, the Woodbine's fragrant Bow'rs, With all the painted Family of Flow'rs: There, Sacharissa! in each fleeting Grace, Read all the transient Honours of thy Face.

With equal Dignity, now see Him rise To paint the sable Horrors of the Skies: When all the wide Horizon lies in Shade; And Midnight Phantoms sweep along the Glade: All Nature hush'd—a solemn Silence reigns, And scarce a Breeze disturbs the sleeping Plains.

Last, yet not less, in Majesty of Phrase, He draws the full-orb'd Moon's expansive Blaze; The waving Metcors, trembling from on high, With all the mute Artill'ry of the Sky: Systems on Systems, which in Order roll, And dart their lambent Beams from Pole to Pole.

Hail, mighty Genius! whose excursive Soul
No Bounds confine, no Limits can controul:
Whose Eye expatiates, and whose Mind can rove,
Through Earth, through Æther, and the Realms above:
From Things inanimate can direct * the Rod,
In just Gradation, to ascend to God.
Taught by thy Lines, see hoary Age grows wise,
And all the Rebel in his Bosom dies:
E'en thoughtless Youth, in Luxury of Blood,
Fly the insectious World, and dare—be Good:
Thy sacred Truths shall reach th'impervious Heart;
Discord shall cease, Disease forget to smart:
E'en Malice love, and Calumny commend;
Pride beg an Alms, and Av'rice turn a Friend.

Centred in Christ, who fires the Soul within, The Flesh shall know no Pain; the Soul, no Sin: E'en in the Terrors of expiring Breath, We bless the friendly Stroke, and live—in Death.

Oxford, April 28, 1748.

^{*} An Allusion to the Custom, of shewing curious Objects, and particularising their respective Delicacies, by the pointing of the Rod.

By a Physician.

Deep from the Tombs, and kindle to the Skies; How shall an earthly Bard's profaner String Resound the Flights of thy Scraphic Wing? When great Elijah, in the fiery Car, Flam'd visible to Heav'n, a living Star, A Seer remain'd to thunder what he knew, And with his Mantle caught his Spirit too.

Wit, Fancy, Fire, and Elegance, have long
Been lost in vicious or ignoble Song:
Sunk from the chastely Grand, the pure Sublime,
They statter'd Wealth and Pow'r, or murder'd Time.
Tis Thine their devious Lustre to reduce,
To prove their noblest Pow'r, their genuine Use;
From Earth-born Fumes to clear their tainted Flame,
And point their Flight to Heav'n—from whence they came.

O more than Bard in Profe! to whom belong Harmonious Stile and Thought, in rhymeless Song; Oft, by thy friendly Conduct, let me tread The foftly whispering Mansions of the Dead: Where the grim Form, calcining Hinds and Lords, Grins at each fond Distinction Pride records. Dumb, with immortal Energy they teach; Lifeless, they threaten; mould'ring as they preach To each succeeding Age, thro' ev'ry Clime, The Span of Life, and endless Round of Time: Hence may propitious Melancholy flow, And Safety find me in the Vaults of Woe.

While ev'ry Virtue forms thy mental Feast, I glow with fair Sincerity at least:
I feel (thy Face unknown) thy Heart refin'd,
And tatte, with Blifs, the Beauties of thy Mind;
Collecting clearly, thro' thy facred Plan,
What Reverence of Gop! what Love to Man!
—O! when at last our deathless Forms shall rife,
And Flow'rs and Stars desist to moralize;

Shall then my Soul, by thine inform'd, furvey, And bear the Splendors of effential Day? But while my Thoughts indulge the glorious Scope, (My utmost Worth beneath my humblest Hope) Conscience, or some exhorting Angel, cries,

"No lazy Wishes reach above the Skies. Would you indeed the perfect Scenes furvey,

" And share the Triumphs of unbounded Day;

" His Love-diffusive Life with Ardor live;

"And die like this divine Contemplative."

London, July 9, 1748.

By a Physician.

To form the Taste, and raise the nobler Part,
To mend the Morals, and to warm the Heart;
To trace the genial Source, we Nature call,
And prove the God of Nature Friend of all;
HERVEY for this his mental Landscape drew,
And sketch'd the whole Creation out to View.

Th'enamel'd Bloom, and variegated Flow'r,
Whose Crimson changes with the changing Hour;
The humble Shrub, whose Fragrance scents the Morn,
With Buds disclosing to the early Dawn:
The Oaks that grace Britannia's Mountains Side,
And spicy Lebanon's superior * Pride;
All loudly Sov'reign Excellence proclaim,
And animated Worlds consess the same.

The azure Fields that form th'extended Sky, The planetary Globes that roll on high, And folar Orbs, of proudest Blaze, combine, To act subservient to the great Design. Men, Angels, Seraphs, join the gen'ral Voice: And in the Lord of Nature, ALL rejoice.

F xii 7

His, the grey Winter's venerable Guise,
Its shrowded Glories, and instructive Skies *;
His, the Snow's Plumes, that brood the sick'ning Blade;
His, the bright Pendant that impearls the Glade;
The waving Forest, or the whisp'ring Brake;
The furging Billow, or the sleeping Lake.
The Same, who pours the Beauties of the Spring,
Or mounts the Whirlwind's desolating Wing.
The Same, who smiles in Nature's peaceful Form, Frowns in the Tempest, and directs the Storm.

'Tis thine, bright Teacher, to improve the Age; 'Tis thine, whose Life's a Comment on thy Page. Thy happy Page! whose Periods sweetly flow, Whose Figures charm us, and whose Colours glow. Where artless Piety pervades the Whole, Refines the Genius, and exalts the Soul. For let the Witling argue all he can, It is Religion still that makes the Man. Tis This, my Friend, that streaks our Morning bright; 'Tis This, that gilds the Horrors of our Night. When Wealth forfakes us, and when Friends are few; When Friends are faithlefs, or when Foes pursue; 'Tis This, that wards the Blow, or stills the Smart; Difarms Affliction, or repels its Dart; Within the Breast bids purest Rapture rise; Bids finiling Confcience spread her cloudless Skies.

When the Storm thickens and the Thunder rolls, When the Earth trembles to th'affrighted Poles; The virtuous Mind, nor Doubts nor Fears affail; For Storms are Zephyrs, or a gentler Gale.

And when Disease obstructs the lab'ring Breath, When the Heart sickens, and each Pulse is Death; E'en then Religion shall sustain the Just, Grace their last Moments, nor desert their Dust.

August 5, 1748.

^{*} Referring to the Winter-Piece.

S fome new Star attracts th' admiring Sight, A His Splendors pouring through the Fields of Light, Whole Nights, delighted with th' unusual Rays, On the fair heav'nly Visitant we gaze: So thy fam'd Volumes sweet Surprize impart, Mark'd by all Eyes, and felt in ev'ry Heart. Nature, inform'd by Thee, new Paths has trod, And rifes, here, a Preacher for her GoD; By Fancy's Aids mysterious Heights she tries, And lures us by our Senfes, to the Skies. To deck thy Stile collected Graces throng, Bold as the Pencil's Tints, yet foft as Song. In Themes, how rich thy Vein! how pure thy Choice! Transcripts of Truths, own'd clear from Scripture's Voice: Thy Judgment these, and Piety attest, Transcripts—read only fairer in thy Breast. There, what thy Works would shew, we best may see, And all they teach in Doctrine, lives in Thee.

Oh!-might they live!-Our Prayers their Strife engage; But thy fix'd Languors yield us fad Prefage. In vain skill'd Med'cine tries her healing Art: Disease, long Foe, entrenches at thy Heart. Yet on new Labours still thy Mind is prone, For a World's Good too thoughtless of thy own. Active, like Day's kind Orb, Life's Course you run. Its Sphere still glorious, tho' a fetting Sun. Redemption opes Thee wide her healing Plan, Health's only Balm; her fov'reign'ft Gift to Man. Themes fweet like thefe thy Ardors, fresh, excite: Warm at the Soul, they nerve thy Hand to write; Make thy try'd Virtues in their Charms appear, Patience, rais'd Hope, firm Faith, and Love fincere; Like a big Constellation, bright they glow, And beam out lovelier by thy Night of Woe.

Known were thy Merits to the Public long, Ere own'd thus feebly in my humble Song. Damp'd are my Fires; my Heart dark Cares depress; A Heart, too feeling from it's own Distress. Proud on thy Friendship, yet to build my Fame, I gain'd my Page *a Sanction from thy Name. Weak these Returns (by Gratitude tho' led) Where mine shall in thy fav'rite Leaves be read. Yet, o'er my conscious Meanness Hope prevails; Love gives me Merit, where my Genius sails. On it's strong Base my small Desert I raise, Averse to Flatt'ry, as unskill'd to praise.

Moses Browne.

Mile-End-Green, Feb. 23, 1749.

WHENCE flow these solemn Sounds? this raptur'd Strain?

Cherubic Notes my wond'ring Ear detain!
Yet 'tis a Mortal's Voice: 'Tis Hervey fings:
Sublime he foars on Contemplation's Wings:
In ev'ry Period breathes ecftatic Thought,
Hervey, 'twas Heav'n thy facred Lessons taught.
Celestial Visions bless thy studious Hours,
Thy lonely Walks, and thy sequestred Bow'rs.

What fav'ring Pow'r, dispensing secret Aids,
Thy cavern'd Cell, thy curtain'd Couch, pervades?
Still hov'ring near, observant of thy Themes,
In Whispers prompts thee, or inspires thy Dreams?
Jesus! Effulgence of paternal Light!
Inestably divine! supremely bright!
Whose Energy according Worlds attest,
Kindled these Ardors in thy glowing Breast.
We catch thy Flame, as we thy Page peruse;
And Faith in every Object Jesus views.
We in the bloomy breathing Garden trace
Somewhat—like Emanations of his Grace:
Yet must all Sweetness and all Beauty yield,
Islams's Grove, and Sharon's slow'ry Field,

* SUNDAY THOUGHTS.

Compar'd with Jesus: Meanly, meanly shows The brightest Lily, faint the loveliest Rose.

Divine Instructor! lead thro' midnight Glooms, To moralizing Stars, and preaching Tombs: Thro' the still Void a Saviour's Voice shall break, A Ray from Jacob's Star the Darkness streak: To Him the fairest Scenes their Lustre owe; His Cov'nant brightens the celestial Bow; His vast Benevolence profusely spreads The yellow Harvests, and the verdant Meads.

Thy Pupil, HERVEY, a Redeemer finds
In boundless Oceans, and in viewless Winds:
He reins at Will the furious Blast, and guides
The rending Tempests, and the roaring Tides.
O give, my Soul, thy Welfare to his Trust:
Who rais'd the World, can raise thy sleeping Dust!
He will, he will, when Nature's Course is run,
Midst falling Stars, and an extinguish'd Sun:
He will with Myriads of his Saints appear.
O may I join them, tho' the meanest there!

Tho' nearer to the Throne my HERVEY fings; Tho' I at humbler Distance strike the Strings; Yet both shall mingle in the same Employ, Both drink the Fulness of eternal Joy.

JOHN DUICK.

Clerkenwell-Green, Feb. 24, 1749-50.

HAT Numbers of our Race furvey
The Monarch of the golden Day,
Night's ample Conopy unfurl'd,
In gloomy Grandeur round the World,
The Earth in Spring's Embroidery drest,
And Ocean's ever-working Breast!
And still no grateful Honours rise
To Him who spreads the spacious Skies,

Who hung this Air-fuspended Ball, And lives, and reigns, and shines, in All!

To chase our sensual Fogs away,
And bright to pour th' eternal Ray
Of Deity inscrib'd around
Wide Nature to her utmost Bound,
Is Hervey's Task: And well his Skill
Celestial can the Task sulfil:
Ascending from these Scenes below,
Ardent the Maker's Praise to show,
His facred Contemplations foar,
And teach our Wonder to adore.

Now he surveys the Realms beneath,
The Realms of Horror, and of Death;
Now entertains his vernal Hours
In slow'ry Walks, and blooming Bow'rs;
Now hails the black-brow'd Night, that brings Æthereal Dews upon her Wings;
Now marks the Planets, as they roll
On burning Axles round the Pole:
While Tombs, and Flow'rs, and Shades, and Stars,
Unveil their facred Characters
Of Justice, Wisdom, Pow'r, and Love;
And lifts the Soul to Realms above,
Where dwells the God, in Giory crown'd,
Who sends his boundless Instinence round.

So Jacob, in his blifsful Dreams, Array'd in Heav'n's refulgent Beams, Saw from the Ground a Scale arife, Whofe Summit mingled with the Skies: Angels were pleas'd to pass the Road, The Stage to Earth, and Path to God.

HERVEY, proceed! For Nature yields Fresh Treasure in her ample Fields; And in seraphic Ecstasy Still bear us to the Throne on high. Ocean's wild Wonders next explore, His changing Scenes, and secret Store; Or let dire EARTHQUAKE claim thy Toil, EARTHQUAKE, that shakes a guilty Isle.

So, if small Things may shadow forth, Dear Man, thy Labours, and thy Worth, The Bee upon the flow'ry Lawn Imbibes the lucid Drops of Dawn, Works them in his mysterious Mould, And turns the common Dew to Gold.

THOMAS GIRROWS.

London, May 26, 1750.

D'Elightful Author! whom the Saints inspire!
And whisp'ring Angels with their Ardors fire!
From Youth like mine, wilt thou accept of Praise!
Or smile with Candor on a Stripling's Lays?
My little Laurel (but a Shoot at most)
Has hardly more than one small Wreath to boast.
Such as it is—(Ah! might it worthier be!)
Its scanty Foliage all is due to Thee.
Oh! if, amongst the Honours of thy Brow,
This slender Circlet may but humbly grow:
If its saint Verdure haply may find Place—
A Foil to others,—Tho' its own Disgrace;
Accept it, Hervey, from a Heart sincere,
And for the Giver's Sake,—the Tribute wear.

Thy Soul-improving Works perus'd, what Tongue Can hold from Praife, or check th' applaufive Song? But ah! from whence shall Gratitude obtain Language that may its glowing Zeal explain? How to such wond'rous Worth adapt a Strain? Describ'd by Thee, cold Sepulchres can charm; Storms, calm the Soul; and freezing Winter, warm. Clear'd from her gloomy Shades, we view pale Night Surrounded with a Blaze of mental Light.

Lo! where she comes! all silent! pensive! slow! On her dark Robe unnumber'd Meteors glow! How on her Head a starry Crown she wears! Bright in her Hand the Lamp of Reason bears!

Smiling,—behold! She points the Soul to Heav'n, And bids the weeping Sinner be forgiv'n!

But when thy Fancy shifts this solemn Scene, And ruddy Morning gilds the chearful Green; With sudden Joy we view the Prospect chang'd, And blushing Sweets in beauteous Order rang'd. We see the Violets; smell the dewy Rose, And each Persume that from the Woodbine flows: A boundless Perspective there greets our Eyes: Rich Vales descend, and verdant Mountains rise. The Shepherds Cottages, the rural Folds: All, that thy Art describes, the Eye beholds!

Amazing Limner! whence this matchless Pow'r? Thy Work's a Garden!—ev'ry Word, a Flow'r! Thy lovely Tints almost the Bloom excel, And none but Nature's Self can paint so well!

Hail, holy Man!—henceforth thy Work shall stand (Like some fair Column by a Master-Hand, Which, whilst it props, adorns the tow'ring Pile) At once to grace, and elevate our Isle.

Tho' simple, losty; tho' majestic, plain; Whose bold Design the Rules of Art restrain.

In which the nicest Eye sees nothing wrong:
Tho' polish'd, just; and elegant, tho' strong.

St. George Molesworth.

June 24, 1750.

And hung, attentive, on her Siren Strain:
Still toils the Bard beneath fome weak Defign,
And puny Thought but haits along the Line:
Or tuneful Nathings, flealing on the Mind,
Melt into Air, nor leave a Trace behind,
While to thy rapt'rous Profe, we feel, belong
The Strength of Wisdom, and the Voice of Song:
This lifts the Torch of sacred Truth on high,
And points the Captives to their native Sky.

How false the Joys, which Earth or Sense inspires, That clog the Soul, and damp her purer Fires! Truths, which thy folemn Scenes, my Friend, declare, Whose glowing Colours paint us as we are. Yet not morosely stern, nor idly gay, Dull Melancholy reigns, or Trifles fway; Ill would the Strains of Levity befit, And fullen Gloom but fadden all thy Wit: Truth, Judgment, Sense, Imagination join; And ev'ry Muse, and ev'ry Grace is thine. Religion prompting the true End of Man, Conspiring Genius executes the Plan; Strong to convince, and elegant to charm, Plaintive to melt, or passionate to warm. Rais'd by Degrees, we elevate our Aim; And grow immortal as we catch thy Flame; True Piety informs our languid Hearts, And all the Vicious, and the Vain, departs. So, when foul fpreading Fogs creep flowly on, Blot the fair Morn, and hide the golden Sun; Ardent he pours the boundless Blaze of Day, Rides thro' the Sky, and shines the Mist away. O, had it been th' Almighty's gracious Will, That I had shar'd a Portion of thy Skill; Had this proor Breast receiv'd the heav'nly Beam, Which foreads its Luftre thro' thy various Theme; That speaks deep Lessons from the silent Tomb, And crowns thy Garden with fresh-springing Bloom; Or, piercing thro' Creation's ample Whole, Now fooths the Night, or gilds the flarry Pole; Or marks how Winter calls her howling Train, Her Snows and Storms, that desolate the Plain; With Thee the Muse should trace the pleasing Road, That leads from Nature up to Nature's GoD; Humble to learn, and, as she knows the more, Glad to obey, and happy to adore.

PETER WHALLEY.

Northampton, 25 Aug. 1750.

CONTENTS

MEDITATIONS AMONG THE TOMES.

(CCASION of the Meditations; Solitary Walk in & Church, 1 - Handsome Altar-piece, 2-Gratitude celcbrated, 3-Solomon's Temple; his noble Sentiments at the Dedication; the Passage illustrated, 3-The Holy Ghost dwelling in our Hearts; a rich Privilege; an Obligation to Heliness, 5-The Floor covered with funeral Inscriptions, 7-Wisdom of meditating on our latter End, 8-Promiscuous Lodgment, and amicable Agreement of Corpses, suggest Humility, and Concord, 8-Monument of an Infant; its fortunate Circumstances; superior Felicity of Survivors, 10-Monument of a Youth; Grief of the Parents; mitigated or aggravated by the Prospect of the invisible State; Exhortation to educate Childrenreligiously, 12—Monument of a young Man; cut off in his Prime; how unexpetted and afflittive the Stroke; the frailty of all sublunary Happiness, 15-Reflection on the three preceding Exits; the Uncertainty of Life; Call to be always ready, 17—This farther urged from the Instance of a Person killed by a Missortune; nothing casual, but all ordered by Providence, 19—Case of a Lady, who died in Childbed; her Character: with regard to earthly Things, we know not what is really definable, or truly good; Remarks on Mrs. Stonhouse's Monument, in the great Church at Northampton, 22-A religious Father taken from his young Family; his Behaviour on a dying Bed; their Support in a fatherless State, 28 - Monument of a middleaged Person; immersed in Business; Disappointment of his Schemes; his dying Acknowledgements; the Folly of Worldlymindedness; very Bitterness in the End, 33-The Graves of the Aged; the Difficulties and Hazard of a late Repentance; Touth intreated to enter upon a Course of Holiness without Delay, 35—The fingular Wisdom and Felicity of the Righteous; the Rest of their Bodies; the Calmness of their Depar-

Departure; the Safety of their difembedied Souls; their delightful Situation till the Judgment-day, 38-Monument of a Warrior, flain in Battle; Reflections on the Death of CHRIST, that it was voluntary, forefren, undergone for Enemies; the mest torturous, lingering, and ignominious, 43 -The Meanness of being obliged to a Menument for perpetuating our Names; Author's Wish for himself; true Method of eternizing our Characters, 46—The Vault; its awful Aspect; Grandeur in Abasement; The Vanity of Pleafures, Honours, and Riches, 49-The Clock firikes; a Warning to redeem the Time, 52-The wonderful Change which takes place in the Tomb, displayed in several Particulars, 53 -Soliloguy of a Lover; Admonition to the Ladies; True Reauty of the Fair Sex, 55-Sin the Cause of our Dissolution, 58-Subject of Mortality brought home to our own Case; Incitement to improve Life; this the best Embalming, 58-View of our Saviour's Sepulchre; his lying in the Grave has softened it for his People; Faith in his dying Love disarms Death, 61—The Resurrestion of the Righteous; their meeting the Judge; their Acceptance at the great Tribunal, 64—Sickness, Sin, and Death destroyed; Bliss or Misery unchangeable; Observations on Eternity, 66—The Wicked; the Anguish of their lest Sickness. No Hope but from the Religion they despised; that very precarious; the Horror of their Dissolution; this the Beginning of Sorrows; their Treatment in the invisible World; reserved to the Judgment of the great Day, 68—They rife, though reluctant; are distracted with Terror; covered with Contempt; condemned to endless Woe, 71—To be instrumental in saving our Fellow-Creatures from this Misery, the truest Exercise of Benevolence, 73-A Reflection on the vast Importance of these Truths; a Perfualive to act under the believing Consideration of them; enforced by the inexpressible Necessity of preparing for them, 74 -The whole closes with a View of the present Security, and future Glory, of the Righteous, 75.

Reflections on a Flower-Garden.

WALK in the Garden; Summer Morning; A foaring Lark; Invitation to early Rifing, 80-Vestness of the Heavens, greater Extent of Divine Mercy, 81-The Sun; its rising Glories; Emblem of Christ, in its enlightening, fructifying, chearing, and extensive Influences, $2-Dews; their transient Brightness; their refreshing Nature; their immense Number: difficult Passage in the Psalms cleared up, 89-The various, but harmonious, Procedure of Providence and Grace, 94-View of the Country, and its principal Productions; particularly of an Orchard, and Kitchen Garden; chiefly characterized as useful, 95-Christ made and recovered, upholds, and astuates All; Address to Mankind on this Occasion, 102-Observations contracted to the Garden; Fields of Literature left for the Study of the Bible, 116—Fragrance of Flowers; its fugitive Nature, another Motive to shake off Sloth; the delightful Sensation it creates, faint Representation of Christ's Sacrifice; all our Performances polluted, this the Cause of our Acceptance, 118—Colours of Flowers, how perfett in every Kind; with what Skill disposed; Fineness of the Flowery Texture: Inducement to trust in Providence, 111 - The Folly of Pride in Dress; our true Ornaments displayed, 113-Flowers naturally inspire Delight; what Pleasure must arise from the beatific Vision, 115—Solomon pictures out the blessed Jesus by the most delicate Flowers; Beauties in the Creature lead us to the Creator, 117—Diversity of Flowers, in their Airs, Habits, Attitudes, and Lineaments; Wisdom of the Almighty Maker; the Perfection and Simplicity of his Operations, 118 -Difference between Individuals of the same Species; Emblem

blem of the smaller Differences among Protestants, 122-Regular Succession of Flowers; some of the choicest Sets described; pleasing Effects produced by this Occonomy; a benevolent Providence apparent in conducting it, 124—This beautiful Disposition, and all that is admirable in the Creation, referred to CHRIST as the Author; to consider the Things that are made, in this View, has excellent Influence on our Faith and Love, 128—The Strusiure of Flowers fo correct, could not be altered, but to their Prejudice; the Time of their appearing, chosen with the nicest Precaution: these Circumstances, a striking Argument for Resignation to the Disposals of Heaven, 132-Quotations from Casimir and Juvenal translated, 133-135—A favourite Tenet of Mr. Pope's rightly stated, 136—The brute Creatures unaffected with Flowers: Their fine Qualities peculiarly intended to delight Mankind: All Things constituted with a particular Regard to our Advantage; this, an endearing Obligation to Gratitude; but a more engaging Motive, is the Gift of an immortal Soul, 136—Remark on the Notion of a great Poet, 140 -- The cultivated Garden, an Image of a well-nurtured Mind; Address to Persons concerned in the Education of Youth, 144—Flowers in the Bud, figurative of a Niggard; Flowers in full Expansion, expressive of a benevolent Disposition, 146—Sun-Flower; its remarkable Attachment to the Sun; such should be our Adherence to the Saviour, 148-Passion-Flower; its Description; with a religious Improvement, 150—Sensitive Plant; shrinks from every Touch; such should be our solicitous Care to avoid Sin, 154-The Delicacy of Flowers, and Coarseness of their Roots; the ennobling Change of our Bodies at the Resurrection; this should reconcile us to the Thoughts of Dissolution, 156-Pessage from Theocritus; the Perfections of Flowers soon decay; the Charms of Complexion scarce more lasting, 158 - Instances of transitory Continuance in the noblest Flowers; the Honours of the suture State unsading, 160—All the Delights of the showery Season pass away; the celestial Entertainments know no End, 162—Not Flowers only, but the most durable Things in Nature, are perishing; their Felicity stable, who have God for their Portion, 163—Retreat into an Arbour; Practice of St. Augustine, Pattern for our Imitation, 164—Coolness of this shady Situation; the insufferable Heat, that rages abroad; our Safety in all the Dangers of Lise, and amidst the Terrors of eternal Judgment, if sheltered by the Redeemer's Protection, and interested in his Merits, 165—The Bees; their Ingenuity; their Industry; set an Example for the Author, 167—A distant Prospect of the whole Scene, with its various Decorations, reminds the Beholder of Heaven; its Glories not to be described, but most passionately defired, 168.

A DESCANT UPON CREATION.

DESIGN of the Whole—Angels—The vifible Heavens—
Stars—Comets—Planets—Sun—Moon—Thunders—Lightnings—Clouds, wintry and vernal—Rainbow—Storms and Tempests—Pestilence—Heat and Cold—Ocean—Woods and Shrubs—Vine and Fruit-trees—Meadows and Fields —Mines and Jewels—Fountains and Rivers—Birds—
Bees—Silkworm—Cattle, and Creatures in every Element—
General Cherus of Praise, 171—200.

CONTEMPLATIONS ON THE NIGHT.

A Delightful Evening Walk; the unmolested Enjoyment of fuch Pleasures, owing to our late Victory over the Rebels, 213 to 216—The fetting Sun, 216—Twilight; its Usefulness; serious Consideration, 217—The dewy Coolness; its beneficial Influence on Nature; Returns of Solitude equally useful to Man, 219-Angels our Spectators; GOD ever present; comfortable Improvement of this Truth, 222—The Day ended; the Swiftness, the Shortness of Time; the Work to be done while it lasts; to squander it away, the most destructive Extravagance, 224—The profound Silence, 229— Universal Cessation of Business, 229-The Variations of Nature, pleasing and advantageous, 233—Darkness; the obliging Manner of its taking Place; wild Beasts of the Defart, and Savages in human Shape, make Use of this Opportunity, 235—Darkness renders the least Spark visible; yet steals from our Sight all the lovely Distinctions of Things, 238 -Sleep; its chearing Nature; the Gift of Heaven; fine Preparatives for its Approach; the Kindness of Providence in guarding our Slumbers, 241—Dreams; their unaccountable Oddness; many Peoples waking Thoughts, no less chimerical 243—Avery fingular, and very happy Circumstance, attending Sleep and Dreams, 247 - Ghofts; our unreasonable Timorousness on this Occasion; the true Object of Fear; the Reality and Design of Apparitions, deduced from a Passage in Job, 249—The Owl; its gloomy Disposition; unboly Persons incapable of relishing the Delights of Heaven, 254—Owlscreaming, supposed to be a Token of Death; the many real Presages of this great Change; due Preparations pointed out, and pressed, pressed, 256—The Nightingale; her charming Song; entertains the Lovers of Retirement; how to have a sweeter Melody in our own Breafts, 259-The very different Circumstances of Mankind, particularly the Gay, and the Afflisted; Address to the Devotees of Mirth and Sensuality, 260-The Glow-worm, and Ignis fatuus; the Pleasures of the World. and Powers of unenlightened Reason, 263-A Comet; imagined to be the Forerunner of Judgments; Licenticulnels abounding in a Nation, a much more formidable Omen; the Distemper among the Cattle, 265—Northern Lights; the Panic they occasion; the general Conflagration, 268—The Moon rifing; brightens as she advances; such should be our moral Conduct, 271-Moon opens a majestic Scene; how worthy our Admiration, 272-Moon, a most serviceable Appendage to our Globe, 273-Moon, shines with derivative Light; Christians receive their All from their Saviour, 275 -Moon always varying; the things of this World liable to perpetual Vicissitudes; our own Righteousness unequal and imperfect, our Redeemer's complete, and always the same, 277—Moon under an Eclipse; gazed at by Multitudes; the Faults of eminent Persons seldom escape Observation, 281-Moon reflected by the Ocean; the Virtues of Persons, in distinguished Stations, influential on others, 282-Moon actuates the Sea; the everlasting Joys of Heaven attract and refine the Affections, 283—Prayer, a reasonable Service. Praise, a delightful Duty; with devout Recollections proper for the Night, 284.

CONTEMPLATIONS ON THE STARRY HEAVENS.

WALK on the Summit of a Hill.—The advancing Night withdraws the rural Prospect; opens the Beauties of the Sky, 293—Fragrance of the blooming Beans, 294—The Heavens, a noble Field for the Display of the Divine Perfections, 295—Folly of Judicial Astrology; right Use of contemplating the Stars, 296 - A Sketch of the most remarkable Discoveries of our modern Astronomy, 298-Religion, and necessary Business; Religion and innocent Pleasure; as consistent, as the annual and diurnal Motions of the Earth, 299-The Sun, its enormous Size, 301—Stars, the Centers of Systems; their inconceivable Distance, 302—Other Skies furnished with other Stars, 303—The Greatness of the Creator, 303—The preceding Observations inculcate Humility, 304-Shew the Littleness of terrestrial Things, 305—The stupendous Condescension of GOD, in his gracious Regards to the Children of Men, 306—The prodigious Heinousness of human Guilt, 309 -The Richness of CHRIST's Atonement, and its complete Sufficiency for the most deplorable Cases of Sin and Misery, 312 -The Power of GOD manifested in the Starry Heavens; this the Christian's constant Safeguard, and sure Resource, 315 -The miserable Condition of the Ungodly, who have Omnipotence for their Enemy, 319—The unwearied Patience of this all-mighty Being, 321—The Wisdom of GOD, displayed in the Skies; Submission to his Dispensations, even when they seem most frowning and severe; all spring from Love, and will terminate in Good, 322—The Goodness of GOD, dissused through the vast System of created Things; but far more illustriously exemplified in the Work of Redemption; the former View gives a most amiable, the latter a perfectly ravishing, Idea of the Divine Beneficence, 325—The Purity of GOD, faintly faintly represented by the unspotted Firmament; the Defilement of sinful Man, the immaculate Excellence of his Surety, 333—The unmeasurable Dimensions of the Sky; the greater Extent of the Divine Bounty and Mercy; the last of these SubjeEts, being so peculiarly comfortable to Sinners, considered somewhat copiously, 338—What sustains the Arch of Heaven, and supports the Globes it contains; the same invisible Hand upholds the Christian in his Course, 344—The Faithfulness of GOD pourtrayed, in the Stability of the heavenly Bodies, and Perpetuity of their Motions; the Unreasonableness of our Unbelief; Motives to an affured Faith, 348—Various Attributes of the Divine Nature appear, with a glimmering Light, in the celestial Luminaries; all shine forth, with the fullest Lustre in CHRIST 7ESUS, 351—The Dignity of Prayer, and Happiness of beving GOD for our Portion, 357—The horrible Ingratitude, and destructive Perverseness, of living without GQD in the World, 359 - All the rolling Worlds on high, punctually obcdient to their Maker's Orders; are a Pattern, in this Respect, and a Provocative to the rational Creation, 362 - The gradual Appearance of Stars; and progressive State of a true Converfion, 366 - The Multitude of Stars; especially in the Galaxy; the more attentively surveyed, the greater Number discovered; this applied to the unsearchable Treasures of Wisdom in the Scriptures, of Merit in CHRIST, of Bliss in Heaven, 367-The celestial Bodies disposed in such a Manner, as to be delightful and serviceable to Man; adorn his Abode, and measure bis Time; a filent Admonition this, to improve the Talent, 370—Brightness of the Stars; Encouragement to Fidelity in the Ministerial Office, 372—Polar Star; its invariable Situation; Guide to the ancient Mariners; such the Word of GOD to our Souls; Persuasive to follow its unerring Dictates, 373-Variety in the Magnitude, and Splendor of the Stars; different Degrees in the World of Glory; yet all the Bleffed completely happy, 375-Projection and Attraction, the

the grand Principles that actuate the Planetary System; Faith and Love bear much the same Proportion, in the Oeconomy of Christianity, 376—The admirable Effects, and extensive Insuences, of Attraction; the Agency of the HOLY GHOST on the human Mind, 378—Vast Gradation in the Scale of Beings; all are Objects of the Divine Care, and full of the Divine Prefence, 382—The surpassing Worth of an immortal Soul; a Solicitude for its final Welfare urged, 387—An unthinking View of the Skies is affecting; much more a rational and devout one, 389—The Scantiness of our Knowledge, with Regard to the celestial Bodies; after all our Search they are Objects of Admiration, rather than of Science; Exhortation to such Pursuits, as are of easy Attainment, and will be of everlasting Advantage, 390—Short Recapitulation of the Whole; and an Hymn of Praise, suited to the Occasion, 392.

N. B. It may feem unaccountable to an unlearned Reader, that Aftronomers should speak such amazing Things; and speak them with such an Air of Assurance: concerning the Distances and Magnitudes; the Motions and Relations, of the heavenly Bodies. I would defire fuch a Person to consider the Case of Eclipses, and with what Exaciness they are calculated. They are not only foretold, but the very Instant of their Beginning is determined. The precise Time of their Continuance is affigned; assigned, almost to the Nicety of a Moment; and what is still more furprising, for the Space of Hundreds or Thoufands of Years to come.—As this is a Matter of Fact, abfolutely indifputable; it is also a very obvious, yet solid Demonstration, that the Principles of Science, on which those Calculations proceed, are not mere Conjecture, or precarious Supposition; but have a real, a certain Foundation, in the Nature and Constitution of Things.

A WIN-

A WINTER-PIECE.

Introduction—Shortness of the Winter's Day—Incessant Rain, producing a Flood—Tempest; its Effects; at Land, by Sea—Pitchy Darkness; riding in it—Thick Rhime—Keen Frost, and Serenity of Weather—Severe Cold, and piercing Winds—Deep Snow—General Thaw—Evergreens—Storm of Hail—Rainbow, 395—402.

MEDITATIONS

AMONG THE

T O M B S.

Every Stone that we look upon, in this Repository of past Ages, is both an Entertainment, and a Monitor.

Plain-Dealer, Vol. I. Nº 42.

M E D I T A T I O N S

AMONG THE

TOMBS.

IN A LETTER TO A LADY.

MADAM,

TRAVELLING lately into Cornwall, I happened to alight at a confiderable Village, in that County: Where, finding myself under an unexpected Necessity of staying a little, I took a Walk to the Church *. The Doors, like the Heaven to which they lead, were wide open; and readily admitted an unworthy Stranger. Pleased with the Opportunity, I resolved to spend a few Minutes under the sacred Roos.

* I had named, in some former Editions, a particular Church, viz.

KILKHAMPTON; where several of the Monuments, described in the following Pages, really exist. But as I thought it convenient, to mention some Cases bere, which are not, according to the best of my Remembrance, referred to in any Inscriptions there; I have now omitted the Name. That Imagination might operate more freely, and the Improvement of the Reader be consulted, without any Thing that should look like a Variation from Truth and Fact.

B

In a Situation fo retired and awful, I could not avoid falling into a Train of Meditations, ferious and mournfully pleafing. Which, I trust, were in some Degree profitable to me, while they possessed and warmed my Thoughts; and, if they may administer any Satisfaction to you, Madam, now they are recollected, and committed to Writing, I shall receive a fresh Pleasure from them.

IT was an ancient Pile; reared by Hands, that, Ages ago, were mouldered into Dust .- Situate in the Centre of a large Burial-Ground; remote from all the Noise and Hurry of tumultuous Life.—The Body spacious; the Structure lofty; the Whole magnificently plain. A Row of regular Pillars extended themselves through the Midft; fupporting the Roof with Simplicity, and with Dignity.—The Light, that passed through the Windows, feemed to fhed a Kind of luminous Obscurity; which gave every Object a grave and venerable Air-The deep Silence, added to the gloomy Afpect, and both heightened by the Loneliness of the Place, greatly increased the Solemnity of the Scene.—A Sort of religious Dread stole insensibly on my Mind, while I advanced, all penfive and thoughtful, along the inmost Aisle. Such a Dread, as hushed every ruder Passion, and diffipated all the gay Images of an alluring World.

Having adored that Eternal Majesty, who, far from being confined to Temples made with Hands, has Heaven for his Throne, and the Earth for his Footstool—I took particular Notice of a handsome Alter-piece; presented, as I was afterwards informed, by the Master-Builders of Stow*; out of Gratitude, I presume, to that gracious God, who carried them through their Work,

^{*} The Name of a grand Seat, belonging to the late Earl of Bath: remarkable formerly for its excellent Workmanship, and elegant Furniture; once the principal Resort of the Quality and Gentry of the West; but

Work, and enabled them to "bring forth their Top-" stone with Joy."

O! How amiable is Gratitude! especially when it has the supreme Benefactor for it's Object. I have always looked upon Gratitude, as the most exalted Principle that can actuate the Heart of Man. It has something noble, disinterested, and (if I may be allowed the Term) generously devout. Repentance indicates our Nature sallen, and Prayer turns chiefly upon a Regard to one's self. But the Exercises of Gratitude substitted in Paradise, when there was no Fault to deplore; and will be perpetuated in Heaven, when "God shall be All in all."

The Language of this sweet Temper is, "I am unspeakably obliged: What Return shall I make?"—And, surely, it is no improper Expression of an unseigned Thankfulness, to decorate our Creator's Courts, and beautify "the Place where his Honour dwelleth." Of old, the Habitation of his Feet was glorious: let it not, now, be fordid or contemptible. It must grieve an ingenuous Mind, and be a Reproach to any People, to have their own Houses wainscotted with Cedar, and painted with Vermilion; while the Temple of the Lord of Hosts is destitute of every decent Ornament.

HERE I recollected, and was charmed with, Solomon's fine Address to the Almighty, at the Dedication of his famous Temple. With immense Charge, and exquisite Skill, he had erected the most rich and finished Structure, that the Sun ever saw. Yet, upon a Review of his Work, and a Reslection on the transcendent Perfections of the Godhead, how he exalts the one, and abases the other!—The Building was too glorious, for but now demolished, laid even with the Ground, and scarce one Stone lest upon another.—So that Corn may grow, or Nettles spring, where stow lately stood.

the

the mightiest Monarch to inhabit; too facred, for unhallowed Feet even to enter; yet infinitely too mean, for the Deity to reside in. It was, and the Royal Worshipper acknowledged it to be, a most marvellous Vouchsafement in uncreated Excellency, to "put his Name" there." The whole Passage breathes such a Delicacy, and is animated with such a Sublimity of Sentiment, that I cannot persuade myself to pass on without repeating it. * But will GOD indeed dwell on Earth? Bebold! The Heaven, and Heaven of Heavens, cannot contain thee! how much less this Heuse that I have builded!—Incomparable Saying! Worthy the wifest of Men. Who would not choose to possess such an elevated Devotion, rather than to own all the glittering Materials of that sumptuous Edifice?

* 1 Kings viii. 27. But will-A fine abrupt Beginning, most fignificantly describing the Amazement and Rapture of the Royal Prophet's Mind !-GOD: He uses no Epithet, where Writers of inferior Discernment would have been fond to multiply them: But speaks of the Deity as an incomprehensible Being, whose Perfections and Glories are exalted above all Praise. - Dwell: To bestow on finful Creatures a propitious Look; to favour them with a transient Visit of Kindness; even this were an utterable Obligation. Will he then vouchsafe to fix his Abode among them, and take up his stated Residence with them?—Indeed! A Word, in this Connexion, peculiarly emphatical; expressive of a Condescension, wonderful and extraordinary almost beyond all Credibility. Behold: Intimating the continued, or rather the increasing Surprise of the Speaker, and awakening the Attention of the Hearer. Behold! the Heaven: The spacious Concave of the Firmament; that wide-extended Azure Circumference, in which Worlds unnumbered perform their Revolutions, is too feanty an Apartment for the Godhead .- Nay, The Heaven of Heavens: Those vastly higher Tracts, which lie far beyond the Limits of human Survey; to which our very Thoughts can hardly foar; even These (unbounded as they are) cannot afford an adequate Habitation for JEHOVAH: even these dwindle into a Point, when compared with the Infinitude of his Essence; even These " are as nothing before him."-How much less proportionate is this poor diminutive Speck (which I have been erecting and embellishing) to so august a Presence, so immense a Majesty!

WE are apt to be ftruck with Admiration, at the Stateliness and Grandeur of a masterly Performance in Architecture. And, perhaps, on a Sight of the ancient Sanctuary, should have made the fuperficial Observation of the Disciples, "What Manner of Stones, and what "Buildings are here!"-But what a nobler Turn of Thought, and juster Tatte of Things, does it discover; to join with Ifrael's King, in celebrating the Condescension of the divine Inhabitant! That the High and Lofty One, who fills Immensity with his Glory, should, in a peculiar Manner, fix his Abode there! Should there manifest an extraordinary Degree of his benedictive Prefence; permit finful Mortals to approach his Majesty; and promise "to make them joyful in his House of Prayer!"—This should more fensibly affect our Hearts, than the most curious Arrangement of Stones can delight our Eyes.

Nay, the everlafting God does not distain to dwell in our Souls by his Holy Spirit; and to make even our Bodies his Temple.—Tell me, ye that frame critical Judgments, and balance nicely the Distinction of Things; "Is this most astonishing, or most rejoicing?"—He humbleth himself, the Scripture assures us, even to behold the Things that are in Heaven *. 'Tis a most condescending Favour, if HE pleases to take the least approving Notice of Angels and Arch-angels, when they bow down in Homage from their celestial Thrones. Will He then graciously regard, will He be united, most intimately united to poor, polluted, breathing Dust?—Unparallel'd Honour! Invaluable Privilege! Be this my Portion, and I shall not covet Crowns, nor envy Conquerors.

* Pfal. cxiii. 6.

Bur let me remember, what a Sanctity of Disposition, and Uprightness of Conversation, so exalted a Relation demands: Remember this, "and rejoice with trembling."-Durst I commit any Iniquity, while I tread these hallowed Courts? Could the Jewish High-Priest allow Himfelf in any known Transgression, while he made that folemn yearly Entrance * into the Holy of Holies, and stood before the immediate presence of JEHOVAH? No, truly. In Juch Circumstances, a thinking Person must shudder at the most remote Solicitation, to any wilful Offence. I should now be shocked at the least Indecency of Behaviour, and am apprehenfive of every Appearance of Evil.—And why do we not carry this holy Jealoufy, into all our ordinary Life? Why do we not, in every Place +, reverence ourselves; as Persons dedicated to the Divinity, as living Temples of the Godhead? For, if we are real, and not merely nominal Christians, the God of Glory, according to his own Promise, ‡ dwells in us, and walks in us.—O! that this one Doctrine of our Religion might operate, with an abiding Efficacy, upon our Consciences! It would be instead of a thousand Laws, to regulate our Conduct; instead of a thousand Motives to quicken us in Holiness. Under the Influence of fuch a Conviction, we should study to maintain a Purity of Intention; a Dignity of Action; and to walk worthy of that transcendently ma-

* Heb. ix. 7.

[†] πανίων δε μαλις' αισχυνεο σ' αυίον, was the favourite Maxim of Pythagoras, and supposed to be one of the best moral Precepts, ever given to the heathen World. With what superior Force, and very singular Advantage, does the Argument take Place in the Christian Scheme? Where we are taught to regard ourselves, not merely as intellectual Beings, who have Reason for our Monitor; but as consecrated Creatures, who have a God of the most consummate Persection, ever with us, ever in us.

jestic Being, who admits us to a Fellowship with Himfelf, and with his Son Jesus Christ.

The next Thing, which engaged my Attention, was the Lettered Floor. The Pavement, fomewhat like Ezekiel's Roll, was written over from one End to the other. I foon perceived the Comparison to hold good, in another Respect; and the Inscriptions to be Matter of Mourning, Lamentation, and Woe *." They seemed to court my Observation; silently inviting me to read them. And what would these dumb Monitors inform me of?—" That beneath their little Circumserences, "were deposited such and such Pieces of Clay, which once lived, and moved, and talked: That they had received a Charge to preserve their Names, and were the remaining Trustees of their Memory."

An! faid I, is fuch my Situation! The adorable Creator around me, and the Bones of my Fellow-Creatures under me! Surely, then, I have great Reafon to cry out, with the revering Patriarch, How dreadful is this place†! Serioushess and Devotion become this House for ever. May I never enter it lightly or irreverently; but with a profound Awe, and godly Fear!

O! that they were wife †! faid the inspired Penman. It was his last Wish for his dear People. He breathed it out, and gave up the Ghost.—But what is Wisdom? It consists not in refined Speculations; accurate Researches into Nature; or an universal Acquaintance with History. The divine Lawgiver settles this important Point in his next Aspiration: O! that they understood this! That they had right Apprehensions of their spiritual Interests, and eternal Concerns! That they had Eyes to discern, and Inclinations to pursue, the Things which belong to their Peace!—But how shall they attain this valuable Knowledge? I fend them not, adds the illustrious Teacher, to turn over all the Volumes of Literature: They may acquire, and much more expeditiously, this Science of Life, by considering their latter End. This Spark of Heaven is often loft under the Glitter of pompous Erudition; but shines clearly, in the gloomy Mansions of the Tomb. Drowned is this gentle Whisper, amidst the Noise of secular Affairs; but speaks distinctly, in the Retirements of serious Contemplation.—Behold! how providentally I am brought to the School of Wisdom! * The Grave, is the most faithful + Master; and these Instances of Mortality, the most instructive Lessons.-Come then, calm Attention, and compose my Thoughts; Come, thou celestial Spirit, and enlighten my Mind; that I may fo peruse these awful Pages, as to become "wife unto Salvation."

^{*} Ezek, ii. 10. + Gen. xxviii. 17. † Deut. xxxii. 29.

Examining the Records of Mortality, I found the Memorials of a ‡ promifcuous Multitude. They were huddled, at least they rested together, without any Regard to Rank or Seniority. None were ambitious of the uppermost Rooms, or chief Seats, in this House of Mourning; none entertained fond and eager Expectations of being honourably greeted, in their darkfome Cells. The Man of Years and Experience, reputed as an Oracle in his Generation, was content to lie down at the Feet of a Babe. In this House, appointed for all Living, the Servant was equally accommodated, Night Thoughts.

Hor.

^{*} The Man how wife, who fick of gaudy Scenes, Is led by Choice to take his fav'rite Walk Beneath Death's gloomy, filent, Cypress Shades, Unpierc'd by Vanity's fantastic Ray?

To read his Monuments, to weigh his Dust, Visit his Vaults, and dwell among the Tombs!

[†] Wait the great Teacher Death. Pore † Mista Senum ac Juvenum densantur Funera.

and lodged in the same Story, with his Master. The poor Indigent lay as softly, and slept as soundly, as the most opulent Possessor. All the Distinction that subsisted, was a grassy Hillock, bound with Osiers; or a sepulchral Stone, ornamented with Imagery.

Why then, faid my working Thoughts, O! why should we raise such a mighty Stir, about Superiority and Precedence; when the next Remove, will reduce us all to a State of equal Meanness? Why should we exalt ourselves, or debase others? since we must all, one Day, be upon a common Level, and blended together in the same undistinguished Dust? O! that this Consideration might humble my own, and others Pride; and sink our Imaginations as low, as our Habitation will shortly be!

Among these confused Relics of Humanity, there are, without Doubt, Persons of contrary Interests, and contradicting Sentiments. But Death, like fome able Daysman, has laid his Hand on the contending Parties; and brought all their Differences to an * amicable Conclu-Here Enemies, fworn Enemies, dwell together in Unity. They drop every imbittered Thought, and forget that they once were Foes. Perhaps, their crumbling Bones mix, as they moulder: And those who, while they lived, stood aloof in irreconcileable Variance; here fall into mutual Embraces, and even incorporate with each other in the Grave. - O! that we might learn from these friendly Ashes, not to perpetuate the Memory of Injuries; not to foment the Fever of Resentment; nor cherish the Turbulence of Passion. That there may be as little Animosity and Disagreement in the Land of the Living, as there is in the Congregation of the Dead!-

^{*} Hi Motus Animorum, atque hæc Certamina tanta, Pulveris exigui Jactu compressa quiescent. Virg.

But I suspend for a while such general Observations, and address myself to a more particular Inquiry.

YONDER white Stone, Emblem of the Innocence it covers, informs the Beholder of One, who breathed out its tender Soul, almost in the Instant of receiving it. There, the peaceful Infant, without so much as knowing what Labour and Vexation mean, "* lies still and " is quiet; it sleeps and is at Rest." Staying only to wash away its native Impurity in the Laver of Regeneration, it bid a speedy Adieu to Time, and terrestrial Things.-What did the little hafty Sojourner find, fo forbidding and difguftful in our upper World, to occafion its precipitate Exit? 'Tis written, indeed, of its fuffering Saviour, that when he had tasted the Vinegar mingled with Gall, He would not drink †. And did our new-come Stranger, begin to fip the Cup of Life: but, perceiving the Bitterness, turn away its Head, and refuse the Draught? Was this the Cause why the wary Babe only opened its Eyes; just looked on the Light, and then withdrew, into the more inviting Regions of undifturbed Repose?

HAPPY Voyager! No fooner launched than arrived at the Haven ‡!—But more eminently happy they, who have passed the Waves, and weathered all the Storms, of a troublesome and dangerous World! Who, "through "many Tribulations, have entered into the Kingdom "of Heaven;" and thereby brought Honour to their divine Convoy, administered Comfort to the Companions of their Toil, and left an instructive Example to succeeding Pilgrims.

* Job iii. 13. † Matt. xxvii. 34.

‡ Happy the Babe, who privileg'd by Fate
To fhorter Labour, and a lighter Weight,
Receiv'd but Yesterday the Gift of Breath,
Order'd To-morrow to return to Death.

Prio

PRIOR'S Sol.

HIGHLY

HIGHLY favoured Probationer! accepted, without being exercifed!—It was thy peculiar Privilege, not to feel the flightest of those Evils, which oppress thy surviving Kindred; which frequently fetch Groans, from the most manly Fortitude, or most elevated Faith. The Arrows of Calamity, barbed with Anguish, are often fixed deep in our choicest Comforts. The fiery Darts of Temptation, shot from the Hand of Hell, are always slying in Showers around our Integrity. To thee, sweet Babe, both these Distresses and Dangers were alike unknown.

Consider this, ye mourning Parents, and dry up your Tears. Why should you lament, that your little ones are crowned with Victory, before the Sword was drawn, or the Conflict begun?—Perhaps, the supreme Disposer of Events, foresaw some inevitable Snare of Temptation forming, or some dreadful Storm of Adversity impending. And why should you be so dissatisfied, with that kind Precaution; which housed your pleasant Plant, and removed into Shelter a tender Flower, before the Thunders roared: before the Lightnings slew: before the Tempest poured its Rage?—O remember! they are not lost, but taken away from the Evil to come *.

At the fame Time, let Survivors, doomed to bear the Heat and Burden of the Day, for their Encouragement reflect—That it is more honourable to have entered the Lifts, and to have fought the good Fight, before they come off Conquerors. They who have bore the Crofs, and submitted to afflictive Providences, with a chearful Refignation; have girded up the Loins of their Mind, and performed their Master's Will, with an honest and perfevering Fidelity:—These, having glorisied their Redeemer on Earth, will, probably, be as Stars of the first Magnitude in Heaven. They will shine with brighter Beams, be replenished with stronger Joys, in their LORD's everlasting Kingdom.

Here lies the Grief of a fond Mother, and the blafted Expectation of an indulgent Father.—The Youth grew up, like a well-watered Plant; he shot deep, rose high, and bid fair for Manhood. But just as the Cedar began to tower; and promised, ere long, to be the Pride of the Wood, and Prince among the neighbouring Trees—Behold! the Ax is laid unto the Root; the satal Blow struck; and all its branching Honours tumbled to the Dust.—And did he sall alone? No: The Hopes of his Father that begat him, and the pleasing Prospects of her that bare him, fell, and were crushed together with him, DOUBTLESS, it would have pierced one's Heart, to have beheld the tender Parents, following the breathless Youth, to his long Home. Perhaps, drowned in Tears, and all over-whelmed with Sorrows, they stood, like weeping statues, on this very Spot .- Methinks, I see the deeply-diffressed Mourners attending the sad Solemnity. How they wring their Hands, and pour Floods from their Eyes!—Is it Fancy? or do I really hear the passionate Mother, in an Agony of Affliction, taking her final Leave of the Darling of her Soul? Dumb she remained, while the awful Obsequies were performing; dumb with Grief, and leaning upon the Partner of her Woes. But now the inward Anguish struggles for Vent; it grows too big to be repressed. She advances to the Brink of the Grave. All her Soul is in her Eyes. She fastens one more Look upon the dear doleful Object, before the Pit shuts its Mouth upon him. And as she looks, fhe cries; in broken Accents, interrupted by many a rifing Sob, she cries-" Farewel, my Son! my Son!

"Son! my only Beloved! Would to God I had died for thee!—Farewel, my Child; and farewel all my earthly Happiness;—I shall never more see Good, in the Land of the Living:—Attempt not to comfort me.—I will go mourning, all my Days, till my grey Hairs come down, with Sorrow, to the Grave."

FROM this affecting Representation, let Parents be convinced, how highly it concerns them to cultivate the Morals, and fecure the immortal Interests of their Children.-If you really love the Offspring of your own Bodies; if your Bowels yearn over those amiable Pledges of conjugal Endearment; spare no Pains; give all Diligence, I entreat you, to "bring them up in the Nur-"ture and Admonition of the Lord." Then, may you have Joy in their Life, or Confolation in their Death. If their Span is prolonged; their unblameable and useful Conduct, will be the Staff of your Age, and a Balm for declining Nature. Or, if the Number of their Years be cut off in the midst; you may commit their Remains to the Dust, with much the same comfortable Expectations, as you fend the Survivors to Places of genteel Education. You may commit them to the Duft, with chearing Hopes of receiving them again to your Arms, inexpressibly improved in every noble and endearing Accomplishment.

'Tis certainly a fevere Trial; and much more afflictive, than I am able to imagine; to refign a lovely blooming Creature, fprung from your own Loins, to the gloomy Recesses of Corruption. Thus to refign Him, after having been long dandled upon your Knees; united to your Affections by a thousand Ties of Tenderness; and now become both the Delight of your Eyes, and the Support of your Family!—To have such a one torn from your Bosom, and thrown into Darkness; doubtless, it must must be like a Dagger in your Hearts.—But O! how much more cutting to you, and confounding to the Child. to have the Soul separated from God; and, for shameful Ignorance, or early Impiety, transmitted to Places of eternal Torment! How would it aggravate your Diffress. and add a distracting Emphasis to all your Sighs, if you should follow the pale Corpie with these bitter Reflections;-" This dear Creature, though long ago capa-" ble of knowing Good and Evil, is gone out of the "World, before it had learned the great Defign of com-" ing into it. A fhort-lived momentary Existence, it " received from me; but no good Instructions, no holy "Admonitions, nothing to further its Well-being in " that everlasting State, upon which it is now entered. "The poor Bedy is configured to the Coffin, and carried " out to consume away, in the cold and filent Grave. " And what Reason have I to suppose, that the precious " Soul is in a better Condition? May I not justly fear, " that, fentenced by the righteous Judge, it is going, " or gone away, into the Pains of endless Punishment? " — Perhaps, while I am bewailing its untimely Depar-" ture; it may be curfing, in outer Darkness; that ever " to be deplored, that most calamitous Day, when it " was born of fuch a carelefs, ungodly Parent, as I have " been."

Nothing, I think, but the Gnawings of that Worm which never dies, can equal the Anguish of these self-condemning Thoughts. The Tortures of a Rack must be an easy Suffering, compared with the Stings and Horror of such a Remorse.—How earnestly do I wish; that as many as are entrusted with the Management of Children, would take timely Care to prevent these Scourges of Conscience; by endeavouring to conduct their Minds into an early Knowledge of Christ, and a cordial Love of his Truth.

On this Hand is lodged One, whose Sepulchral Stone, tells a most pitiable Tale indeed! Well may the little Images, reclined over the sleeping Ashes, hang down their Heads with that pensive Air! None can consider to mournful a Story, without feeling fome Touches of fympathizing Concern.—His Age Twenty-eight; his Death fudden; himself cut down in the Prime of Life; amidst all the Vivacity and Vigour of Manhood; while " his Breafts were full of Milk, and his Bones moistened "with Marrow."—Probably, he entertained no Apprehenfions of the evil Hour. And indeed, who could have fuspected, that so bright a Sun should go down at Noon? To human Appearance, his Hill stood strong. Length of Days feemed written in his fanguine Countenance. He folaced himfelf with the Prospect of a long. long Series of earthly Satisfactions.—When, lo! an unexpected Stroke descends! descends from that mighty Arm, which "overturneth the Mountains by their Roots; " and crushes the imaginary Hero, * before the Moth;"

^{*} Job iv. 19. which—Ad instant, ad modum, Tinea—I retain this Interpretation, both as it is most suitable to my Purpose, and as it is patronized by some eminent Commentators; especially the celebrated Schulens. Though I cannot but give the Preserence to the Opinion of a judicious Friend, who would render the Passage more literally, Before the Face of a Moth: Making it to represent a Creature so exceedingly strail, that even a Moth, slying against it, may dash it to Pieces.—Which, besides its closer Correspondence with the exact Import of the Hebrew, presents us with a much siner Image of the most extreme Imbecility. For it certainly implies, a far greater Degree of Weakness, to be crushed by the feeble Flutter of the feeblest Creature, than only to be crushed as easily as that Creature, by the Hand of Man.—The French Version is very expressive and beautiful; à la Rencentre d'un Vernisseau.

as quickly, and more easily, than our Fingers press such a feeble sluttering Insect to Death.

Perhaps, the nuptial foys were all he thought on .-Were not fuch the Breathings of his enamoured Soul? "Yet a very little while, and I shall possess the utmost of my Wishes. I shall call my Charmer mine; and, in her, enjoy whatever my Heart can crave."—In the Midst of such enchanting Views, had some faithful Friend but foftly reminded him of an opening Grave, and the End of all Things; how unfeasonable would he have reckoned the Admonition! Yet, though all warm with Life, and rich in visionary Blifs, he was even then tottering upon the Brink of both.—Dreadful Viciffitude! to have the bridal * Festivity turned into the funeral Solemnity! Deplorable Misfortune! to be shipwrecked in the very Haven! and to perish even in Sight of Happiness What a memorable Proof is here of the Frailty of Man, in his best Estate! Look, O! look on this Monument, ye Gay and Careless! Attend to this Date; and hoast no more of To-morrow.

Who can tell, but the Bride-maids, girded with Gladness, had prepared the Marriage-Bed? Had decked it with the richest Covers, and dressed it in Pillows of Down? When—Oh! trust not in Youth, or Strength, or in any thing mortal; for there is nothing certain, nothing to be depended on, beneath the unchangeable Plin. Lib. V. Epist. 26.

^{*} A Distress of this Kind is painted in very affecting Colours by Pliny, in an Epistle to Morcellinus; O triste plane accrbumque Funus! O Morte ipsa Mortis Tempus indignius! Jam destinata erat egregio Juveni; jam electus Nuptiarum Dies; jam nos advocati. Quod Gaudium quo Marore mutatum est! Non possum exprimere Verbis, quantum Animo vulnus acceperim, quum audivi Fundanum ipsum (ut multa luctuosa Dolor invenit) pracipientem, quod in Vestes, Margaritas Gemmas, suerat erogaturus, hoc in Thura, & Unguenta, & Odores, impenderetur.

Gon-Death, relentless Death, is making him another Kind of Bed in the Dust of the Earth. Unto this he must be conveyed, not with a splendid Procession of joyous Attendants; but stretched in the gloomy Hearse, and followed by a Train of Mourners. On this he must take. up a lonely Lodging, nor ever be releafed, "till the "Heavens are no more."—In vain does the confenting Fair-one put on her Ornaments, and expect her Spouse. Did she not, like Sisera's Mother, look out of the Lattice; chide the Delays of her Beloved; and wonder " why his Chariot was fo long in coming?" Little thinking, that the intended Bridegroom had for ever done with transitory Things! That now everlasting Cares employ his Mind, without one fingle Remembrance of his lovely Lucinda!-Go, disappointed Virgin! Go, mourn the Uncertainty of all created Blifs! Teach thy Soul to afpire after a fure and immutable Felicity! For the once gay and gallant Fidelio sleeps in other Embraces; even in the icy Arms of Death! Forgetful, eternally forgetful, of the World-and thee.

HITHERTO, one is tempted to exclaim against the King of Terrors, and call him capriciously cruel. He seems, by beginning at the wrong End of the Register, to have inverted the Laws of Nature. Passing over the Couch of decrepid Age, he has nipped Infancy in its Bud; blasted Youth in its Eloom; and torn up Manhood in its full Maturity.—Terrible indeed are these Providences, yet not unsearchable the Counsels:

For us they ficken, and for us they die *.

Such Strokes, must not only grieve the Relatives, but furprise the whole Neighbourhood. They sound a powerful Alarm to heedless dreaming Mortals, and are intended as a Remedy for our carnal Security. Such Passing-Bells, inculcate loudly our Lord's Admonition: "Take ye Heed, Watch, and Pray: for ye know not when the Time is."—We nod, like intoxicated Creatures, upon the very Verge of a tremendous Precipice. These attonishing Dispensations, are the kind Messengers of Heaven; to rouse us from our Supineness, and quicken us into timely Circumspection. I need not, surely, accommodate them with Language, nor act as their Interpreter. Let every one's Conscience be awake, and this will appear their awful Meaning—"O! ye Sons of "Men, in the Midst of Life you are in Death. No State, " no Circumstance, can ascertain your Preservation a single Moment. So strong is the Tyrant's Arm, that " nothing can refift its Force; so true his Aim, that no-* thing can elude the Blow. Sudden as Lightning, fome-"times, is his Arrow launched; and wounds, and kills, in "the Twinkling of an Eye. Never promise yourselves "Safety in any Expedient, but constant Preparation. "The fatal Shafts fly fo promifcuously, that none can "guess the next Victim. Therefore, be ye always ready: "for in fuch an Hour as ye think not, the final Summons cometh."

^{*} Night Thoughts.

Be ye always ready: for in fuch an Hour as Te think not—Important Admonition! Methinks, it reverberates from Sepulchre to Sepulchre; and addresses me with Line upon Line, Precept upon Precept.—The reiterated Warning, I acknowledge, is too needful; may co-operating Grace, render it effectual: The momentous Truth, though worthy to be engraved, on the Tables of a most tenacious Memory; is but slightly sketched, on the transfient Flow of Passion. We see our Neighbours fall; we turn pale at the Shock; and feel, perhaps, a trembling Dread. No sooner are they removed from our Sight;

Sight; but, driven in the Whirl of Business, or lulled in the Languors of Pleasure, we forget the Providence and neglect its Errand. The Impression made on our unstable Minds, is like the Trace of an Arrow, through the penetrated Air; or the Path of a Keel, in the furrowed Wave.—Strange Stupidity! To cure it, another Monitor bespeaks me, from a neighbouring Stone. It contains the Narrative of an unhappy Mortal, snatched from his Friends, and hurried to the awful Bar; without Leisure, either to take a last Farewel of the One, or to put up so much as a single Prayer preparatory for the other: killed, according to the usual Expression, by a studden Stroke of Casualty:

Was it then a random Stroke? Doubtless, the Blow came from an aiming, though invisible Hand. God presideth over the Armies of Heaven; God ruleth among the Inhabitants of the Earth; and God conducteth, what Men call Chance. Nothing, nothing comes to pass through a blind and undifcerning Fatality. If Accidents happen; they happen according to the exact Foreknowledge, and conformably to the determined Counfels, of eternal Wisdom. The Lord, with whom are the Issues of Death, signs the Warrant, and gives the high Commission. The seemingly fortuitous Disaster is only the Agent, or the Instrument, appointed to execute the supreme Decree. When the King of Ifrael was mortally wounded, it feemed to be a cafual Shot. A certain Man drew a Bow at a Venture *. - At a Venture; as he thought. But his Hand was strengthened by an omnipotent Aid; and the Shaft levelled, by an unerring Eye. So that, when we term Cafualty, is really Providence; accomplishing deliberate Designs, but concealing its own Interpolition.—How comforting this Reflection! Admirably adapted, to footh the throbbing Augusth of the Mourners, and compose their Spirits into a quiet Submission! Excellently suited, to dissipate the Fears of godly Survivors, and create a calm Intrepidity even amidit innumerable Perils!

^{* 1} Kings xxii. 34.

How thin is the Partition, between this World and another! How jasse the Transition, from Time to Eternity! The Partition, nothing more than the Breath in our Nostrils; and the Transition may be made, in the Twinkling of an Eve.-Poor Chremius, I remember, arose from the Diversion of a Card-Table, and dropt into the Dwellings of Darkness.-One Night, Corinna was all Galety in her Spirits, all Finery in her Apparel, at a magnificent Ball. The next Night fine lay pale and fiff, an extended Corple, and ready to be mingled with the mouldering Dead. -Young Attitus lived to fee his ample and commodious Sear completed; but not to spend one joyous Hour, under the stately Roof. The Sathes were hung, to admit the Day; but the Mafter's Eves were closed in endles Night. The Apartments were furnished, to invite Society, or administer Repose; but their Lord reits in the lower Parts of the Earth, in the foliary, filest Chambers of the Tomb. The Gardens were planned, and a thousand elegant Decorations defigned; but alas! their intended Polifeffor, is gone down to " the Place of Skulls," is gone down to the Valley of the Shadow of Death.

While I am recollecting, many, I question not, are experienting the same tragical Vicifficule. The Eyes of that sublime Being—who sits upon the Circle of the Earth, and views all its Inhabitants with one comprehensive Glance—even now behold many Tents in Affliction.

Such

Such Affliction, as overwhelmed the Egyphans in that fatal Night, when the definiting Angel freathed his Arrows in all the Pride of their Strength.—Some, finking to the Floor from their safe Chair; and deaf even amidit the pierting Shrieks of their diffracted Relations.—Some, giving up the Ghoft, as they fit retired, or he reclined, under the floady Arbour, to take the Sweets of the flowery Scene.—Some, as they fall, affociated with a Parry of Plagure, along the dancing Stream, and through the laughing Meads. Nor is the grim Intruder mollified, though Wine and Music flow around.—Some interrupted, as they are returning Home; and some interrupted, as they are returning Home; and some interrupted, as they enter upon an important Negociation.—Some arrested, with the Gain of Injustice in their Hands; and some surprised, in the very Act of Letting I, or the Attempt of Cruzing.

Legions, Legions of Dilafters, fuch as no Prudence can foresee, and no Care prevent, lie in wait to accomplish our Doom. A farring Hirle may throw his Rider; may at once dash his Body against the Stones, and fling his Soul into the invisible World. A State of Committee may tumble into the Street, and crush the unwary Past senger under the Ruins. Even a single Tile, dropping from the Roof, may be as fatal as the Fall of the whole Structure. - So frail, to very attenuated is the Thread of Life, that it not only burits before the Szorm, but breaks even at a Breeze. The most common Occurrences, those, from which we suspect not the least Hair, may prove the Weapons of our Defruction. A Grapeitone, a defpicable Fly, may be more mortal than Goliash, with all his formidable Armour.-Nav, if God give Command, our very Company become hilling. The Air we breathe, is our Bane: and the Food we tas, the Vehicle of Death. - That last Enemy has unnumbered Avenues for his Approach. Yez; hes intrenched in our very Boson, and holds his Fortress in the Seat of our Life. The crimson Fluid, which distributes Health, is impregnated with the Seeds of Death. Heat may inflame it, or Toil oppress it; and make it destroy the Parts, it was designed to cherish. Some unseen Impediment may obstruct its Passage, or some unknown Violence may divert its Course; in either of which Cases, it acts the Part of a poisonous Draught or a deadly Stab.

Ah! in what Perils is vain Life engaged!
What slight Neglects, what trivial Faults destroy
The heardiest Frame! Of Indolence, of Toil
We die; of Want, of Supersluity.
The all-surrounding Heav'n, the vital Air,
Is big with Death.

Since then we are so liable to be dispossessed of this earthly Tabernacle, let Us look upon Ourselves only as Tenants at Will: and hold Ourselves in perpetual Readiness, to depart at a Moment's Warning. Without fuch an habitual Readiness, we are like Wretches, that fleep on the Top of a Mast, while a horrid Gulph yawns, or furious Waves rage, below. And where can be the Peace, what the Satisfaction, of fuch a State?—Whereas, a prepared Condition will inspire a Chearfulness of Temper, not to be difmayed by any alarming Accident; and create a Firmness of Mind, not to be overthrown by the most threatening Dangers. When the City is fortified with Walls, furnished with Provision, guarded by able and resolute Troops; what have the Inhabitants to fear? what may they not enjoy? So, just so, or rather by a much furer Band, are connected the real Tafte of Life, and the constant Thought of Death.

I SAID, Our very Comforts may become killing.—And fee the Truth inscribed by the Hand, sealed with the Signet, of Fate. The Marble, which graces yonder Pillar, informs me, that, near it, are deposited the Remains of Sophronia; the much lamented Sophronia, who died in Child-bed.—How often does this Calamity happen! The Branch shoots; but the Stem withers. The Babe forings to Light; but She that bare Him, breathes her last. She gives Life, but gives it (O pitiable Confideration!) at the Expence of her own; and becomes, at once, a Mother, and a Corple. Or else, perhaps, She expires in severe Pangs, and is Herself a Tomb for her Infant; while the melancholy Complaint of a Monarch's Woe. is the Epitaph for them both; The Children are come to the Birth, and there is not Strength to bring forth *.- Less to be lamented, in my Opinion, this Misfortune than the other. Better, for the tender Stranger, to be stopped in the Porch; than to enter, only to converse with Affliction. Better, to find a Grave in the Womb; than to be exposed on a hazardous World, without the Guardian of its infantile Years, without the faithful Guide of its Youth.

This Monument is distinguished by its finer Materials, and more delicate Appendages. It seems to have taken its Model from an affluent Hand; directed by a generous Heart; which thought it could never do enough for the Deceased.—It seems, also, to exhibit an emblematical Picture of Sophronia's Person and Accomplishments. Is her Beauty, or, what is more than Beauty, her white-rob'd Innocence, represented by the snowy Colour? The Surface, smoothly polished, like her amiable Temper, and engaging Manners. The Whole adorned, in a well-judged Medium, between extravagant Pomp, and fordid Negligence; like her undissembled Goodness, remote from the least Oftentation, yet in all Points exemplary.—But ah! how vain, were all these endearing Charms! How vain, the Lustre of thy sprightly Eye! How vain, the Bloom of thy bridal Youth! How vain, the Honours of thy superior Birth! How unable to secure the lovely Possessor, from the favage Violence of Death!—How inessectual, the universal Esteem of thy Acquaintance; the Fondness of thy transported Husband; or even the spotless Integrity of thy Character; to prolong thy Span, or procure Thee a short Reprieve;—The Concurrence of all these Circumstances, reminds me of those beautiful and tender Lines;

Ifa. xxxvii. 3.
 C 4

How lov'd, how valu'd once, avails Thee not,
To whom related, or by whom begot.

A Heap of Dust alone remains of Thee:
'Tis all THOU art!—and all the PROUD shall be *!

Pope's Miscell.

Yet.

* These Verses are inscribed on a small, but elegant Monument, lately erected in the great Church at Northampton. Which, in the Hieroglyphical Decorations, corresponds with the Description introduced above. In this Circumstance particularly, that it is dedicated to the Memory of an amiable Woman, Mrs. ANNE STONHOUSE; the excellent Wife of my worthy Friend Dr. STONHOUSE. Who has seen all the Powers of that Healing Art, to which I, and so many others, have been greatly indebted, failing in their Attempts to preferve a Life dearer to Him than his own.

Nec prosunt Domino, quæ prosunt omnibus, Artes.

No longer his all-healing Art avails; But ev'ry Remedy its Master fails.

In the Midst of this tender Distress, He has sought some Kind of Consolation, even from the sepulchral Marble. By teaching it to speak, at once his Esteem for her Memory; and his Veneration for that Religion, which She so eminently adorned. Nor could this be more significantly done, than by summing up her Character, in that concise, but comprehensive Sentence, A SINCERE CHRISTIAN. Concise enough, to be the Motto for a mourning Ring; yet as comprehensive,

YET, though unable to divert the Stroke, Christianity is fovereign to pluck out the Sting of Death. Is not this the silent Language of those Lamps, which burn, and of that Heart, which slames; of those Palms, which slourish; and of that Crown, which glitters, in the well-imitated as the most enlarged Sphere of personal, social, and religious Worth. For, whatsoever Things are pure; whatsoever Things are lovely; whatsoever Things are of good Report; are they not all included in that grand and noble Aggregate, A sincere Christian?

The first Lines, considered in such a Connection, are wonderfully plaintive and pathetic;

How lov'd, how valu'd once, avails Thee not; To whom related, or by whom begot.

They found, at least in my Ears, like the Voice of Sorrow mingled with Admiration. The Speaker feems to have been lost, for a while, in melancholy Contemplation; suddenly breaks out into this abrupt Encomium; then melts into Tears, and can proceed no farther. Yet, in this Case, how eloquent is Silence! While it hints the universal Esteem which attended, and the Superiority of Birth which distinguished, the decensed Wise; it expresses, beyond all the Pomp of Words, the yearning Affection, and Heart-selt Affliction, of the surviving Husband.—Amidst the Group of monumental Marbles, which are lavish of their Panegyric; this, I think, resembles the incomparable Address of the Painter. Who, having placed round a beautiful expiring Virgin, her Friends in all the Agonies of Grief; represented the unequalled Anguish of her Father, with far greater Liveliness and Strength, or rather with an inexpressible Emphasis, by drawing a Veil over his Face.

If the last Lines, are a wide Departure from the beaten Track of our Modern Epitaphs, and the very Reverse of their high-slown Compliments,

A Heap of Dust alone remains of Thee!
'Tis all THOU art! and all the PROUD shall be!

they are not without a Precedent, and one of the most consummate Kind. Since they breathe the very Spirit of that sacred Elegy, in which all the Heart of the Hero and the Friend, seems to be dissolved; Howare the Mighty fallen, and the Weapons of War perified! 2 Sam. i. 27.— They remind the Reader, of that awful Lesson, which was originally distated imitated and gilded Marble? Do they not, to the difcerning Eye, describe the Vigilance of her Faith; the Fervency of her Devotion; her Victory over the World; and the celestial Diadem, which the LORD, the righteous Judge, shall give her at that Day *?

How happy the Husband, in such a Sharer of his Bed, and Partner of his Fortunes! Their Inclinations were nicely-turned Unisons, and all their Conversation was Harmony. How silken the Yoke to such a Pair, and what Blessings were twisted with such Bands! Every Joy was heightened, and every Care alleviated. Nothing seemed wanting to consumnate their Bliss, but a hopeful Progeny, rising around them.—That they might see Themselves, multiplied in their Little ones; see their mingled Graces, transsused into their Offspring; and feel dictated by the supreme Wisdom; Dust thou art, and unto Dust thou shale return, Gen. iii. 19.—They inculcate, with all the Force of the most convincing Evidence, that solemn Admonition, delivered by the Prophet; Cease Ye from Man, whose Breath is in his Nostrils; for wherein is HE to be accounted of? Isa. ii, 22.

That no Reader, however inattentive, might mistake the Sense and Design of this Part of the fourth Line,

'Tis ALL Thou art !-

it is guarded above and beneath.—Above, is an expanded Book, that feems to be waved, with an Air of Triumph, over the Emblem of Death. Which we cannot but suppose to be the Volume of Inspiration, as it exhibits a Sort of Abridgment of its whole Contents, in those animated Words; Be Ye not slothful, but Followers of Them, whotherough Faith and Patience inherit the Promises, Heb. vi. 12.—Beneath, that every Part might be pregnant with Instruction, are those striking Reslections; worthy the Consideration of the highest Proscient in Knowledge and Piety, yet obvious to the Understanding of the most untaught Reader; Life, how short! Eternity, how long!—May my Soul learn the forcible Purport of this short Lesson, in her contracted Span of Time! and all Eternity will not be too long, to rejoice in having learned it.

the Glow of their Affection augmented, by being reflected from their Children. "Grant Us this Gift, faid their united Prayers, and our Satisfactions are crowned: We request no more."

ALAS! how blind are Mortals to future Events! How unable to differn, what is really Good*! Give me Children, said Rachael, or else I die +. An Ardor of Impatience, altogether unbecoming; and as mistaken, as in was unbecoming. She dies, not by the Difappointment, but by the Accomplishment, of her Defire.—If Children are, to Parents, like a flowery Chaplet, whose Beauties bloffom with Ornament, and whose Odours breathe Delight; Death, or fome fell Misfortune, may find Means to entwine themselves with the lovely Wreath. Whenever our Souls are poured out, with passionate Importunity, after any inferior Acquisition: it may be truly said. in the Words of our Divine Master, Ye know not what Ye afk.—Does Providence with-hold the Thing that we long for? It denies in Mercy; and only with-holds the Occasion of our Misery, perhaps the Instrument of our Ruin. With a fickly Appetite, We often lothe what is wholesome, and hanker after our Bane. Where, Imagination dreams of unmingled Sweets; There, Experience frequently finds the Bitterness of Woe.

THEREFORE, may We covet immoderately, neither this nor that Form of earthly Felicity; but refer the Whole of our Condition, to the Choice of unerring Wisdom. May we learn to renounce our own Will; and be ready to make a Sacrifice of our warmest Wishes, ^{*} Nescia Mens Hominum Fati, Sortisque futuræ! Turno Tempus erit, magno cum optaverit emptum, Intactum Pallanta; & cum Spolia ista Diemque Virgil.

[†] Gen xxx. 1.

whenever they run counter to the good Pleasure of God. For, indeed, as to obey his Laws, is to be persectly free; so, to resign Ourselves to his Disposal, is to establish our own Happiness, and to be secure from Fear of Evil.

Here, a small and plain Stone is placed upon the Ground. Purchased, one would imagine, from the little Fund, and formed by the Hand, of Frugality itself. Nothing costly: not one Decoration added: only a very short Inscription; and that so essays unfaithful to its Trust? Or were the Letters worn, by the frequent Resort of the surviving Family; to mourn over the Grave, of a most valuable and beloved Relative?—For I perceive, upon a closer Inspection, that it covers the Remains of a Father. A religious Father; snatched from his growing Osspring, before they were settled in the World, or so much as their Principles fixed by a thorough Education.

This, fure, is the most complicated Discress, that has hitherto come under our Consideration. The Solemities of such a dying Chamber, are some of the most melting and melancholy Scenes imaginable.—There lies the affectionate Husband; the indulgent Parent; the faithful Friend; and the generous Master. He lies in the last Extremities, and on the very Point of Dissolution. Art has done its All. The raging Disease mocks the Power of Medicine. It hastens, with resistless Impetuosity, to execute its dreadful Errand; to rend as funder the Silver Cord of Life, and the more delicate Tie of social Attachment, and conjugal Affection.

A Servant or two, from a revering Distance, cast many a wishful Look, and condole their honoured Master in the Language of Sighs. The condescending Mildness of his Commands, was wont to produce an Alacrity crity of Obedience, and render their Service a Pleasure. The Remembrance of both imbitters their Grief, and makes it trickle plentifully down their honest Cheeks.—His Friends, who have so often shared his Joys, and gladdened his Mind with their enlivening Converse, now are miserable Comforters. A sympathizing and mournful Pity, is all the Relief, they are able to contribute: unless it be augmented by their silent Prayers for the Divine Succour, and a Word of Consolation suggested from the Scriptures *.—Those poor Innocenses, the Children, croud around the Bed; drowned in Tears; and almost frantic with Chief, they sob out their little Souls, and passionately cry; "Will He leave us?" Leave Us in a helpsels Condition! Leave Us, to an "injurious World!"

These separate Streams are all united in the distressed Spouse, and overwhelm her Breast with an impetuous Tide of Sorrows. In Her, the Lover weeps; the Wise mourns; and all the Mother yearns. To Her, the Loss is beyond Measure aggravated, by Months and Years of delightful Society, and exalted Friendship.—Where, alas! can She meet with such unsufpected Fidelity, or repose such unreserved Considence? Where find so discreet a Counsellor; so improving an Example; and a Guardian so sedulously attentive, to the Interests of herself, and her Children?—See! how she hangs over the languishing Bed; most tenderly solicitous to prolong a Life, important and desirable far beyond her own. Or, if ^{*} Texts of Scripture, proper for such an Occasion; containing Promises—of Support under Affliction, Lam. iii. 32. Heb. xii. 6. 2 Car. iv. 17.—of Pardon. Isai. liii. 5. Isai. i. 18. 1 John ii. 1, 2. Ass. x. 43.—of Justification, Rom. v. 9. Rom. viii. 33, 34. 2 Cor. v. 21.—of Victory over Death, Psal. xxiii. 4. Psal. lxxiii. 26. 1 Cor. xv. 56, 57.—of a happy Resurrection, John vi. 40. 2 Cor. v. 1. Rev. vii. 16, 17.

that be impracticable, no less tenderly officious to sooth the last Agonies of her dearer Self.—Her Hands, trembling under direful Apprehensions, wipe the cold Dews from the livid Cheeks; and sometimes stay the sinking Head on her gentle Arms, sometimes rest it on her compassionate Bosom.—See! how she gazes, with a speechless Ardor, on the pale Countenance, and meagre Features. Speechless her Tongue; but She looks unutterable Things. While all her soft Passions throw with unavailing Fondness, and her very Soul bleeds with exquisite Anguish.

THE Sufferer, all patient and adoring, submits to the divine Will; and, by Submission, becomes superior to his Affliction. He is sensibly touched with the disconsolate State of his Attendants; and pierced with an anxious Concern, for his Wife and his Children. His Wife, who will soon be a destitute Widow; his Children, who will soon be belpless Orphans. "Yet though cast down, not in despair." He is greatly refreshed, by his Trust in the everlasting Covenant, and his Hope of approaching Glory. Religion gives a Dignity to Distress. At each Interval of Ease, he comforts his very Comforters; and suffers with all the Majesty of Woe.

The Soul, just going to abandon the tottering Clay, collects all her Force, and exerts her last Efforts. The good Man raises himself on his Pillow; extends a kind Hand to his Servants, which is bathed in Tears; takes an affecting Farewel of his Friends; class his Wise in a feeble Embrace; kisses the dear Pledges of their mutual Love; and then pours all that remains of Life and of Strength, in the following Words;—" I die, my dear Children: but God, the everlasting God, will be with You.—Though You lose an earthly Parent; You have a Father in Heaven, who lives for evermore.-Nothing, nothing but an unbelieving Heart, and irreligious Life, can ever separate You, from the

"Regards of his Providence—from the Endearments of his Love."

He could proceed no farther. His Heart was full; but Utterance failed.—After a fhort Pause, with Difficulty, great Difficulty, he added;—"You, the dear "Partner of my Soul, You are now the only Protector" of our Orphans.—I leave you under a Weight of "Cares.—But God, who defendeth the Cause of the Widow—God, whose Promise is Faithfulness and "Truth—God hath said, I will never leave Thee, nor" forsake Thee*.—This revives my drooping Spirits—" Let this support the Wise of my Bosom—And now, "O Father of Compassions, into thy Hands I commend my Spirit—encouraged by thy promised Goodness, I "leave my fatherles"—

HERE, He fainted; fell back upon the Bed; and lay. for fome Minutes, bereft of his Senses. As a Taper, upon the very Point of Extinction, is fometimes fuddenly rekindled, and leaps into a quivering Flame: So Life, before it totally expired, gave a parting Struggle, and once more looked Abroad from the opening Eyelids.—He would fain have spoke; fain have uttered the Sentence, he began. More than once he affayed: but the Organs of Speech, were become like a broken Vefsel; and nothing but the obstructing Phlegin, rattled in his Throat. His Aspett, however, speke Affection inexpressible. With all the Father, all the Husband still living In his Looks; he takes one more View of those dear Children, whom he had often beheld with a parental Triumph. He turns his dying Eves on that beloved Woman, whom he 4 never beheld but with a Glow of Delight. Fixed in this Posture, amidst Smiles of Love, and under a Gleam of Heaven, they shine out their last.

1 - - - - - - - - 1

Upon this, the filent Sorrow bursts into loud Laments. They weep, and refuse to be comforted. Till fome Length of Time, had given Vent to the Excess of Passion; and the Consolations of Religion, had stanched their bleeding Woes. Then, the afflicted Family search for the Sentence, which fell unfinished from those loved, those venerable, and pious Lips. They find it recorded by the Prophet Jeremiah, containing the Direction of infinite Wisdom, and the Promise of unbounded Goodness; Leave thy fatherless Children; I will preserve them alive; and let thy Widows trust in me *. This, now, is the Comfort of their Life, and the Joy of their Heart. They treasure it up, in their Memories. It is the best of Legacies, and an inexhaustible Fund. A Fund, which will fupply all their Wants, by entailing the Bleffing of Heaven, on all their honest Labours.—They are Rich; they are Happy; in this facred Pledge of the Divine Favour. They fear no Evil; they want no Good; because God is their Portion, and their Guardian God.

No fooner turned from one Memento of my own, and Memorial of another's Decease, but a second, a third, a long Succession of these melancholy Monitors, croud upon my Sight †.—That which has fixed my Observation, is one of a more grave and sable Aspest than the former. I suppose, it preserves the Relics of a more aged Person. One would conjecture, that he made somewhat of a Figure, in his Station among the Livings as his Monument does, among the Funeral Marbles. Let me draw near, and inquire of the Stone; "Who,

VIRG.

" or what, is beneath its Surface?"—I am informed, He was once the Owner of a confiderable Estate; which was much improved, by his own Application and Management: That, he left the World in the busy Period of Life; advanced a little beyond the Meridian.

Probably, replied my musing Mind, one of those indefatigable Drudges, who rise early; late take Rest; and eat the Bread of Carefulness; not to secure the Loving-kindness of the Lord: not to make Provision for any reasonable Necessity: but only to amass together ten Thousand Times more, than they can possibly use.—Did he not lay Schemes for enlarging his Fortune, and aggrandizing his Family? Did he not purpose to join Field to Field, and add House to House; till his Possessions were almost as vast, as his Desires? That, then, he would * sit down, and enjoy what he had acquired; breathe a while from his toilsome Pursuit of Things temporal, and, perhaps, think a little of Things eternal.

But see the Folly of worldly Wisdom! How silly, how childish, is the Sagacity of (what is called) manly and masterly Prudence; when it contrives more solicitously for TIME, then it provides for ETERNITY! How strangely infatuated are those subtil Heads; which weary themselves, in concerting Measures for Phantoms of a Day; and scarce bestow a Thought, on everlasting Realities!—When every Wheel moves on smoothly; when all the well-disposed Designs are ripening apace for Execution; and the long expected Criss of Enjoyment seems to approach; behold! God from on high laughs at the Babel-builder. Death touches the Bubble; and it breaks; it drops into nothing. The Cobweb, most finely spun indeed, but more easily dislodged, is swept away in an Instant; and all the abortive Projects are buried, in the same Grave with their Projector. So true is that Verdict, which the Wisdom from above passes on these successful Unfortunates: "They walk in a vair "Shadow, and disquiet themselves in vain *."

Sese ferre, senes ut in otia tuta recedant,
Aiunt, cum sibi sint congestu cibaria.

Speak, ye that attend fuch a one in his last Minutes; ye that heard his expiring Sentiments; did he not cry out, in the Language of disappointed Sensuality—"O Death! how terrible is thy Approach, to a Mar immersed in secular Cares, and void of all Concert for the never-ending Hereafter! Where, alas! is the Profit, where the Comfort, of entering deep into the Knowledge, and of being dexterous in the Dispatch, o

- " earthly Affairs; fince I have, all the while, neglected the One Thing needful! Destructive Mistake! I have
- " been attentive to every inferior Interest; I have laid myself out on the Trisles of a Moment; but have dis
- " regarded Heaven; have forgot eternal Ages! O! tha
- "my Days"—Here He was going on to breathe form fruitless Wishes; or to form, I know not what, ineffectual Resolutions. But a sudden Convulsion shook his Nerves; disabled his Tongue; and, in less than as Hour, disloved his Frame.

May the Children of this World be warned, by the dying Words of an unhappy Brother; and gather Advantage, from his Misfortune.—Why should they pant with such impatient Ardor, after white and yellow Earth as if the Universe did not afford sufficient, for every on to take a little? Why should they lade themselves with thick Clay; when they are to "run for an incorruption of the sufficient of the sufficient ^{*} Pfal. xxxix. 6.

" ble Crown, and press towards the Prize of their high "Calling?" Why should they overload the Vessel in which their everlasting ALL is embarked; or fill their Arms with Superfluities, when they are to swim for their Lives?—Yet, so preposterous is the Conduct of those Persons, who are all Industry, to heap up an Abundance of the Wealth which perisheth; but are scarce so much as faintly desireus, of being rich towards God.

O! THAT we may walk, through all these glittering Toys, at least with a wise Indisference, if not with a superior Disdain! Having enough for the Conveniencies of Life, let us only accommodate ourselves with Things below, and lay up our Treasures in the Regions above.—Whereas, if we indulge an anxious Concern, or lavish an inordinate Care, on any transitory Possessions; we shall rivet them to our Affections with so firm an Union, that the utmost Severity of Pain must attend the separating Stroke. By such an eager Attachment, to what will certainly be ravished from us; we shall only insure to ourselves accumulated Anguish, against the agonizing Hour. We shall plant, asorehand, our dying Pillow with Thorns *.

Some, I perceive, arrived at Threescore Years and Ten, before they made their Exit; nay, some sew resigned not their Breath, till they had numbered Fourscore revolving Harvests. These, I would hope, "remembered their Creator in the Days of their Youth;" before their Strength became Labour and Sorrow:—Before that low Ebb of languishing Nature, when the Keepers of the House tremble, and those that look out of the

Lean not on Earth; 'twill pierce thee to the Heart;
A broken Reed at best, but oft a Spear:
On its sharp Point Peace bleeds, and Hope expires.
Night Troughts, No III.

Windows are darkened *: when even the lighting down of the Grasshopper, is a Burden on the bending Shoulders; and Desire itself fails in the listless, lethargic Soul:—Before those heavy Hours come, and those tiresome Moments draw nigh; in which, there is too much Reason to say, "We have no Pleasure in them; no Improvement "from them."

Is their Lamps were unfurnished with Oil; how unfit must they be, in such decrepid Circumstances, to go to the Market, and buy †! For, besides a Variety of Disorders, arising from the enseebled Constitution; their Corruptions must be surprizingly strengthened, by such a long Course of Irreligion. Evil Habits must have struck the deepest Root; must have twisted themselves with every Fibre of the Heart; and be as thoroughly ingrained in the Disposition, as the Soot in the Ethiopian's Complexion, or the Spots in the Leopard's Skin. If such a One, under such Disadvantages, surmounts all the Dissiculties, which lie in his Way to Glory; it must be a great and mighty Salvation indeed. If such a One escapes Destruction, and is saved at last, it must, without all peradventure, be—so as by Fire ‡.

This is the Season, which stands in need of Comfort; and is very improper, to enter upon the Consist. The Husbandman should now be putting in his Sickle, or eating the Fruit of his Labours; not beginning to break up the Ground, or scatter the Seed.—Nothing, 'tis true, ^{*} Ecclef. xii. 3, 5. I need not remind my Reader, that, by the former of these figurative Expressions, is signified the enervated State of the Nands and Arms; by the latter, the Dimness of the Eyes, or the total Loss of Sight: that, taken in Connexion with other Parts of the Chapter, they exhibit, in a Series of bold and lively Metaphors, a Description of the various Instructions attendant on Old Age.

⁺ Matt. xxv. 9.

^{‡ 1} Cor. iii. 15.

is impossible with God: He said, Let there be Light, and there was Light: Instantaneous Light, disfused, as quick as Thought, through all the dismal Dominion of primeval Darkness. At his Command, a Leprosy of the longest Continuance, and of the utmost Inveteracy, departs in a Moment. He can, in the Greatness of his Strength, quicken the Wretch, who has lain dead in Trespasses and Sins, not Four Days only, but Fourscore Years.—Yet trust not, O trust not, a Point of such inexpressible Importance, to so dreadful an Uncertainty. God may suspend his Power; may withdraw his Help; may swear in his Wrath, that such Abuses of his Long-suffering shall "never enter into his Rest."

YE therefore, that are vigorous in Health, and blooming in Years, improve the precious Opportunity. Improve your Golden Hours, to the noblest of all Purposes: such as may render You meet, for the Inheritance of Saints in Light; and ascertain your Title, to a State of immortal Youth, to a Crown of eternal Glory *.—Stand not, all the Prime of your Day, idle: trisse no longer with the Offers of this immense Felicity, but make Haste, and delay not the Time, to keep God's Commandments. While you are lostering in a gay Infensibility, Death may be bending his Bow, and marking

D 3

[•] May I be permitted to recommend, as a Treasure of inestimable Value, and a Treatise particularly apposite to my Subject, Dr. LUCAS'S INQUIRY AFTER HAPPINESS? That Part especially, which displays the Method, and enumerates the Advantages, of Improving Life, or living much in a little Time. Chap. III. p. 158. of the 6th Edit.—An Author; in whom the Gentleman, the Scholar, and the Christian, are most happily united. A Performance; which, in Point of solid Argument, unassected Piety, and a Vein of Thought amazingly fertile, has, perhaps, no Superior.—Nor can I wish my Reader a more refined Pleasure, or a more substantial Happiness, than that of having the Sentiments of this entertaining and pathetic Writer, wove into the very Texture of his Heart.

you out for speedy Victims.—Not long ago, I happened to 'spy a thoughtless Jay. The poor Bird was idly bushed, in dressing his pretty Plumes; or hopping carelessly, from Spray to Spray. A Sportsman, coming by, observes the feathered Rover. Immediately he lists the Tube, and levels his Blow. Swifter than Whirlwind, slies the leaden Death; and, in a Moment, lays the filly Creature breathless on the Ground.—Such, such may be the Fate of the Man, who has a fair Occasion of obtaining Grace to To-day; and wantonly postpones the Improvement of it, till To-morrow. He may be cut off, in the Midst of his Folly; and ruined for ever, while he is dreaming of being wise bereafter.

Some, no doubt, came to this their last Retreat, full of Piety, and full of Days; "as a Shock of Corn, ripe " with Age, and laden with Plenty, cometh in, in his " Season *."-These were Children of Light, and wife in their Generation. Wife with that exalted Wifdom, which coming from above; and with that enduring Wisdom, which lasts to Eternity.—Rich also they were, more honourably and permanently rich, than all the Votaries of Mammon. The Wealth of the One has made itself Wings, and is irrecoverably gone. While the wretched Acquirers are transmitted, to that Place of Penury and Pain; where, not fo much as one Drop of Water is allowed, to cool their fcorching Tongues. The Stores of the Other still abide with them; will never depart from them; but make them glad, for Ever and Ever, in the City of their God. Their Treasures were such, as no created Power could take away; fuch as none but infinite Beneficence can bestow; and (comfortable to confider!) fuch as I, and every indigent longing Sinner, may obtain; Treasures of heavenly Knowledge, and faving Faith; Treasures of atoning Blood, and imputed Righteousness.

HERE * lie their Bodies in "peaceable Habitations," and quiet Resting-places." Here, they have thrown off

• Some, I know, are offended at our burying Corpses within the Church; and exclaim against it, as a very great Impropriety and Indecency. But this, I imagine, proceeds from an excessive and mistaken Delicacy. If proper Care be taken to secure from Injury, the Foundations of the Building; and to prevent the Exhalation of any noxious Effuvia, from the putrefying Flesh; I cannot discover any Inconveniencies, attending this Practice.

The Notion, that noisome Carcasses (as they are called) are very unbecoming a Place consecrated to religious Purposes, seems to be derived from the antiquated Jewish Canon. Whereby it was declared, that a dead Body imparted Desilement to the Person, who touched it; and polluted the Spot, where it was lodged. On which Account, the Jews were scrupulously careful, to have their Sepulchres built at a Distance from their Houses; and made it a Point of Conscience, not to suffer Burial Places to subsist in the City. But, as this was a Rite purely ceremonial; it seems to be entirely superseded by the Gospel Dispensation.

I cannot forbear thinking, that, under the Christian Oeconomy, there is a Propriety and Usefulness in the Custom.—Usefulness, because it must render our solemn Assemblies more venerable and awful. For, when we walk over the Dust of our Friends, or kneel upon the Ashes of our Relations; this awakening Circumstance must strike a lively Impression of our own Mortality. And what Consideration can be more effectual, to make us serious and attentive in Hearing; earnest and importunate in Praying?

As for the Fitness of the Usage, it seems perfectly suitable to the Design of those sacred Edifices. They are set apart for God; not only to receive his Worshippers, but to preserve the Furniture for holy Ministrations, and what is, in a peculiar Manner, appropriated to the Divine Majesty. Are not the Bodies of the Saints the Almighty's Property? Were they not once the Objects of his tender Love? Are they not still the Subjects of his special Care? Has he not given Commandment concerning the Bones of his Elect; and charged the Ocean, and enjoined the Grave, to keep them until that Day? When Rocks bright with Gems, or Mountains rich with Mines, are abandoned to off every Burden, and are escaped from every Snare. The Head aches no more; the Eye forgets to weep; the Flesh is no longer racked with acute, nor wasted with lingering Distempers. Here, they receive a final Release from Pain, and an everlasting Discharge from Sorrow. Here, Danger never threatens them, with her terrifying Alarms; but Tranquility softens their Couch, and Sasety guards their Repose.—Rest then, ye precious Relics, within this hospitable Gloom. Rest in gentle Slumbers, till the last Trumpet shall give the welcome Signal; and sound aloud, through all your silent Mansions, "Arise! shine; for your Light is come, and the Glory of the Lord is risen upon You †."

th

the devouring Flames; will not these be rescued from the siery Ruin? Will not these be translated into Jehovah's Kingdom, and, conjointly with the Soul, made "his Jewels;" made "his peculiar Treafure;" made to shine as the Brightness of the Firmament, and as the Stars for Ever and Ever?

Is not Christ the LORD of our Bodies? Are they not bought with a Price? Bought, not with corruptible Things, Silver and God, but with his divinely precious Blood. And, if the blessed Jesus obtained the Redemption of our Bodies, at so infinitely dear a Rate; can it enter into our Hearts to conceive, that he should dislike to have them reposed under his own Habitation?—Once more; Are not the Bodies of the Faithful, Temples of the Holy Ghost? And is there not, upon this Supposition, an apparent Propriety, rather than the least Indecorum; in remitting these Temples of Flesh to the Temples made with Hands? They are Vessels of Honour; Instruments of Righteousness; and, even when broken by Death, like the Fragments of a golden Bowl, are valuable; are worthy to be laid up in the safest, most honourable Repositories.

Upon the Whole, fince the LORD JESUS has purchased them, at the Expence of his Blood; and the blessed Spirit has honoured them, with his in-duraling Presence; since they are right dear in the Sight of the adorable Tricity, and undoubted Heirs of a glorious Immortality: Why should it be thought a Thing improper, to admit them to a transient Rest, in their Heavenly Father's House? Why may they not lie down and sleep, in the outer Courts; since they are soon to be introduced, into the inmost Manssons of everlasting Honour and Joy?

To these, how calm was the Evening of Life! In what a smiling Serenity, did their Sun go down! When their Flesh and their Heart failed, how reviving was the Remembrance of an all-sufficient Redeemer; once dying for their Sins, now risen again for their Justification! How chearing the well-grounded Hope of Pardon for their Transgressions, and Peace with God, through JESUS CHRIST OUR LORD! How did this affuage the Agonies, and fweeten the Bitterness of Death?—Where now is Wealth, with all her golden Mountains? Where is Honour, with her proud Trophies of Renown? Where are all the vain Pomps of a deluded World? Where are all the vain Pomps of a deluded World? Can they infpire fuch Comfort, can they administer any Support in this last Extremity? Can they compose the affrighted Thoughts; or buoy up the departing Soul, amidst all the Pangs of Dissolution?—The Followers of the Lamb seem pleased and triumphant, even at their last Gasp. "God's everlasting Arms are underneath*" their fainting Heads. His Spirit whispers Peace and Consolution to their Consciences. In the Strength of these heavenly Succours, they quit the Field, not Cap-tives, but Conquerers; with "Hopes full of Immortality."

And now they are gone.—The struggles of reluctant Nature are over. The Body sleeps in Death: the Soul launches into the invisible State.—But, who can imagine the delightful Surprise, when they find themselves surrounded by guardian Angels instead of weeping Friends? How sincerely do they wing their Way, and pass through unknown Worlds, under the Conduct of those celestial Guides!—The Vale of Tears is quite lost. Farewel, for Ever, the Realms of Woe, and Range of malignant

Deut. xxxiii. 27.

Beings! They arrive on the Frontiers of inexpressible Felicity. They "are come to the City of the Living "God:" while a Voice, sweeter than Music in her softest Strains; sweet as the Harmony of hymning Seraphim; congratulates their Arrival, and bespeaks their Admission: Lift up your Heads, Oye Gates; and beye lift up, ye everlasting Doors; that the Heirs of Glory may enter in.

Here, then, let us leave the Spirits and Souls of the Righteous; escaped from an entangling Wilderness, and received into a Paradise of Delights! Escaped from the Territories of Disquietude, and settled in Regions of unmolested Security! Here, they sit down with Abraham, Iscac, and Jacob, in the Kingdom of their Father. Here, they mingle with an innumerable Company of Angels, and rejoice around the Throne of the Lamb: rejoice in the Fruition of present Felicity, and in the assured Expectation of an inconceivable Addition to their Bliss; when GOD shall call the Heavens from above, and the Earth, that he may judge his People*.

Fools accounted their Life Madness, and their End to be without Honour: but, they are numbered among the Children of GOD; and their Lot, their distinguished and eternal Lot, is among the Saints †! However, therefore, an undiscerning World may despise, and a profane World

* Seneca's Reflections upon the State of holy Souls, delivered from the Burden of the Flesh, are sparkling and sine; yet very indistinct and empty, compared with the Particulars mentioned above, and with many others, that might be collected from Scripture. In hoc tam procelloso, & inomnes Tempestates exposito navigantibus Mari, nullus Portus, nist Mortis est. Ne itaque invideris Fratri tuo; quiescit. Tandem liber, tandem tutus, tandem æternus est. Fruiter nunc aperto & libero Cælo; ex humili & depresso, in eum emicuit Locum, qui solutas Vinculis Animas beato recipit Sinu; & nunc omnia Rerum Natura Bona cum summa Voluptate percipit. Sen. ad Polyb.

vilify, the truly Religious; be this the Supreme, the invariable Defire of my Heart! "Let me live the Life, "and die the death, of the Righteous. Oh! let my latter End, and future State, be like theirs!"

What Figure is That, which strikes my Eye, from an eminent Part of the Wall? It is not only placed in a more elevated Situation, than the rest; but carries a more splendid and sumptuous Air, than ordinary. Swords and Spears; murdering Engines, and Instruments of Slaughter; adorn the Stone with a formidable Magnificence.— It proves to be the Monument of a noble Warrior.

Is such Respect, thought I, paid to the Memory of this brave Soldier, for facrificing his Life to the public Good?—Then, what Honours, what immortal Honours, are due to the great Captain of our Salvation? Who, though Lord of the Angelic Legions; and supreme Commander of all the heavenly Hosts; willingly offered himfelf a bleeding Propitiation for Sinners!

The One died, being a Mortal; and only yielded up a Life, which was long before forfeited to Divine Justice; which must soon have been surrendered as a Debt to Nature, if it had not fallen as a Prey to War.—But Christ took Flesh, and gave up the Ghost, though he was the great I AM; the Fountain of Existence; who calls Happiness and Immortality all his own. He, who thought it no Robbery to be Equal with God; He, whose Outgoings were from Everlasting; even He, was made in the Likeness of Man, and cut off out of the Land of the Living. Wonder, O Heavens! Be associated, O Earth! HE died the Death, of whom it is witnessed, that HE is "the true God, and eternal "Life*."

THE One exposed Himself to Peril, in the Service of his Sovereign and his Country; which, though it was glorious to do, yet would have been ignominious, in fuch Circumstances, to have declined.—But CHRIST took the Field, though he was the bleffed and only Potentate; the King of Kings, and Lord of Lords. Christ took the Field, though He was fure to drop in the Engage. ment; and put on the Harness, though He knew beforehand, that it must reek with his Blood. That Prince of Heaven refigned his Royal Person, not barely to the Hazard, but to the inevitable Stroke; to Death, certain in its Approach, and armed with all its Horrors.—And for whom? Not for those who were in any Degree deferving; but for his own disobedient Creatures; for the Pardon of condemned Malesactors; for a Band of Rebels, a Race of Traitors, the most obnoxious and inexcusable of all Criminals. Whom he might have left to perish in their Iniquities, without the least Impeachment of his Goodness, and to the Display of his avenging Justice.

THE One, 'tis probable, died expeditiously; was suddenly wounded, and soon slain. A Bullet, lodged in his Heart; a Sword, sheathed in his Breast; or a Battle-ax, cleaving the Brain, might put a speedy End to his Misery; dispatch him "as in a Moment."—Whereas, the divine Redeemer expired in tedious and protracted Torments. His Pangs were as lingering, as they were exquisite. Even in the Prelude to his last Suffering, what a Load of Sorrows overwhelmed his facred Humanity! Till the intolerable Pressure wrung Blood, instead of Sweat, from every Pore: till the crimson Flood stained all his Raiment, and tinged the very Stones:—But, when the last Scene of the Tragedy commenced; when the Executioner's Hammer, had nailed him to the Cross;

O! how many difinal Hours, did that illustrious Sufferer hang; a Spectacle of Woe to God, to Angels, and to Men! His Temples mangled with the thorny Crown! his Hands and Feet cleft with the rugged Irons; his whole Body covered with Wounds and Bruises! and his Soul, his very Soul, pierced with Pangs of unutterable Diffres!

So long he hung, that Nature, through all her Dominions, was thrown into sympathizing Commotions. The Earth could no longer sustain such barbarous Indignities, without Trembling; nor the Sun behold them, without Horror. Nay, so long did he hang in this Extremity of Agony and Torture, that the Alarm reached even the remote Regions of the Dead.—Never, O my Soul, never forget the amazing Truth. The Lamb of God was seized; was bound; was slaughtered with the utmost Inhumanity; and endured Death, in all its Bitterness, for thee. His murderers, studiously cruel, so guided the satal Cup; that he tasted every Drop of its Gall, before he drank it off to the very Dregs.

ONCE again; The Warrior died like a Hero, and fell gallantly in the Field of Battle.—But, died not Christ as a Fool dieth *? Not on the Bed of Honour, with Scars of Glory in his Breast; but, like some execrable Miscreant, on a Gibbet; with Lashes of the vile Scourge on his Back. Yes, the blessed Jesus bowed his expiring Head on the accursed Tree; suspended between Heaven and Earth, as an Outcast from Both, and unworthy of Either.

What suitable Returns of inflamed and adoring Devotion, can we make to the Holy One of GoD; thus dying,

^{* 2} Sam. iii. 33. Of this Indignity our Lord complains; Areye come out as against a Thief? Matt. xxvi. 55.

dying, that we might live? Dying in Ignominy and Anguish; that we might live for ever in the Heights of Iov. and fit for ever on Thrones, of Glory.—Alas! it is not in us, impotent, infensible Mortals, to be duly thankful. He only, who confers fuch inconceivably rich Favours, can enkindle a proper Warmth of grateful Affections. Then build thyfelf a Monument, most gracious IMMANUEL, build thyfelf an everlafting Monument of Gratitude in our Souls. Infcribe the Memory of thy matchless Beneficence, not with Ink and Pen; but with that precious Blood, which gushed from thy wounded Veins. Engrave it, not with the Hammer and Chizel: but with that sharpened Spear, which pierced thy sacred Side. Let it stand conspicuous and indelible, not on outward Tables of Stone; but on the very inmost Tables of our Hearts.

ONE Thing more let me observe, before I bid Adieu to this intombed Warrior, and his garnished Sepulchre. How mean are these oftentatious Methods, of bribing the Vote of Fame, and purchasing a little posthumous Renown! What a poor Substitute for a Set of memorable Actions, is polished Alabaster, or the Mimicry of sculptured Marble! The real Excellency of this * bleeding

* Sir Bevil Granville, flain in the Civil Wars, at an Engagement with the Rebels—It may possibly be some Entertainment to the Reader, if I subjoin Sir Bevil's Character; as it is drawn by that celebrated Pen, which wrote the History of those calamitous Times—" That "which would have clouded any Victory, says the noble Historian, and "made the Loss of others less spoken of, was the Death of Sir Bevil" Granville. He was indeed an excellent Person, whose Activity, In- terest, and Reputation, were the Foundation of what had been done in Cornwall: His Temper and Affections so public, that no Accident which happened, could make any Impression upon him: And his Example kept others from taking any thing ill, or at least seems ing to do so. In a Word, a brighter Courage, and a gentler Disposition, were never married together, to make the most chearful and innocent Conversation."

Patriot,

Patriot, is written on the Minds of his Countrymen. It would be remembered with Applause, so long as the Nation subsists, without this artificial Expedient to perpetuate it.—And such, such is the Monument, I would wish for myself. Let me leave a Memorial, in the Breasts of my Fellow-Creatures. Let surviving Friends bear Witness; that I have not lived to myself alone, nor been altogether unserviceable in my Generation. O! let an uninterrupted Series of beneficent Offices, be the Inscription; and the best Interests of my Acquaintance, the Plaie that exhibits it.

LET the Poor, as they pass by my Grave, point at the little Spot, and thankfully acknowledge-" There lies " the Man, whose unwearied Kindness was the constant, " Relief of my various Diftreffes; who tenderly visited " my languishing Bed, and readily supplied my indigent "Circumstances. How often were his Counsels. a "Guide to my perplexed Thoughts, and a Cordial to " my dejected Spirits! 'Tis owing to God's Bleffing, " on his feafonable Charities, and prudent Confolations; " that I now live, and live in Comfort."-Let a Perfon, once ignorant and ungedly, lift up his Eyes to Heaven, and fay within himfelf, as he walks over my Bones; " Here are the last Remains of that sincere Friend, " who watched for my Soul. I can never forget, with " what heedless Gaiety, I was posting on in the Paths " of Perdition: and I tremble to think, into what ir-" retrievable Ruin I might quickly have been plunged; " had not his faithful Admonitions arrested me in the " wild Career. I was unacquainted with the Gospel of " Peace, and had no Concern for its unsearchable Trea-" fures; but now enlightened by his instructive Conver-" fation, I fee the All-sufficiency of my Saviour; and, "animated by his repeated Exhortations, I count all " Things but Lofs, that I may win CHRIST. " thinks. "thinks, his Discourses, seasoned with Religion, and fet Home by the divine Spirit, still tingle in my Ears; are still warm upon my Heart; and, I trust, will be more and more operative, till we meet each other in the House not made with Hands, eternal in the Heavens."

THE only infallible Way of immortalizing our Characters; a Way equally open to the meanest and most exalted Fortune; is, "To make our Calling and Elec-" tion fure;" to gain some sweet Evidence, that our Names are written in Heaven. Then, however they may be difregarded or forgotten, among Men; they will not fail to be had in everlasting Remembrance, before the LORD.—This is, of all distinctions, far the noblest. Ambition, be this thy Object, and every Page of Scripture will fanctify thy Passion; every Grace itself will fan thy Flame.—As to earthly Memorials, yet a little While, and they are all obliterated. The Tongue of those, whose Happiness we have zealously promoted, must soon be silent in the Cossin. Characters cut with a Pen of Iron, and committed to the folid Rock, will ere long cease to be legible *. But as many as are inrolled "in the Lamb's Book of Life," He himself declares, shall never be blotted out from those Annals of Eternity †. When a Flight of Years has mouldered the triumphal Column into Dust: when the brazen Statue perishes, under the corroding Hand of Time: these Honours still continue; still are blooming and incorruptible, in the World of Glory.

Make the extended Skies your Tomb;
Let Stars record your Worth:
Yet know, vain Mortals, all must die,
As Nature's sickliest Birth.

Juv.

^{* —} Data funt ipfis quoque Fata Sepulchris.
† Rev. iii. 5.

Would bounteous Heav'n indulge my Pray'r,
I frame a nobler Choice;
Nor, living, wish the pompous Pile;
Nor, dead, regret the Loss.

In thy fair Book of Life divine, My God, inferibe my Name: There let it fill fome humble Place, Beneath the flaughtered Lamb.

Thy Saints, while Ages roll away, In endless Fame survive; Their Glories, o'er the Wrongs of Time Greatly triumphant, live.

YONDER Entrance leads, I suppose, to the Vault. Let me turn aside, and take one View of the Habitation, and its Tenants.—The sullen Door grates upon its Hinges: Not used to receive many Visitants, it admits me with Reluctance and Murmurs.—What meaneth this sudden Trepidation; while I descend the Steps, and am visiting the pale Nations of the Dead?—Be composed, my Spirits; there is nothing to fear, in these quiet Chambers. "Here, even the Wicked cease from "troubling."

Good Heavens! what a folemn Scene!—How difmal the Gloom! Here is perpetual Darkness, and Night even at Noon-day.—How doleful is Solitude! Not one Trace of chearful Society; but forrow and Terror seem to have made This, their dreaded Abode—Hark! how the hollow Dome resounds, at every Tread. The Echoes, that long have slept, are awakened; and lament, and sigh, along the Walls.

A BEAM, or two, finds its Way through the Grates; and reflects a feeble Glimmer, from the Nails of the Coffins. So many of those sad Spectacles, half concealed in Shades; half feen dimly by the baleful Twilight; add a deeper Horror to these gloomy Mansions.—I pore upon the Inscriptions, and am just able to pick out; That these are the Remains of the Rich and Renowned. No vulgar Dead are deposited here. The Most Illustrious, and Right Honourable, have claimed this for their last Retreat. And, indeed, they retain somewhat of a shadowy Pre-eminence. They lie, ranged in mournful Order, and in a Sort of silent Pomp, under the Arches of an ample Sepulchre; while meaner Corpses, without much Ceremony, "go down to the Stones of the Pit."

E

My Apprehensions recover from their Surprise. I find, here are no Phantoms, but fuch as Fear raifes.— However, it still amazes me, to observe the Wonders of this nether World. Those, who received vast Revenues, and called whole Lordships their own; are here reduced to Half a Dozen Feet of Earth, or confined in a few Sheets of Lead. Rooms of State, and sumptuous Furniture, are refigned; for no other Ornament than the Shroud, for no other Apartment than the darksome Niche.—Where is the Star, that blazed upon the Breast; or Coronet, that glittered round the Temples? The only Remains of departed Dignity are, the Weather-beaten Hatchment, and the tattered Escutcheon. I fee no fplendid Retinue, furrounding this folitary Dwelling. The lordly Equipage hovers no longer about the lifeless Master. He has no other Attendant, than a dustry Statue; which, while the regardless World is as gay as ever, the Sculptor's Hand has taught to weep.

Those, who gloried in high-born Ancestors, and noble Pedigree; here, drop their losty Pretensions. They acknowledge Kindred with creeping Things, and quarter Arms with the meanest Reptiles. They say to Corruption, Thou art my Father; and to the Worm, Thou art my Mother and my Sister.—Or, should they still assume the Stile of Distinction, ah! how impotent were the Claim! how apparent the Ostentation! Is it said by their Monument, HERE LIES THE GREAT? How easy is it replied by the Spectator!

—False Marble! Where?
Nothing but poor and fordid Dust lies Here.

Mortifying Truth! Sufficient, one would think, to wean the most fanguine Appetite, from this transitory State of Things; from its sickly Satisfactions, its fading Glories, its vanishing Treasures.

For now, ye lying Vanities of Life!
Ye ever-tempting, ever-cheating Train!
Where are ye now? And what is your Amount?

What is all the World, to these poor breathless Beings?—What are their Pleasures? A Bubble broke.—What their Honours? A Dream that is forgotten.—What the Sum-total of their Enjoyments below? Once, perhaps, it appeared to inexperienced and fond Desire, something considerable. But, now Death has measured it with his Line, and weighed it in his Scale, what is the Upshot? Alas! it is shorter than a Span; lighter than the dancing Spark; and driven away like the disfolving Smoke.

Induce, my Soul, a ferious Pause. Recollect all the gay Things, that were wont to dazzle thy Eyes, and inveigle thy Affections. Here, examine those Baits of Sense. Here, form an Estimate of their real Value. Suppose thyself first, among the Favourites of Fortune; who revel in the Lap of Pleasure; who shine in the Robes of Honour; and swim in Tides of inexhausted Riches. Yet, how soon would the passing Bell proclaim thy Exit! And, when once that Iron Call, has summoned thee to thy future Reckoning; where would all these Gratifications be? At that Period, how will all the Pageantry of the most affluent, splendid, or luxurious Circumstances, vanish into empty Air!—And is this a Happiness so passionately to be coveted?

I THANK you, ye Relics of founding Titles, and magnificent Names. Ye have taught me more of the Littleness of the World, than all the Volumes of my Library. Your Nobility arrayed in a Winding-sheet; your Grandeur mouldering in an Urn; are the most indisputable Proofs, of the Nothingness of created Things. Never, furely, did Providence write this important Point, in fuch legible Characters; as in the Ashes of My Lord, or on the Corpfe of His Grace *.- Let others, if they please, pay their obsequious Court to your wealthy Sons; and ignobly fawn, or anxiously sue, for Preserments. My Thoughts shall often resort, in pensive Contemplation, to the Sepulchres of their Sires; and learn, from their fleeping Dust—to moderate my Expectations from Mortals—to stand disengaged from every undue Attachment, to the little Interests of Time-to get above the delufive Amufements of Honour; the gaudy Tinfels of Wealth; and all the empty Shadows of a perishing World.

HARK! what Sound is that!—In fuch a Situation, every Noise alarms.—Solemn and slow, it breaks again upon the filent Air.—'Tis the Striking of the Clock.—Designed, one would imagine, to ratify all my serious Meditations. Methinks, it says Amen, and sets a Seal, to every improving Hint. It tells me; That another Portion of my appointed Time, is elapsed. One calls it "the Knell of my departed Hours." 'Tis the Watchword to Vigilance and Activity. It cries in the Ear of Reason; "Redeem the Time. Catch the favourable "Gales of Opportunity: O! catch them, while they "breathe; before they are irrecoverably loft. The Span of Life shortens continually. Thy Minutes are all upon the Wing, and hastening to be gone. Thou art a Borderer upon Eternity; and making incessant Adwards to the State, thou art contemplating." May the Admonition sink deep, into an attentive and obedient Mind! May it teach me that Heavenly Arithmetic, of numbering my Days, and applying my Heart unto "Wisdom!"

^{———} Mors jola fatetur Quantula jint Heminum Corpufeula.——

I have often walked, beneath the impending Promontory's craggy Cliff; I have fometimes trod the vaft Spaces of the lonely Defart; and penetrated the inmost Recesses of the dreary Cavern: but never, never beheld Nature louring, with so tremendous a Form; never selt such Impressions of Awe, striking cold on my Heart; as under these black-browed Arches, amidst these mouldy Walls, and surrounded by such rueful Objects. Where Melancholy, deepest Melancholy, for ever spreads her Raven Wings.—Let me now emerge from the damp and dreadful Obscurity.—Farewel, ye Seats of Desolation, and Shades of Death! Gladly I revisit the Realms of Day.

HAVING cast a fuperficial View, upon these Receptacle of the Dead; Curiosity prompts my Inquiry to a more intimate Survey. Could we draw back the Covering of the Tomb; could we discern, What those are now, who once were Mortals—O! how would it surprise, and grieve us! Surprise us, to behold the prodigious Transformation, which has taken place on every Individual; grieve us, to observe the Dithonour done to our Nature in general, within these subterraneous Lodgments!

HERE, the fweet and winning Afpect, that wore perpetually an attractive Smile; grins horribly a naked, ghastly Skull.-The Eye, that outshone the Diamond's Brilliancy; and glanced its lovely Lightning, into the most guarded Heart: Alas! Where is it? Where shall we find the rolling Sparkler? How are all its fprightly Beams eclipfed! totally eclipfed!—The Tongue, that once commanded all the Power of Eloquence, in this strange Land has " forgot its Cunning." Where are now those Strains of Harmony, which ravished our Ears? Where is that Flow of Perfuafion, which carried captive our Judgments? The great Master of Language and of Song, is become filent as the Night that furrounds him. The pampered Flesh, fo lately cloathed in Purple and fine Linen, how is it covered rudely with Clods of Clay! There was a Time, when the timoroufly nice Creature, would scarce " * adventure to set a Foot " upon the Ground, for Delicateness and Tenderness;" but is now enwrapped in clammy Earth, and fleeps on no fofter a Pillow than the ragged Gravel-stones.-Here, " the ftrong Men bow themselves." The nervous Arm is unstrung; the brawny Sinews are relaxed; the Limbs, not long ago the Seats of Vigour and Activity, lie down motionless; and the Bones, which were as Bars of Iron, are crumbled into Dust.

HERE, the Man of Business forgets all his favourite Schemes, and discontinues the Pursuit of Gain. Here, is a total Stand to the Circulation of Merchandize, and the Hurry of Trade. In these solitary Recesses, as in the Building of Solomon's Temple; is heard no Sound of the Hammer and Ax. The Winding-sheet and the Coffin, are the utmost Bound of all earthly Devices. " Hitherto may they go, but no farther."-Here, the Sons of Pleasure take a final Farewel, of their dear Delights. No more is the Senfualist anointed with Oil, or crowned with Rofe-buds. He chaunts no more, to the Melody of the Viol; nor revels any longer at the Banquet of Wine. Instead of sumptuous Tables, and delicious Treats, the poor Voluptuary is Himfelf a Feaft for fattened Infects; the Reptile riots in his Flesh; "the Worm feeds fweetly on him *."-Here also, Beauty fails; bright Beauty drops her Lustre here. O! how her Roses sade, and her Lilies languish, in this bleak Soil! How does the grand Leveller pour Contempt, upon the Charmer of our Hearts! How turn to Deformity, what captivated the World before!

^{*} Deut. xxviii. 56.

Could the Lover have a Sight of his once inchanting Fair-one; what a ftartling Aftonishment would seize him !-" Is This the object, I not long ago fo paffion-" ately admired! I faid, she was divinely fair; and " thought her, fomewhat more than mortal. Her Form, " was Symmetry itself; every Elegance breathed in her "Air; and all the Graces waited on her Motions,---" 'Twas Mufick, when she spoke: but, when she spoke " Encouragement, 'twas little less than Rapture. How " my Heart danced, to those charming Accents!-" And can that, which, fome Weeks ago, was to Ad-" miration lovely, be now so infusferably loathsome?-"Where are those blushing Cheeks? Where the coral " Lips? Where that ivory Neck, on which the eurling " Jet, in fuch gloffy Ringlets, flowed? With a thousand " other Beauties of Person, and ten thousand Delicacies ^{*} Job xxiv. 20.

" of Action *?—Amazing Alteration! Deluiory Blifs! "—Fondly I gazed upon the glittering Meteor. It " finone brightly; and I mistook it for a Star, for a per-" manent and substantial Good. But how is it fallen! " fallen from an Orb, not its own! And all that I can " trace on Earth, is but a putrid Mass."

Lie, poor Florella! lie deep, as thou dost, in obscure Darkness. Let Night, with her impenetrable Shades, always conceal Thee. May no prying Eye, be Witness to thy Disgrace: but let thy surviving Sisters, think upon thy State; when they contemplate, the Idol in the When the pleasing Image rises gracefully to View, furrounded with a World of Charms; and flushed with Joy, at the Consciousness of them all—Then, in those Minutes of Temptation and Danger, when Vanity uses to steal into the Thoughts-Then, let them remember, what a Veil of Horror is drawn over a Face; which was once beautiful and brilliant, as theirs. Such a seasonable Reslection, might regulate the Labours of the Toilet; and create a more earnest Solicitude, to polish the Jewel, than to varnish the Casket. It might then become their highest Ambition, to have the Mind decked with divine Virtues; and dreffed after the amiable Pattern of their Redeemer's Holineis.

And would this prejudice their Persons, or depreciate their Charms?—Quite the Reverse! It would spread a sort of Heavenly Glory, over the finest Set of Features; and heighten the Loveliness of every other engaging Accomplishment.—What is yet a more inviting Conside-

Quo fugi: Venus? Heu! Queve Color? decens
 Quo Maus? Quid habet illius, illius, Qua fricabat Amores,
 Qua me furpaerat mals?

Hor.

31

ration; these Flowers would not wither with Nature, nor be tarnished by Time; but would open continually into richer Beauties, and flourish even in the Winter of Age.—But, the most incomparable Recommendation of these noble Qualities, is: That, from their hallowed Relics, as from the fragrant Ashes of the Phanix, will ere long arise an illustrious Form; bright, as the Wings of Angels; lasting, as the Light of the new Jerusalem.

For my Part; the Remembrance of this fad Revolution, shall make me ashamed to pay my Devotion, to a Shrine of perishing Flesh; and asraid, to expect all my Happiness, from so brittle a Joy. It shall teach me, not to think too highly of weil-proportioned Clay; though formed in the most elegant Mould, and animated with the sweetest Soul. 'Tis Heaven's last, best, and crowning Gist;—to be received with Gratitude, and cherished with Love, as a most valuable Blessing; not worshipped, with the Incense of Flattery, and Strains of sulfome Adoration, as a Goddess.—It will cure, I trust, the Dotage of my Eyes: and incline me always to prefer the substantial "Ornaments, of a meek and "virtuous Spirit;" before the transient Decorations, of White and Red on the Skin.

HERE, I called in my roving Meditations, from their long Excursion on this tender Subject. Fancy listened a while, to the Soliloquy of a Lover. Now Judgment resumes the Reins, and guides my Thoughts to more near and self-interesting Inquiries.—However, upon a Review of the whole Scene; crowded with Spectacles of Mortality, and Trophies of Death; I could not sorbear similar my Breast, and setching a Sigh, and lamenting over the noblest of all visible Beings, laid prostrate under the Feet of "the pale Horse, and his Rider *."-I could not forbear repeating that pathetic Exclamation; " ()! Thou + Adam, what hast thou done!" What Defolation has thy Disobedience wrought in the Earth!-See the Malignity, the ruinous Malignity of Sin! Sin, has demolished so many stately Structures of Flesh: Sin, has made fuch Havock, among the most excellent Ranks of God's lower Creation: And Sin (that deadly Bane of our Nature) would have plunged our better Part, into the execrable Horrors of the nethermost Hell; had not our merciful Mediator interposed, and given Himfelf for our Ransom.—Therefore, what grateful Acknowledgments, does the whole World of penitent Sinners owe; what ardent Returns of Love, will a whole Heaven of glorified Believers pay; to fuch a Friend, Benefactor, and Deliverer!

Musing upon these melancholy Objects, a faithful Remembrancer suggests from within—" Must this sad "Change succeed in me also? Am I to draw my last "Gasp; to become a breathless Corpse; and be, what "I deplore †? Is there a Time approaching, when this "Body shall be carried out upon the Bier, and consigned to its clay-cold Bed? While some kind Actiquaintance, perhaps, may drop one parting Tear; and "cry, Alas! my Brother!—Is the Time approaching?"—Nothing is more certain. A Decree, much surer than

PARNEL.

^{*} Rev. vi. 8. + 2 Efdr. vii. 41.

I I pass, with melancholy State, By all these solemn Heaps of Fate; And think, as soft and sad I tread Above the venerable Dead, [&]quot;Time was, like me, they Life posses'd;

[&]quot; And Time will be, when I shall rest."

the Law of the Medes and Persians, has irrevocably determined the Doom.

Should one of these ghastly Figures, burst from his Confinement; and ftart up, in frightful Deformity, before me-should the baggard Skeleton, lift a clattering Hand; and point it full in my View—should it open the stiffened Jaws; and, with a hoarse tremendous Murmur, break this profound Silence-should it accost me, as Samuel's Apparition addressed the trembling King-" The LORD shall deliver Thee also into the Hands of " Death. Yet a little while, and Thou shalt be with me "." -The folemn Warning, delivered in fo ftriking a Manner, must strongly impress my Imagination. A Mesfage in Thunder, would fcarce fink deeper.—Yet, there is abundantly greater Reason to be alarmed, by that express Declaration of the Lord God Almighty, " Thou " shalt surely die."—Well then, since Sentence is passed; fince I am a condemned Man; and know not, when the Dead Warrant may arrive: let me die to Sin; and die to the World; before I die beneath the Stroke of a Righteous God. Let me employ the little uncertain Interval of Respite from Execution; in preparing for a happier State, and a better Life. That, when the fatal Moment comes, and I am commanded to shut my Eyes,

^{* 1} Sam. xxviii. 19. On this place, the Dutch Translator of the Meditations has added a Note; to correct, very probably, what he supposes a Mistake. On the same Supposition, I presume, the Compilers of our Rubric ordered the last Verse of Ecclus. xlvi. to be omitted, in the daily Service of the Church. But that the Sentiment, hinted above, is strictly true, that it was אשמושל הוא Samuel himself (not an infernal Spirit, personating the Prophet,) who appeared to the Female Necromancer at Endor; appeared, not in Compliance with any diabolical Incantation, but in Pursuance of the divine Commission; this, I think, is fully proved in the Historical Account of the Life of David. Vol. I. Chap. 23.

upon all Things here below; I may open them again, to fee my Saviour in the Mansions above.

SINCE this Body, which is fo fearfully and wonderfully made, must fall to Pieces in the Grave: fince I must foon refign all my bodily Powers to Darkness, Inactivity, and Corruption: let it be my constant Care to use them well, while I possess them !- Let my Hands be stretched forth to relieve the Needy; and always be more "ready to give, than to receive."—Let my Knees bend, in deepest Humiliation, before the Throne of Grace: while my Eyes are cast down to the Earth, in penitential Confusion; or devoutly looking up to Heaven, for pardoning Mercy!—In every friendly Interview, let the "Law of Kindness dwell on my Lips;" or rather, if the Seriousness of my Acquaintance permits, let the Gospel of Peace flow from my Tongue. O! that I might be enabled, in every public Concourse, to lift up my Voice like a Trumpet; and pour abroad a more joyful Sound, than its most melodious Accents, in proclaiming the glad Tidings of free Salvation !- Be shut, my Ears, resolutely shut, against the malevolent Whispers of Slander, and the contagious Breath of filthy Talking. But be swift to hear the Instructions of Wisdom; be all Attention, when your Redeemer speaks; imbibe the precious Truths; and convey them carefully to the Heart.—Carry me, my Feet, to the Temple of the Lord; to the Beds of the Sick; and Houses of the Poor.—May all my Members, devoted intirely to my divine Mafter, be the willing Inftruments of promoting his Glory.

THEN, ye Embalmers, you may fpare your Pains. These Works of Faith, and Labours of Love; these shall be my Spices and Perfumes. Enwrapped in these, I would lay me gently down, and sleep sweetly in the blessed Jesus;

JESUS; hoping, that God will "give Commandment" concerning my Bones;" and one Day fetch them up from the Dust, as Silver from the Furnace, purified, "I say not, seven times, but seventy times seven."

Here, my Contemplation took Wing; and, in an Instant, alighted in the Garden, adjoining to Mount Calvary. Having viewed the Abode of my deceased Fellow-Creatures; methought, I longed to see the Place, where our Lord lay.—And, O! what a marvellous Spectacle was once exhibited, in this memorable Sepulchre! He, "who clothes Himself with Light, as "with a Garment; and walks upon the Wings of the "Wind*;" HE was pleased to wear the Habiliments of Mortality, and dwell among the prostrate Dead.—Who can repeat the wondrous Truth, too often? Who can dwell upon the transporting Theme, too long? HE, who sits inthroned in Glory, and diffuses Bliss among

* The Scriptures, speaking of the Supreme Being, say—He walketh upon the Waves of the Sea; to denote his uncontroulable Power, Job ix.

8.—He walketh in the Circuit of Heaven; to express the Immensity of his Presence, Job xxii. 14.—He walketh upon the Wings of the Wind; to signify the amazing Swistness of his Operations, Pfal. civ. 3.—In which last Phrase, there is, I think, an Elegance and Emphasis, not taken Notice of by our Commentators, yet unequalled in any Writer.—Not, He flieth; He runnesh; but, He walketh: and that, on the very Wings of the Wind; on the most impetuous of Elements, roused into its utmost Rage, and sweeping along with inconceivable Rapidity.—A Tumult in Nature, not to be described, is the composed and sedate Work of the DEITY. A Speed, not to be measured, is (with Reverence I use the Expression, and to comport with our low Methods of Conception) the solemn and majestic Foot-pace of JEHOVAH—How shar are the following Lines, even in the great Masser of Lyric Song, when compared with this inimitable Stroke of divine Poetry!—He evalketh upon the Wings of the Wind.

Ocyor Cervis, & agente Nimbos Ocyor Euro,

all the heavenly Hofts; He was once a pale and bloody Corpfe, and preffed this little Spot.

O DEATH! how great was thy Triumph in that Hour! Never did thy gloomy Realms contain fuch a Prisoner before.—Prisoner, did I say? No; He was more than Conqueror. He arose, far more mighty than Sampson, from a transient Slumber; broke down the Gates, and demolished the Strong-holds, of those dark Dominions. -And this, O Mortals, This is your only Confelation and Security. Jesus has trod the dreadful Path, and smoothed it for your Passage.-Jesus, sleeping in the Chambers of the Tomb, has brightened the difinal Manfion; and left an inviting Odour, in those Beds of Dust. The dying Jesus (Never let the comfortable Truth depart from your Minds! The dying Jesus) is your fure Protestion, your unquestionable Pessport, through the Territories of the Grave. Believe in Him; and they shall prove a "Highway to Sion;" shall transmit you fafe to Paradife. Believe in Him; and you shall be no Losers, but unspeakable Gainers, by your Dissolution. For, hear what the Oracle of Heaven fays, upon this important Point: Whoso believeth in Me, shall never die *.-What fublime, and emphatical Language, is This? Thus much, at least, it must import-" The Nature " of that last Change, shall be surprisingly altered, for "the better. It shall no longer be inflitted, as a Pu-"nishment; but rather be vouchsafed, as a Blessing. "To fuch Persons, it shall come attended, with such " a Train of Benefits; as will render it a Kind of happy "Impropriety, to call it Dying. Dying! No! 'tis "Then they truly begin to live. Their Exit, is the End " of their Frailty, and Their Entrance upon Perfection.

^{*} John xi. 26.

"Their last Groan is the Prelude to Life and Immor"tality."

O ye timorous Souls, that are terrified at the Sound of the passing Bell: that turn pale, at the Sight of an opened Grave; and can scarce behold a Cossin or a Skull, without a shuddering Horror: Ye that are in Bondage to the grisly Tyrant, and tremble at the Shaking of his iron Rod; cry mightily to the Father of your Spirits, for Faith in his dear Son. Faith, will free you from your Slavery *. Faith, will embolden you to tread on (this fiercest of) Serpents †.—Old Simeon, classing the Child Jesus in the Arms of his Flesh, and the glorious Mediator in the Arms of his Faith, departs with Tranquility and Peace. That bitter Persecutor Saul, having won Christ; being found in Christ; longs to be dismissed from cumbrous Clay, and kindles into Rapture at the Prospect of Dissolution ‡. Methinks,

* Death's Terror is the Mountain Faith removes:
'Tis Faith difarms Deftruction.—
Believe, and look with Triumph on the Tomb.

These, and some other Quotations, I am proud to borrow from the Night Thoughts, especially from Night the Fourth. In which, Energy of Language, Sublimity of Sentiment, and the most exquisite Beauties of Poetry, are the least Perfections to be admired. Almost every Line glows with Devotion; rifes into the most exalted Apprehensions of the adorable Redeemer; and is animated with the most lively Faith in His All-sufficient Mediation. The Author of this excellent Performance has the peculiar Felicity, of ennobling all the Strength of Stile, and every Delicacy of Imagination, with the grand and distinguishing Truths of Christianity. These Thoughts give the highest Entertainment to the Fancy; and impart the noblest Improvement to the Mind. They not only refine our Taste, but prepare us for Death, and ripen us for Glory. I never take up this admirable Piece, but I am ready to cry out-Tecum vivere amem, tecum cheam libers; i.e. "Inspire me " with fuch a Spirit, and Life thall be delightful, nor Death itself " unwelcome."

[†] Luke x, 19. ‡ Phil. i. 23. 2 Tim. iv. 7, 8.

I fee another of IMMANUEL'S Followers, trusting in his Saviour; leaning on his Beloved; go down to the filent Shades, with Composure and Alacrity*.—In This powerful Name, an innumerable Company of sinsul Creatures have set up their Banners; and, "overcome, through "the Blood of the Lamb." Authorized by the Captain of thy Salvation, Thou also mayst set thy Feet, upon the Neck of this King of Terrors. Furnished with this Antidote, Thou also mayst play around the Hole of the Asp, and put thy undaunted Hand on this Cockatrice—Den †. Thou mayst ‡ feel the Viper sastening to thy mortal Part, and fear no Evil: Thou shalt one Day shake it off by a joyful Resurrection, and suffer no Harm.

RESURRECTION! That chearing Word eafes my Mind of an anxious Thought, and folves a most momentous I was going to ask; "Wherefore do all "these Corpses lie here, in this abject Condition? Is "This their final State? Has Death conquered? and "will the Tyrant hold Captivity captive? How long " wilt thou forget them, O LORD? For ever?"-No, faith the Voice from Heaven, the Word of divine Re-. velation; The Righteous are all Prisoners of Hope §. There is an Hour (an awful Secret That, and known only to all-forefeeing Wifdom) an appointed Hour there is, when an Act of Grace will pass the Great Seal above, and give them an univerfal Discharge; a general Delivery from the Abodes of Corruption.-Then, shall the LORD JESUS descend from Heaven, with the Shout of the Archangel, and the Trump of God. Destruction itself shall hear his Call, and the obedient Grave give up her dead. In a Moment, in the Twinkling of an Eye, they shake off the Sleep of Ten thousand Years; and spring forth, like the bounding Roe, to "meet their "Lord in the Air:"

^{* 2} Pet. 1. 14. † Ma. xi. 8. † Acts xxviii. 35. § Zech.

AND, O! with what cordial Congratulations; what transporting Endearments; do the Soul and Body, those affectionate Companions, reunite! But, with how much greater Demonstrations of Kindness, are they both received, by their compassionate Redeemer! The Antient of Days, who comes in the Clouds of Heaven, is their Friend; their Father; their Bridegroom. He comes with irrefiftible Power and infinite Glory; but they have nothing to fear from his majestic Appearance. Those tremendous Solemnities, which spread Desolation and Astonishment through the Universe; serve only to inflame their Love; and heighten their Hopes. The Judge, the awful Judge, amidst all his Magnificence and Splendor, vouchsafes to confess their Names; vouchsafes to commemorate their Fidelity, before all the Inhabitants of the Skies, and the whole affembled World.

HARK! the Thunders are hushed. See! the Lightnings cease their Rage. The Angelic Armies stand in filent Suspence. The whole Race of Adam, is wrapped in pleasing, or anxious Expectation.—And now, that adorable Person, whose Favour is better than Lite; whose Acceptance is a Crown of Glory; lifts up the Light of his Countenance upon the Righteous. fpeaks; and what ravishing Words proceed from his gracious Lips! What Ecstasies of Delight, they enkindle in the Breasts of the Faithful !- " I accept you, O my "People! Ye are they, that believed in my Name. Ye " are they, that renounced Yourselves, and are complete " in Me. I fee no Spot or Blemish in you; for ye are "wash d in my Blood, and clothed with my Rightees ousnets. Renewed by my Spirit, ve have glon ed F

"" me on Earth, and have been faithful unto Death. "Come, then, ye Servants of Holiness, enter into the "Joy of your Lord." Come, ye Children of Light; "ye Blessed of my Father; receive the Kingdom, that "shall never be removed; wear the Crown, which fadeth "not away; and enjoy Pleasures for evermore!"

THEN, it will be one of the smallest Privileges of the Righteous, that they shall languish no more; that Sickness will never again shew her pale Countenance, in their Dwellings *. Death itself will be " fwallowed up "in Victory." That fatal Javelin; which has drank the Blood of Monarchs, and finds its Way to the Hearts of all the Sons of Adam: shall be utterly broken. That enormous Scythe; which has ftruck Empires from their Roots, and fwept Ages and Generations into Oblivion; thall lie by in perpetual Uselessness. Sin also, which filled thy Quiver, thou infatiate Archer!-Sin, which ftrung thy Arm with refiftless Vigour-which pointed all thy Shafts with inevitable Destruction-Sin, will then be done away. Whatever is frail, or depraved, will be thrown off with our Grave-cloaths. All to come is perfect Holiness, and confummate Happiness; the Term of whose Continuance is Eternity.

O ETERNITY! Eternity! How are our boldest, our strongest Thoughts, lost and overwhelmed in thee! Who can set Landmarks, to limit thy Dimensions; or find Plumbets, to sathom thy Depths? Arithmeticians have Figures, to compute all the Progressions of Time. Astronomers have Instruments, to calculate the Distances of the Planets. But what Numbers can state, what Lines can gauge, the Lengths and Breadths of Eternity? "It is higher than Heaven; what canst thou do? "deeper than Hell; what canst thou know? The Mea-"fure thereof, is longer than the Earth, broader than "the Sea *.'

^{*} Ifaiab, speaking of the new Jerusalem, mentions this, as one of its Immunities: The Inhabitants thereof shall no more say, I am sick. Another Clause, in its Royal Charter, runs thus; GOD shall wipe away all Tears from their Eyes; and there shall be no more Death, neither Sorrow, nor Crying; acither shall there be any more Pain. Isa. xxxiii. 24. Rev. xxi. 4.

Mysterious, mighty Existence! A Sum, not to be lessened by the largest Deductions! An Extent, not to be contracted by all possible Diminutions! None can truly say, after the most prodigious Waste of Ages; "So much of Eternity is gone." For, when Millions of Centuries are elapsed, it is but just commencing; and, when Millions more have run their ample Round, it will be no nearer ending. Yea, when Ages, numerous as the Bloom of Spring; increased by the Herbage of Summer; both augmented by the Leaves of Autumn; and all multiplied by the Drops of Rain, which drown the Winter—when these, and ten thousand times ten thousand more—more than can be represented by any Similitude, or imagined by any Conception—when all these are revolved and finished; Eternity, vast, boundless, amazing Eternity, will only be beginning!

What a pleasing, yet awful Thought is this! Full of Delight, and full of Dread. O! may it alarm our Fears; quicken our Hopes; and animate all our Endeavours! Since we are soon to launch into this endless and inconceivable State; let us give all Diligence, to secure our Entrance into Bliss.—Now, let us give all Diligence; because there is no Alteration, in the Scenes of Futurity. The Wheel never turns: All is stedsast and immoveable beyond the Grave. Whether we are then seated on the Throne, or stretched on the Rack; a Seal will be set to our Condition, by the Hand of everlasting Mercy, or inflexible Justice.—The Saints always rejoice amidst the Smiles of Heaven; their Harps are perpetually tuned; their Triumphs admit of no Interruption.—The Ruin of the Wicked is irremediable. The fatal Sentence, once passed, is never to be repealed. No Hope of exchanging their doleful Habitations. But all Things bear the same dismal Aspect, for ever and ever.

The Wicked—My Mind recoils*, at the Apprehenfion of their Mifery. It has fludiously waved the fearful Subject; and feems unwilling to pursue it, even now.
—But 'tis better to reflect upon it, for a few Minutes; than to endure it, to eternal Ages. Perhaps, the Confideration of their aggravated Mifery, may be profitably terrible: may teach me more highly to prize the Saviour, who "delivers from going down into the bottom"lefs Pit:" may drive me, like the Avenger's Sword, to this only City of Refuge, for obnoxious Sinners.

The Wicked seem to lie here, like Malesactors, in a deep and strong Dungeon; reserved against the Day of Trial.—" Their Departure was without Peace." Clouds of Horror, sat louring upon their closing Eye-lids; most sadly foreboding the "Blackness of Darkness for ever." When the last Sickness scized their Frame, and the inevitable Change advanced; when they saw the fatal Arrow, fitting to the Strings; saw the deadly Archer, aiming at their Heart; and selt the envenomed Shast, sastened in their Vitals—Good God! what Fearfulness came upon them! What horrible Dread overwhelmed them! How did they stand shuddering and aghast, upon the tremendous Precipice! Excessively assaid to plunge into the Abyss of Eternity, yet utterly unable to maintain their Standing on the Verge of Life.

^{* —} Animus meminissie borret, luAuque resugit.

O! what pale Reviews, what startling Prospects, conspire to augment their Sorrows!—They look back-ward, and behold! a most melancholy Scene! Sins unrepented of; Mercy slighted; and the Day of Grace ending!—They look forward, and nothing presents itself, but the righteous Judge; the dreadful Tribunal; and a most solemn Reckoning.—They roll around their affrighted Eyes, on attending Friends. If Accomplices in Debauchery; it sharpens their Anguish, to consider this farther Aggravation of their Guilt; That they have not sinned alone, but drawn others into the Snare. If religious Acquaintance; it strikes a fresh Gash into their Hearts, to think of never seeing them any more, but only at an unapproachable Distance, separated by the unpassable Gulf.

AT last, perhaps, they begin to pray. Finding no other possible Way of Relief, they are constrained to apply unto the Almighty. With trembling Lips, and a faltering Tongue, they cry unto that Sovereign Being " who kills and makes alive."—But why have they deferred, fo long deferred their Addresses to God? Why have they despised all his Counsels; and stood incorrigible, under his incessant reproofs? How often have they been forewarned of these Terrors; and most importunately intreated, to feek the LORD, while he might be found ?-I wish, they may obtain Mercy at the eleventh, at the last Hour. I wish, they may be shatched from the Jaws; the opened, the gaping, the almost closing Jaws of Damnation. But, alas! Who can tell, whether affronted Majesty, will lend an Ear to their Complaint? Whether the Holy One will work a Miracle of Grace, in Behalf of fuch Transgressors? He may, for aught any Mortal knows, " laugh at their Calamity, and " mock when their Fear cometh."

Thus they lie, groaning out the poor Remains of Life; their Limbs bathed in Sweat; their Heart struggling with convulsive Throes; Pains insupportable throbbing in every Pulse; and innumerable Darts of Agony transfixing their Conscience.

In that dread Moment, how the frantic Soul Raves round the Walls of her Clay Tenement; Runs to each Avenue; and shrieks for Help; But shrieks in vain! How wishfully She looks On all She's leaving, now no longer her's! A little longer, yet a little longer,

O! might She stay, to wash away her Crimes, And sit her for her Passage! Mournful Sight! Her very Eyes weep Blood; and every Groan She heaves, is big with Horror: But the Foe, Like a staunch Murd'rer, steady to his Purpose, Pursues her close thro' ev'ry Lane of Life, Nor misses once the Track; but presses on; Till, forc'd at last to the tremendous Verge, At once she sinks *.—

Ir this be the End of the Ungodly, "My Soul, come "not Thou into their Secret! Unto their Assembly, "mine Honour, be not Thou united!"—How awfully accomplished is that Prediction of inspired Wisdom! Sin, though seemingly sweet in the Commission; yet at the last, it biteth like a Serpent, and stingeth like an Adder.—Fly therefore from the Tents, O! sly from the Ways, of such wretched Men.

HAPPY Diffolution! were this the Period of their Woes. But, alas! all these Tribulations, are only "the Beginning of Sorrows;" a small Drop only from that "Cup of Trembling," which is mingled for their future ^{*} See a valuable Poem, intitled, The Grave.

Portion.—No fooner has the last Pang dislodged their reluctant Souls, but they are hurried into the Presence of an injured angry God. Not under the conducting Care of beneficent Angels, but exposed to the Infults of accurfed Spirits; who lately tempted them, now upbraid them, and will for ever torment them.—Who can imagine their Confusion and Distress; when they stand, guilty and inexcusable, before their incensed Creator? They are received with Frowns. The God that made them, has no "Mercy on them *." The Prince of Peace, rejects them with Abhorrence. He configns them over to Chains of Darkness, and Receptacles of Despair; against the severer Doom, and more public Infamy of the Great Day.—Then, all the Vials of Wrath. will be emptied upon these wretched Creatures. The Law they have violated, and the Gospel they have slighted; the Power they have defied, and the Goodness they have abused; will all get themselves Honour in their exemplary Deftruction. Then, God, the God to whom Vengeance belongeth, will draw the Arrow to the very Head, and fet them as the Mark of his inexcrable Difpleafure.

RESURRECTION will be no Privilege to them; but Immortality itself, their everlasting Curse.—Would they not bless the Grave, "that Land where all Things are "forgotten;" and wish to lie eternally hid, in its deepest Gloom? But, the Dust refuses to cenceal their Persons; or to draw a Veil over their Practices. They also must awake; must arise; must appear at the Bar; and meet the Judge. A Judge, before whom "the Pillars of "Heaven tremble, and the Earth melts away." A Judge, once long-suffering, and very compassionate; but now unalterably determined, to teach stubborn Offenders—What it is, to provoke the Omnipotent God-head: what it is, to trample upon the Blood of his Son and offer Defpite to all the gracious Overtures of his Spirit.

O! THE Perplexity! the Distraction! that must seize the impenitent Rebels, when they are summoned to the great Tribunal!—What will they do, in this Day of severe Visitation? This Day of sinal Decision?—Where? How? Whence, can they find Help?—To which of the Saints will they turn? Whither betake themselves, for Shelter or for Succour?—Alas! 'tis all in vain; 'tis all too late.—Friends and Acquaintance know them no more. Men and Angels abandon them, to their approaching Doom. Even the Mediator, the MEDIATOR himself, deserts them in this dreadful Hour.—To fly, will be impracticable: to justify themselves, still more impossible: and now, to make any Supplications, utterly unavailable.

Behold! the Books are opened. The Secrets of all Hearts are disclosed. The hidden Things of Darkness are brought to Light. How empty, how ineffectual now, are all those refined Artifices; with which Hypocrites imposed upon their Fellow-creatures, and preferved a Character in the Sight of Men!—The jealous God, who has been about their Path, and about their Bed, and 'spied out all their Ways, sets before them the Things that they have done. They cannot answer him one in a Thousand, nor stand in the awful Judgment. The Heavens reveal their Iniquities, and the Earth rises up against them *. They are speechless with Guilt, and sligmatized with Insamy, before all the Armies of the Sky, and all the Nations of the Redeemed.—What a Favour would they esteem it; to hide their ashamed Heads, in the Bottom of the Ocean; or even to be buried, beneath the Ruins of the tottering World!

If the Contempt, poured upon them, be thus infupportable; how will their Hearts endure, when the Sword of infinite Indignation is unfheathed; and fiercely waved, around their defenceless Heads; or pointed directly, at their naked Breafts? How must the Wretches scream with wild Amazement, and rend the very Heavens with their Cries, when the right-aiming Thunderbolts go abroad; Go abroad, with a dreadful Commission, to drive them from the Kingdoms of Glory; and plunge them—not into the Sorrows of a Moment, or the Tortures of an Hour—but into all the restless Agonies, of unquenchable Fire, and everlasting Despair *.

Misery of Miseries! too shocking for Reslection to dwell upon. But, if so dismal to foresee; and that at a Distance; together with some comfortable Expectation of escaping it—O! how bitter, inconceivably bitter, to bear; without any Intermission; or any Mitigation; through hopeless and eternal Ages!

Who has any Bowels of Pity?—Who has any Sentiments of Compassion? Who has any tender Concern for his Fellow-creatures? Who?—In God's Name, and for Christ's Sake, let Him shew it; by warning every Man, and befeeching every Man, to seek the Lord while He may be found: To throw down the Arms of Rebellion, before the Act of Indemnity expires: Submissively to adore the Lamb, while he holds out the golden Sceptre.—Here, let us act the friendly Part to

Regions of Sorrow, doleful Shades, where Peace
And Reft can never dwell; Hope never comes,
That comes to All: but Torture without End
Still urges, and a fiery Deluge, fed
With ever-burning Sulphur unconfum'd.

MILT.

Mankind. Here, let the whole Force of our Benevolence exert itself: in exhorting Relations, Acquaintance, Neighbours, whomsoever we may probably influence, to take the Wings of Faith unseigned; of Repentance undelayed; and slee away from this Wrath to come.

UPON the Whole; what stupendous Discoveries are these! Lay them up in a faithful Remembrance, O my Soul. Recollect them, with the most ferious Attention; when thou liest down, and when thou risest up. When thou walkest, receive them for thy Companions; when thou talkest, listen to them as thy Prompters; and whatever thou doest, consult them as thy Directors .-Influenced by these Considerations, thy Views will greaten; thy Affections be exalted; and thou thyself raifed above the tantalizing Power of perishing Things. Duly mindful of these, it will be the Sum of thy Desires, and the Scope of thy Endeavours, to gain the Approbation of that Sovereign Being; who will then fill the Throne, and pronounce the decifive Sentence. Thou wilt fee nothing worth a Wish *, in Comparison of having his Will for thy Rule; his Glory for thy Aim; and his Holy Spirit for thy ever actuating Principle.

Wonder, O Man; be lost in Admiration; at those predigious Events, which are coming upon the Universe. Events, the Greatness of which, nothing finite can meafure. Such, as will cause whatever is considerable or momentous in the Annals of all Generations, to sink into Littleness and Nothing. Events (Jesus prepare us, for their Approach; defend us, when they take Place!) big with the everlasting Fates, of all the Living, and all the Dead.—I must see the Graves cleaving; the Sea teeming; and Swarms unsuspected, Crouds unnumbered, yea, Multitudes of thronging Nations, rising from both.—I must see the World in Flames; must stand at the Dissolution of all terrestrial Things; and be an Attendant on the Burial of Nature.—I must see the vast Expanse of the Sky, wrapt up like a Scroll; and the incarnate God, issuing forth from Light inaccessible, with ten thousand times ten thousand Angels, to judge both Men and Devils.—I must see the Curtain of Time drop; see all Eternity disclosed to View; and enter upon a State of Being, that will never, never, have an End.

Night Thoughts.

^{*} Great Day of Dread, Decision, and Despair! At Thought of Thee, each sublunary Wish Lets go its eager Grasp, and quits the World.

AND ought I not (let the vainest Imagination determine; ought I not) to try the Sincerity of my Faith, and take Heed to my Ways? Is there an Inquiry; is there a Care; of greater, of equal, of comparable Importance?—Is not this an infinitely preffing Call, to fee that my Loins are girded about; my Lamp trimmed; and myself dressed for the Bridegroom's Appearance? That, washed in the Fountain opened in my Saviour's Side, and clad with the Marriage Garment wove by his Obedience; I may be found in Peace, unblameable, and unreproveable.—Otherwise, how shall I stand with Boldness; when the Stars of Heaven fall from their Orbs? How shall I come forth erest and courageous: when the Earth itself reels to and fro like a Drunkard *? How shall I look up with Joy, and see my Salvation drawing nigh; when the Hearts of Millions and Millions fail for Fear?

Now, Madam, left my Meditations fet in a Cloud; and leave any unpleafing Gloom upon your Mind; let me once more turn to the brightening Prospects of the Righteous. A View of Them, and their delightful Expectations, may serve to exhibit the Thoughts; which have been musing upon melancholy Subjects, and hovering about the Edges of infernal Darkness. Just as a spacious Field, arrayed in chearful Green, relieves and reinvigorates the Eye; which has satigued itself by poring upon some minute, or gazing upon some glaring Object.

^{*} Kai. xxiv. 20.

The Righteous feem to lie by, in the Bosom of the Earth, as a wary Pilot in some well-sheltered Creek; till all the Storms, which insest this lower World, are blown over. Here they enjoy safe Anchorage; are in no Danger of foundering, amidst the Waves of prevailing Iniquicy; or of being shipwrecked, on the Rocks of any powerful Temptation. But, ere-long, we shall behold them holsting their Flag of Hope; riding before a sweet Gale of atoning Merit, and redeeming Love; till they make, with all the Sails of an assured Faith, the blessed Port of eternal Life.

Then, may the honoured Friend, to whom I am writing; rich in good Works; rich in Heavenly Tempers; but inexpreffibly richer in her Saviour's Righteousnes—O! may she enter the Harbour, like a gallant stately Vessel; returned successful and victorious from some grand Expedition; with Acclamations, Honour, and Joy! While my little Bark, attendant on the Solemnity, and a Partaker of the Triumph, glides humbly after: and both rest together in the Haven—the wish'd for, blissful Haven of persect Security, and everlasting Repose.

REFLECTIONS

O N A

FLOWER-GARDEN.

I look upon the Pleasure, which we take in a Garden, as one of the most innocent Delights in human Life. A Garden was the Habitation of our first Parents before the Fall. It is naturally apt to fill the Mind with Calmness and Tranquillity, and to lay all its turbulent Passions at Rest. It gives us a great Insight into the Contrivance and Wisdom of Providence, and suggests innumerable Subjects for Meditation.

Spect. Vol. VII. Nº 477.

1 - 2 - _k. £ .

REFLECTIONS

ON A

FLOWER-GARDEN.

IN A LETTER TO A LADY.

MADAM,

SOME Time ago, my Meditations took a Turn among the Tombs. They visited the awful and melancholy Mansions of the Dead*; and you was pleased to favour them with your Attention.—May I, now, beg the Honour of your Company, in a more inviting and delightful Excursion? In a beautiful Flower-Garden; where I lately walked, and at once regaled the Sense, and indulged the Fancy.

^{* &}quot;Discourses on the Vanity of the Creature, which represent the "Barrenness of every Thing in this World, and its Incapacity of producing any solid or substantial Happiness, are useful.—Those Speculations also, which shew the bright Side of Things, and lay forth those innocent Entertainments, which are to be met with among the several Objects that encompass us, are no less beneficial." Spect. Vol. V. No 393. Upon the Plan of these Observations, the preceding and following Reseations are formed.

It was early in a Summer Morning. When the Air was cool; the Earth moist; the whole Face of the Creation fresh and gay. The noisy World was scarce awake. Business had not quite shook off his sound Sleep; and Riot had but just reclined his giddy Head. All was serene: All was still: Every Thing tended to inspire Tranquility of Mind, and invite to serious Thought.

ONLY the wakeful Lark had left her Neft, and was mounting on high, to falute the opening Day. Elevated in Air, fhe feemed to call the laborious Hufbandman to his Toil, and all her Fellow-Songsters to their Notes.— Earliest of Birds, faid I, Companion of the Dawn, may I always rife at thy Voice! Rife, to offer the Matin-Song; and adore that beneficent Being, "who maketh the "Out-goings of the Morning and Evening to rejoice."

How charming to rove abroad, at this fweet Hour of Prime! To enjoy the Calm of Nature; to tread the dewy Lawns; and tafte the unrifled Freshness of the Air!

Sweet is the Breath of Morn, her Rising sweet, With Charm of earliest Birds.

WHAT a Pleasure do the Sons of Sloth lose! Little, ah! little is the Sluggard fensible, how delicious an Entertainment he foregoes, for the poorest of all animal Gratifications *.

* See! how Revelation and Reason, the Scriptures and the Classics, unanimously exhort to this most beneficial Practice. They both invite us to early Rising, by the most engaging Motives, and the most alluring Representations.

Come, my Belowed, let us go forth into the Field; let us lodge in the Villages. Let us get up early to the Vine-yards; let us see if the Vine flourish, whether the tender Grape appear, and the Pomegranates bud forth. Cant. vii. 11, 12.

Luciferi primo cum Sidere, frigida Rura Carpanus: dum mane novum, dum Gramina canent, Et Ros in tenera Pecori gratissimus Herba est.

VIRG. Georg. III.

THE Greyness of the Dawn decays gradually. Abundance of ruddy Streaks tinge the Fleeces of the Firmament. Till, at length, the dappled Afpect of the East is loft, in one ardent and boundless Blush.—Is it the Surmife of Imagination, or do the Skies really redden with Shame; to fee fo many fupinely stretched, on their drowfv Pillows?-Shall Man be loft, in luxurious Eafe? Shall Man wafte these precious Hours, in idle Slumbers? While the vigorous Sun is up, and going on his Maker's Errand? While all the feathered Choir are hymning the Creator, and paying their Homage in Harmony?-No. Let Him heighten the Melody of the tuneful Tribes, by adding the rational Strains of Devotion. Let Him improve the fragrant Oblations of Nature, by mingling, with the rifing Odours, the more refined Breath of Praise.

'Tis natural for Man to look upward; to throw his first Glance upon the Objects that are above Him.

Strait towards Heav'n my wend'ring Eyes I turn'd, And gaz'd a while the ample Sky.

Prodictious Theatre! Where Lightnings dart their Fire, and Thunders utter their Voice. Where Tempests spend their Rage, and Worlds unnumbered roll at large!—O the Greatness of that mighty Hand; which meteth out this amazing Circumference, with a Span! O the Immensity of that wonderful Being; before whom this unmeasurable Extent, is no more than a Point!—And O (thou pleasing Thought!) the unsearchable Riches of that Mercy, which is greater than the Heavens*! Is more enlarged and extensive, in its gracious Exercise; than these illimitable Tracts of Air, and Sea, and Firmament! Which pardons Crimes of the most enormous Size, and the most horrid Aggravations; pardons them, in Consideration of the Redeemer's Atonement, with perfect Freeness, and the utmost Readiness! More readily, if it were possible, than this all-surrounding Expanse admits, within its Circuit, a Ridge of Mountains, or even a Grain of Sand.

Come hither, then, ye awakened, trembling Sinners. Come *, weary and heavy-laden with a Sense of your Iniquities. Condemn yourselves. Renounce all Reliance on any Thing of your own. Let your Trust be in the tender Mercy of God, for Ever and Ever.

IN them hath he fet a Tabernacle for the Sun †.—Behold him coming forth, from the Chambers of the East. See! the Clouds, like floating Curtains, are thrown back at his Approach. With what refulgent Majesty does he walk abroad; How transcendently bright is his Coun-

* The Lines which follow, are admirably descriptive of the Spirit and Practice, hinted above. In them Desire pants; Prayer wrestles; and Faith, as it were, grasps the Prize.—I take Leave to transplant them into this Place; and I could wish them a better, a more confpicuous Situation, than either their new or their native Soil. Their native Soil, is no other than The Lamentation of a Sinner, written by Mr. Sternhold. Notwithstanding the unpromiting Genius of the Performance, I think, We may challenge the greatest Masters, to produce any Thing more spirited and importunate; more full of Nature; or more southed with Life.

Mercy, Good LORD, Mercy I crave; This is the total Sum; For Mercy, LORD, is all my Suit; LORD, let thy Mercy come.

The short Sentences—Not a single Copulative—The frequent Repetition of the Divine Name—The almost incessant Reiteration of the Blessing, so passionately desired, and inexpressibly needed.—This is the genuine Language of Ardor: these are Beauties obvious to every Eye; and cannot fail, either to please the judicious Taste, or to edify the gracius Heart.

+ Pfal. xix. 4.

tenance; shedding Day, and inexhaustible Light, through the Universe !- Is there a Scene though finished by the most elaborate and costly Refinements of Art, "com-" parable to these illustrious Solemnities of opening Sun-" shine? Before these, all the studied Pageantry of the "Theatre; the glittering Oeconomy of an Affembly; " or even the heightened Ornaments of a Royal Palace; " hide their diminished Heads, and shrink into nothing." -I have read of a Person, so struck with the Splendors of this noble Luminary; that he imagined himself made on Purpose to contemplate its Glories. O! that Christians would adopt his Perfuasion, and transfer it to the Sun of Righteousness! Thus applied, it would cease to be a chimerical Notion, and become a most important Truth. For fure I am, it is the supreme Happiness of the eternal State; and therefore may well be the ruling Concern of this present Life; to know the only true GOD. and FESUS CHRIST, whom he hath fent .- Nor do I ftand alone in this Opinion. The very best Judge of whatever is valuable in Science, or perfective of our Nature; a Judge, who formed his Taste on the Maxims of Paradife, and received the Finishings of his Education in the third Heavens; this Judge, determines to know nothing but JESUS CHRIST, and him crucified. He possessed, in his own Person, the finest, the most admired Accomplishments; yet pronounces them no better than Dung, in Comparison of the * supereminent Excellency of this faving Knowledge.

METHINKS, I discern a thousand admirable Properties in the Sun. 'Tis, certainly, the best material Emblem of the Creator. There is more of God in its Lustre, Energy, and Usefulness, than in any other visible Being. To worship it as a Deity, was the least inexcusable of all the heathen Idolatries. One scarce can wonder, that fallen Reason should mistake so fair a Copy, for the adorable Original. No Comparison, in the whole Book of sacred Wisdom, pleases me more; than that which resembles the blessed Jesus, to yonder Regent of the Day *. Who now advances on his azure Road, to scatter Light and dispense Gladness through the Nations.

^{*} Το υπερεχον της γνωσεως. Phil. iii. 7,

What were all the Realms of the World, but a Dungeon of Darknefs, without the Beams of the Sun? All their fine Scenes, hid from our View; lost in Obfcurity.—In vain, we roll around our Eyes in the midnight Gloom. In vain, we strive to behold the Features of amiable Nature. Turn whither we will, no Form or Comeliness appears. All seems a dreary Waste; an undistinguished Chaos. Till the returning Hours, have unbarred the Gates of Light, and let forth the Morn.—Then, what a Prospect opens! The Heavens are paved with Azure, and strewed with Roses. A Variety of the liveliest Verdures array the Plains. The Flowers put on a Glow of the richest Colours. The whole Creation stands forth dressed in all the Charms of Beauty. The ravished Eye looks round, and wonders.

And what had been the Condition of our intellectual Nature, without the great Redeemer, and his Divine Revelation?—Alas! what abfurd and unworthy Apprehentions, did the Pagan Sages form of God! What idle Dreams, what childish Conjectures, were their Doctrines of a future State!—How did the Bulk, even of that favoured Nation, the Years, weary themselves in every Vanity, to obtain Peace and Reconciliation with their offended Jehonah! Till Jesus arose upon our benighted ^{*} Unto you, that fear my Name, shall the Sun of Righteousness arise, with Usaling in his Wings. Mal. iv. z.

Minds,

Minds, and brought Life and Immortality to light; till HE arose, to enlighten the wretched Gentiles, and to be the Glory of his People Ifrael.

Now we no longer cry out, with a restless Impatience, Where is GOD my Maker? For we are allowed to contemplate the Brightness of his Glory, and the express Image of his Person, in the Face of FESUS CHRIST.—Now, we no longer inquire, with an unfatisfied Solicitude, "Which is the Way to Blifs?" Because Jesus has marked the Path, by his shining Example; and left us an unerring Clue, in his holy Word. -Now, we have no more Reason to proceed with misgiving Hearts, in our Journey to Eternity; or to ask anxiously, as we go; "Who will roll away the Stone, "and open the everlafting Doors? Who will remove "the flaming Sword, and give us Admission into the Delights of Paradise?" For it is done, All done, by the Captain of our Salvation. Sin he has expiated, by the unblemished Sacrifice of Himself. The Law he has fulfilled, by his perfect Obedience. The Sinner he transforms, by his fanctifying Spirit.—In a Word; He hath both presented us with a clear Discovery, of good Things to come; and administered to us an abundant Entrance, into the final Enjoyment of them.

Whenever, therefore, we blefs God for the circling Seasons, and revolving Day; let us adore, thankfully adore Him, for the more precious Appearance of the Sun of Righteousness, and his glorious Gospel. Without which, we should have been groping, even to this Hour, in spiritual Darkness, and the Shadow of Death. Without which, we must have wandered in a Maze of inextricable Uncertainties; and have "stumbled upon the dark Mountains" of Error, till we sell into the bottomless Pit of Perdition.

WITHOUT that grand enlivening Principle, What were this Earth, but a lifeleft Math? A rude Lump of inactive Matter? The Trees could never break forth into Leaves, nor the Plants spring up into Flowers. We thould no more behold the Meadows, mantled over with Green; nor the Valleys, itanding thick with Corn. Or, to speak in the beautiful Language of a Prophet; * No longer would the Fig tree bloffom, nor Fruit be in the Vine: The Labour of the Olive would fail, and the Fields could yield no Meat: The Flocks must be cut off from the Fold, and there would be no Herd in the Stalls.—The Sun darts its Beams among all the vegetable Tribes; and paints the Spring, and enriches the Autumn. This pierces to the Roots of the Vineyard and the Orchard; and fets afloat those fermenting Juices, which at length burst into Floods of Wine, or bend the Boughs with a mellow Load.-Nor are its Favours confined to the Upper Regions; but distributed into the deepest Recesses of Creation. It penetrates the Beds of Metal, and finds its Way to the Place of the Sapphires. It tinctures the Seeds of Gold, that are ripening into Ore; and throws a Brilliancy into the Water of the Diamond, that is hardening on its Rock .- In short; the beneficial Agency of this magnificent Luminary, is inexpressible. It beautifies, and impregnates, universal Nature. "There is no-"thing hid from the Heat thereof."

Just in the same Manner, were the rational World dead in Trespasses and Sins, without the reviving Energy of Jesus Christ. He is "the Resurrection and the "Life:" The over-slowing Fountain of the one, and the all-powerful Cause of the other. The second Adam is a quickening Spirit, and all his Saints live through Him.

He shines upon their Assections; and they shoot forth into Heavenly Graces, and abound in the Fruits of Righteousness. Faith unseigned, and Love undissembled, those noblest Productions of the renewed Nature, are the Essect of bis Operation on the Mind. Not so much as one divine Disposition could spread itself, not one Christian Habit unfold and slourish, without the kindly Instuences of bis Grace.

As there is no Fruitfulness, so likewise no Chearfulness*, without the Sun.—When that auspicious Sovereign of the Day, diffuses the Mildness of his Morning Splendor, He creates an universal Festival. Millions of glittering Infects awake into Existence, and bask in his Rays. The Birds start from their Slumbers, and pour their delighted Souls, in Harmony. The Flocks, with bleating Accents, hail the welcome Bleffing. The Valleys ring with rural Music; the Hills echo back the artless Strains. All that is vocal, joins in the general Choir: all that has Breath, exults in the chearing Influence.—Whereas; was that radiant Orb extinguished, a tremendous Gloom would enfue, and Horror insupportable. Nay; let it only be eclipsed for a few Minutes; and all Nature assumes an Air of Sadness. The Heavens are wrapt in Sables, and put on a Kind of Mourning. The most sprightly Animals hang down their dejected Heads. The Songsters of the Grove are struck dumb. Howling Beasts roam abroad for Prev: Ominous Birds come forth and fcreech: The Heart of Man fails, or a fud len Pang feizes the foreboding Mind. -So, when Christ hides away his Face; when Faith ^{* &}quot;The Sun, which is as the great Soul of the Universe, and "produces all the Necessaries of Life, has a particular Influence in chearing the Mind of Man, and making the Heart glad," Spect. Vol. V. N° 387.

loses Sight of that Consolation of Israel; how gloomy are the Prospects of the Soul! Our God seems to be a consuming Fire, and our Sin cry loudly for Vengeance. The Thoughts bleed inwardly; the Christian walks heavily. All without is irksome; all within is disconsolate.—Lift up then, most gracious Jesus, thou nobler Day-spring from on high! O lift up the Light of thy Countenance, upon thy People! Reveal the Fulness of thy mediatorial Sufficiency; make clear our Title to this great Salvation; and thereby impart

What nothing earthly gives, or can destroy, The Soul's calm Sunshine, and the Heart-felt Joy *.

In once Instance more, let me pursue the Similitude. The Sun, I observe, pours his Lustre all around; to every Distance, and in every Direction. Profusely liberal of his Gifts, He Illuminates and chears all the Ends of the Earth, and the whole Compass of the Skies. The East reddens, with his rising Radiance; and the western Hills, are gilded with his streaming Splendors. The chilly Regions of the North, are cherished by his genial Warmth; while the fouthern Tracts, glow with his Fire. Thus, are the Influences of the Sun of Righteoufness, diffusive and unconfined. The Generations of old felt them; and Generations yet unborn, will rejoice in them. The Merits of his precious Death extended to the first, and will be propagated to the last, Ages of Mankind.-May they, ere long, visit the remotest Climates, and darkest Corners of the Earth! Command thy Gospel, bleffed Jesus, thy everlasting Gospel, to take the Wings of the Morning, and travel with yonder Sun. Let it fly upon strong Pinions among every People, Nation, and Language. That, where the Heat scorches, and the Cold freezes, Thou mayst be known, confessed, and adored! That Strangers to thy Name, and Enemies to thy Doctrine, may be enlightened with the Knowledge, and won to the Love, of thy Truth! O! may that best of Eras come; that wished for Period advance; when All the Ends of the World shall remember themselves, and be turned unto the LORD; and all the Kindreds of the Nations worship before him *!

FROM the Heavens, we retire to the Earth.—Here, the Drops of Dew, like fo many liquid Crystals +, sparkle upon the Eye. How brilliant, and unfullied, is their Lustre! How little inferior to the proud Stone, which irradiates a Monarch's Crown! They want nothing but Solidity and Permanency; to equal them with the finest Treasures of the Jeweler's Casket .- Here, it must be confessed, they are greatly deficient; short-lived Ornaments; possessed of little more, than a momentary Radiance, The Sun, that lights them up, will foon melt them into Air, or exhale them into Vapours. Within another Hour, we may "look for their Place, and they " shall be away."-O! may every good Resolution of mine, and of my Flock's; may our united Breathings after God, not be like these transient Decorations of the Morning; but like the fubstantial Glory of the growing Day! The one shines more and more, with augmented Splendors; while the other, having glittered gaily for a few Moments, disappear and are lost.

How fenfibly has this Dew refreshed the vegetable Kingdoms! The fervent Heat of Yesterday's Sun, had almost parched the Face, and exhausted the Sweets, of Nature. But what a fovereign Restorative, are these cooling Distillations of the Night! How they gladden, and invigorate, the languishing Herbs! Sprinkled with these reviving Drops, their Verdure deepens; their Bloom is new-flushed; their Fragrance, faint or intermitted, becomes potent and copious.—Thus does the everbleffed Spirit revive the drooping troubled Confcience of a Sinner. When that Almighty Comforter sheds his fweet Influence on the Soul; difplays the all-fufficient Sacrifice of a Divine Redeemer; and "witnesses with " our Spirit," that we are interested in the Saviour, and, by this Means, are Children of GOD; then, what a pleafing Change enfues! Former Anxieties are remembered no more. Every uneasy Apprehension vanishes. Soothing Hopes, and delightful Expectations, fucceed. The Countenance drops its dejected Mien; the Eyes brighten with a lively Chearfulness; while the Lips express the Heart-felt Satisfaction, in the Language of Thankigiving, and the Voice of Melody.—In this Sense, merciful God, be as the Dew unto Ifrael! " Pour upon " them the continual Dew of thy Bleffing." And O! let not my Fleece be dry, while heavenly Benediction defcends upon all around.

MILT.

^{*} Pfal. xxii. 27.

[†] Now Morn, her rofy Steps in th' Eastern Clime Advancing, fow'd the Earth with orient Pearl.

Who can number these pearly Drops? They hang on every Hedge; they twinkle from every Spray; and adorn the whole Herbage of the Field. Not a Blade of Grass, not a single Leas, but wears the watry Pendants. So vast is the Presustant, that it basses the Arithmetician's Art. Here, let the benevolent Mind contemplate and admire that emphatical Scripture; which, from this elegant Similitude, describes the Increase of the Messiah's Kingdom. The Royal Prophet, speaking of Christ, and foretelling the Success of his Religion, has this remarkable markable Expression *; The Dew of thy Birth is of the Womb of the Morning. (i. e.) As the Morning is the Mother

* Pfalm cx. 3. מרחד לך של ילרתו. The most exact Translation of this difficult Passage is, I apprehend, as follows; Præ rore uteri auroræ, tili est ros juventutis, vel prolis tuæ. The Dew of thy Birth is larger, more copious, than the Dew which proceeds from the Womb of the Morning.—I cannot acquiesce in the new Version; because that disjoins the Womb of the Morning, from the Dew of thy Birth. Whereas, they seem to have a clear Affinity, and a close Connection. The Womb of the Morning is, with the utmost Pertinency, applied to the Conception and Production of Dews; agreeably to a delicate Line, in that great Master of just Description, and lively Painting, Mr. Thomson:

The meek ey'd Morn appears, Mother of Deaus. Summer.

We meet with a fine Expression in the Book of Job, which may serve to confirm this Remark; may illustrate the Propriety of the Phrase, used in this Connection. "Hath the Rain a Father, or who hath be-"gotten the Drops of Dew?" It seems, the Oriental Writers delighted to represent the Dew, as a kind of Birth, as the Offspring of the Morning. And if so, surely there could be no Image in the whole Compass of the Universe, better adapted to the Psalmiss's Purpose: or more strongly significant of those Multitudes of Proselytes, which were born, not of Blood, nor of the Will of the Flesh, nor of the Will of Man, but of GOD; by the powerful Energy of his Word and Spirit.—Upon this Supposition, the whole Verse describes

q. d. In the Day of thy Power, when thy glorious Gospel shall be published in the World, and accompanied with marvellous Esticacy—In that memorable Period, Thy People, discontinuing the former Oblations, commanded under the Mesaic Law; shall devote themselves, as so many living Sacrifices, to thy Honour. Not constrained by Force, but charmed with thy Excellency, they shall come in Volunteers to thy Service, and be free-avill Offerings in thy Church.—Neither shall they be "empty Vines," or bare Professors; but shall walk in all the Beauties of Holiness, and bring forth such amiable Fruit, as will adorn the Doctrine they embrace.—What is still more desirable, they shall be as numerous, as they are willing and holy. Born to Thee in Numbers, immense and inconceivable; exceeding even the countless Myriads of Dewsey

Mother of Dews; produces them, as it were, from a prolific Womb; and featters them, with the most lavish Abun-

Dew-drops, which are begotten by the Night, and iffue from the Womb of the recent Morning.

By this Interpretation, the Text, I think, is cleared of its Obscurity; and appears both truly fublime, and perfectly just.

May I be pardoned the Digression, and acquitted from Presumption; if on this Occasion, I take leave to animadvert upon, what seems harsh and unnatural, in the common Exposition of the last Verse of this Pfalm! All the Commentators (as many, at least, as I have confulted) inform their Readers; that to drink of the Brook in the Way, fignifies to undergo Sufferings and Death. Which, in my Opinion, is a Construction extremely forced, and hardly supportable; altogether remote from the Import of fuch poetical Forms of Diction, customary among the Eastern Nations. In those fultry Climes, nothing could be more welcome to the Traveler than a Brook streaming near his Paths. To quench his Thirst, and lave his Feet, in the cooling Current, was one of the greatest Refreshments imaginable, and re-animated him to pursue his Journey. For which Reason, among others, Brooks are a very favourite Image with the inspired Penmen; used to denote a Situation fertile and delightful, or a State of Pleasure and Satisfaction; but never, that I can recollect, to picture out the contrary Condition of Tribulation and Distress.

The Water-floods, indeed, in the facred Writings, often represent fome imminent Danger, or grievous Affiiction. But then they are not-בדרך בדרך Streams fo calm, that they keep within their Banks, and glide quietly by the Traveler's Footsteps; fo clear, that they are sit for the wayfaring Man's Use, and invite his Lips to a Draught; both which Notions are plainly implied in the Text.—They are rather— משברי -boifterous Billows; buriting over a Ship, or dashing themselves, with dreadful Impetuosity, upon the Shore: Or-הבלים fweeping inundations; which bear down all before them, and drown the neighbouring Country .- Befides, in these Instances of Horror, we never find the Word-nnw-He shall drink; which conveys a pleasing Idea (unless when it relates to a Cup, filled with bitter, intoxicating, or impoisoned Liquors; a Case quite different from that under Consideration) but either-nya-which imports Terror and Astonishment. elfe-you and war-which fignify to rush upon; to overwhelm; and even to bury under the Wayes,

Upon the Whole: May not the Passage more properly allude to the Influences of the Holy Ghost? Which were communicated, in unmeasurable Abundance, over all the Surface of the Earth: So shall thy Seed be, O thou everlasting Father! By the Preaching of thy Word, shall such an innumerable Race of regenerate Children be born unto Thee; and prove an Ornament and a Bleffing to all Ages. Millions, Millions of willing Converts, from every Nation under Heaven, thall croud into thy Family, and replenish thy Church. Till they become like the Stars of the Sky, or the Sands of the Sea for Multitude; or even as numberless as these fine Spangles, which now cover the Face of Nature.-Behold then, ye obstinately Wicked, though you "are " not gathered, yet will the Saviour be glorious." His Defign shall not miscarry, nor his Labour prove abortive; though you render it of none Effect, with regard to vourselves. Think not, that IMMANUEL will want Believers, or Heaven Inhabitants, because You continue incorrigible. No; the Lamb that was flain, will "fee " of the Travail of his Soul, and be fatisfied;" in a rable Degrees, to our great High-Priest; and were, in fact, the Cause of his furmounting all Difficulties .- These are frequently represented by Waters; " Whoso believeth on Me, out of his Belly shall flow Ri-"vers of living Waters." The Enjoyment of them is described by drinking; "He that drinketh of the Water that I shall give him, shall " never thirst."-Then, the Sense may run in this well-connected and perspicuous Manner. Is it asked, How shall the Redeemer be able to execute the various and important Offices, foretold in the preceding Parts of the Pfalm? The Prophet replies He shall drink of the Brook in the Way. He shall not be left barely to his human Nature, which must unavoidably fink under the tremendous Work of recovering a loft World. But, thro' the whole Courfe of his incarnate State, thro' the whole Administration of his Mediatorial Kingdom, shall be supported with omnipotent Succours. He shall drink at the Brook of Almighty Power, and travel on in the Greatness of an uncreated Strength .-Therefore shall be lift up his Head. By this Means, shall he be equal to the prodigious Taik, and superior to all Opposition. By this Means. shall he be thoroughly successful, in whatever he undertakes; and greatly triumphant, over all his Enemies.

never-failing Series of faithful People below, and an immense Choir of glorified Saints above. Who shall form his Retinue, and surround his Throne, in shining and triumphant Armies, such as no Man can number.

Here, I was reminded of the various Expedients which Providence, unfearchably wife, uses, to fructify both the material and intellectual World.—Sometimes, you shall have impetuous and heavy Showers, bursting from the angry Clouds. They lash the Plains, and make the Rivers foam. A Storm brings them, and a Deluge follows them.—At other times, these gentle Dews are formed, in the serene Evening Air. They steal down by slow Degrees, and with insensible Stillness. So subtle, that they deceive the nicest Eye: so silent, that they escape the most delicate Ear: and, when fallen, so very light, that they neither bruise the tenderest, nor oppress the weakest Flower.—Very different Operations! Yet each concurs in the same beneficial End, and both impart Fertility to the Lap of Nature.

So, some Persons have I known, reclaimed from the unfruitful Works of Darkness, by violent and severe Means. The Almighty addressed their stubborn Hearts, as he addressed the Israelites at Sinai, with Lightning in his Eyes, and Thunder in his Voice. The Conscience, smit with a Sense of Guilt, and apprehensive of eternal Vengeance, trembled through all her Powers; just as that strong Mountain tottered to its Centre. Pangs of Remorse, and Agonies of Fear, preceded their new Birth. They were reduced to the last Extremities, almost overwhelmed with Despair, before they found Rest in Jesus Christ.—Others have been recovered from a vain Conversation, by Methods more mild and attractive. The Father of Spirits applied himself to their teachable Minds, in " a still and small Voice." His Grace came down, as the Rain into a Fleece of Wool; or as these softening Drops, which now water the Earth. The Kingdom of God took place in their Souls, without Noise or Obfervation. They passed from Death unto Life, from a carnal to a regenerate State, by almost imperceptible Advances. The Transition resembled the Growth of Corn: was very visible, when effected; though scarce fenfible, while accomplishing.—O Thou Author and Finisher of our Faith, recal us from our Wanderings, and re-unite us to Thyself! Whether thou alarm us with thy Terrors, or allure us with thy Smiles: whether thou drive us with the Scourge of Conviction, or draw us with the Cords of Love: let us, in anywife, return to Thee. For Thou art our supreme Good; Thou art our only Happiness.

Before I proceed farther, let me ascend the Terrace, and take one Survey of the neighbouring Country.—What a Prospect rushes upon my Sight? How vast; how various; how "full and plenteous with all Manner" of Store!" Nature's whole Wealth!—What a rich and inexhaustible Magazine is here: furnishing Subsistence for every Creature! Methinks, I read, in these spacious Volumes, a most lively Comment, upon that noble Celebration of the Divine Beneficence; He openeth bis Hand, and filleth all Things living with Plenteousness.

These are thy glorious Works, Parent of Good,
Almighty! Thine this universal Frame,
Thus wond'rous fair! Thyself how wond'rous then!
Milt.

THE Fields are covered deep, and stand thick, with Corn. They expand the milky Grain to the Sun; while the Gales, now inclining, now raising each flexile Stem, open open all their Ranks to the Agency of his Beams. Which will foon impart a firm Confiftence to the Grain, and a gloffy golden Hue to the Ear. That they may be qualified, to fill the Barns of the Husbandman with Plenty, and his Heart with Gladness.

YONDER lies the Meadows, finoothed into a perfect Level: decorated with an Embroidery of the gayest Flowers; and loaded with * fpontaneous Crops of Her-Which, converted into Hay, will prove a most commodious Provision for the Barrenness of Winter; will fupply with Fodder our ferviceable Animals, when all the Verdure of the Plain is killed by Frost, or buried in Snows.—A winding Stream, glides along the flowery Margin; and receives the Image of the bending Skies, and waters the Roots of many a branching Willow. 'Tis flocked, no doubt, with Variety of Fish; which afford a folitary Diversion to the Angler, and nourish for his Table a delicious Treat. Nor is it the only Merit of this liquid Element, to maintain the finny Nations; it also carries Cleanliness, and dispenses Fruitfulnefs, where-ever it rolls the crystal Current.

THE Pastures, with their verdant Mounds, chequer the Prospect; and prepare a standing Repast for our Cattle. There, "our Oxen are made strong to labour; "and our Sheep bring forth Thousands and ten Thou- fands." There, the Horse acquires Vigour, for the Dispatch of our Business; and Speed, to expedite our Journeys. From thence, the Kine bring home their Udders, distended with one of the richest, and healthiest Liquors, in the World.

On feveral Spots, a Grove of Trees, like some grand Colonnade, erects its tow'ring Head. Every one projects a friendly Shade, for the Beafts; and creates a hofpitable Lodging, for the Birds. Every one stands ready, to furnish Timber for a Palace; Masts for a Navy; or, with a more condescending Courtesy, Fuel for our Hearths.—One of them feems skirted with a wild uncultivated Heath; which, like well-disposed Shades in Painting, throws an additional Luftre on the more ornamented Parts of the Landscape. Nor is its Usefulness, like that of a Foil, relative only, but real. There, feveral valuable Creatures are produced, and accommodated; without any Expence, or Care of ours. There likewife, fpring Abundance of those Herbs, which affwage the Smart of our Wounds, and allay the fiery Tumults of the Fever. Which impart Floridity to our circulating Fluids; add a more vigorous Tone to our active Solids; and, thereby, repair the Decays of our enfeebled Conftitutions.

* — Injuffa virefcunt
Gramina — VIRG.

NEARER the Houses, We perceive an ample Spread of Branches; not so stately as the Oaks, but more amiable for their annual Services. A little while ago, I beheld them; and all was one beauteous, boundlefs Wafte of Bloffoms. The Eye marvelled, at the lovely Sight; and the Heart rejoiced, in the Prospect of autumnal Plenty. But now, the blooming Maid is refigned, for the useful Matron. The Flower is fallen, and the Fruit fwells out on every Twig.—Breathe foft, ye Winds! O, spare the tender Fruitage, ye surly Blasts! Let the Peartree fuckle her juicy Progeny; till they drop into our Hands, and diffolve in our Mouths. Let the Plum hang unmolested upon her Boughs; till she fatten her delicious Flesh, and cloud her polished Skin with Blue. And as for the Apples, that staple Commodity of our Orchards, let no injurious Shocks precipitate them immaturely to the Ground; till revolving Suns, have tinged them with a ruddy Complexion, and concocted them into an exquifite Flavour. Then, what copious Hoards, of what burnished Rinds, and what delightful Relishes, will replenish the Store-room! Some, to present us with an early Entertainment, and refresh our Palates amidst the fultry Heats. Some, to borrow Ripeness from the falling Snows, and carry Autumn into the Depths of Winter. Some, to adorn the Salver, make a Part of the Dessert, and give an agreeable * Close to our Feasts. Others, to fill our Vats with a foaming Flood; which, mellowed by Age, may sparkle in the Glass, with a Liveliness and Delicacy, little inserior to the Blood of the Grape.

I OBSERVE feveral small Inclosures, which seem to be apprehensive of some hostile Visit from the North; and, therefore, are defended, on that Quarter, by a thick Wood, or a lofty Wall. At the same time, they cultivate an uninterrupted Correspondence with the South; and throw open their whole Dimensions, to its friendly Warmth. One, in particular, lies within the Reach of a diffinguishing View; and proves to be a Kitchen-Garden. It looks, methinks, like a plain and frugal Republic: Whatever may refemble the Pomp of Courts, or the Enfigns of Royalty, is banished from this humble Community. None of the Productions of the Olitory affect Finery; but all are habited with the very Perfection of Decency. Here, those celebrated Qualities are eminently united, the utmost Simplicity with the exactest Neatness †. — A skilful Hand has parcelled out the whole Ground, into narrow Beds, and intervening Alleys. The same discreet Management has assigned to each

* — Ab Ovo

Usque ad Mala — Hor.

† Simplex Munditiis. Hor.

ve.dant

verdant Family, a peculiar and diffinct Abode. So that there is no Confusion, amidst the greatest Multiplicity; because every Individual knows its proper Home, and all the Tribes are ranged with perfect Regularity.—If it be pleasing to behold their orderly Situation, and their modest Beauties; how much more delightful, to consider the Advantages, they yield! What a Fund of choice Accommodations is Here! What a Source of wholefome Dainties! And all, for the Enjoyment of Man. Why does the Parsley, with her frizzled Locks, shag the Border; or why the Celery, with her whitening Arms, perforate the Mould; but to render his Soops favoury? The Asparagus shoots its tapering Stems, to offer him the First-fruits of the Season; and the Artichoke spreads its turgid Top, to give him a Treat of vegetable Marrow. The Tendrils of the * Cucumber creep into the Sun: and, though basking in its hottest Rays, they secrete for their Master, and barrel up for his Use, the most cooling Juices of the Soil. The Beans stand firm, like Files of embattled Troops; the Peas rest upon their Props, like fo many Companies of Invalids; while both replenish their Pods with the Farness of the Earth, on purpose to pour it on their Owner's Table.-Not one Species, among all this Variety of Herbs, is a Cumberer of the Ground. Not a fingle Plant, but is good for Food, or some way salutary. With so beneficent

* Virgil, with great Concileness, and equal Propriety, describes the Cucumber—

—Tortasque per herbam Cresceret in Ventrem Cucumis.—

Georg. IV.

MILTON has (if We admit Dr. Bentley's Alteration, which is, I think, in this Place, unquestionably just) almost translated the Lesin Poet.

— Forth crept
The fwelling Gourd—

Par. Log, B. VII. 1. 320.

an Oeconomy, are the feveral Periods of their Ministration settled; that no Portion of the Year is left destitute of nourishing Esculents. What is still more obliging, every Portion of the Year affords such Esculents, as are best suited to the Temperature of the Air, and the State of our Bodies.—Why then should the Possessor of so valuable a Spot, envy the Condition of Kings*? Since He may daily walk amidst Rows of peaceable and obsequious, though mute Subjects. Every One of which tenders him some agreeable Present, and pays him a willing Tribute. Such as is most happily adapted, both to supply his Wants, and to regale his Taste: to surnish Him, at once, with Plenty and with Pleasure.

AT a Distance, one descries the mighty Hills. They heave their huge Ridges among the Clouds; and look like the Barriers of Kingdoms, or the Boundaries of Nature. Bare and desormed as their Surface may appear, their Bowels are fraught with inward Treasures! Treasures, lodged fast in the Quarries, or sunk deep in the Mines. From thence, Industry may draw her Implements, to plow the Soil; to reap the Grain; and procure every necessary Convenience. From thence, Art may setch her Materials, to rear the Dome; to swell the Organ; and form the noblest Ornaments of politer Life.

On another Side, the great Deep terminates the View. There go the Ships; There is that Leviathan: And there, in that World of Waters, an inconceivable Number of Animals have their Habitation.—This is the capacious

VIRG. Georg. IV.

^{*} Hic rarum tamen in Dumis Olus, albaque circum Lilia, Verbenasque premens, vescumque Papawer, Regum æquabat Opes Animis: seraque revertens Noste domum, Dapibus Mensas onerabat inemptis.

Cistern of the Universe; which admits, as into a Receptacle; and distributes, as from a Reservoir; whatever waters the whole Globe. There's not a Fountain, that gushes in the unfrequented Desart; or a Rivulet, that slows in the remotest Continent; nor a Cloud, that swims in the highest Regions of the Firmament; but is fed by this all-replenishing Source.—The Ocean is the grand Vehicle of Trade, and the Uniter of distant Nations. To us it is peculiarly kind, not only as it wasts into our Ports, the Harvest of every Climate; and renders our Island the Centre of Traffic; but also as it secures us from foreign Invasions, by a fort of impregnable Entrenchment *.

METHINGS, the View of this profuse Munificence infipires a fecret Delight, and kindles a disinterested Goodwill.—While the "little Hills clap their Hands," and the luxuriant "Valleys laugh and sing;" who can forbear catching the general Joy? Who is not touched, with lively Sensations of Pleasure?—While the everlasting Father, is scattering Blessings through his whole Family, and crowning the Year with his Goodness; who does not feel his Breast overslowing, with a diffusive Benevolence?—My Heart, I must confess, beats high with Satisfaction; and breathes out congratulatory Wishes, upon all the Tenants of these rural Abodes: "Peace be "within your Walls, as well as Plenteousness around your Dwellings." Live, ye highly favoured; live sensible of your Benefits, and thankful to your Benefactor. Look round upon these prodigiously large Incomes of the fruitful Soil, and call them (for you have free Leave) all your own.—Only let me remind you of one very important Truth. Let me suggest, and may you never forget; That you are obliged to Christ Jesus, for every one of these Accommodations, which spring from the teeming Earth, and the smiling Skies.

* Whose Rampart was the Sea. Nahum iii. 8.

I hope, this little Excursion into the Country, will not be looked upon as a Departure from my Subject. Because, a rural View, though no essential Part of a Garden, is yet a desirable Appendage, and necessary to complete its Beauty.—As Usefulness is the most valuable Property, which can attend any Production; this is the Circumstance, chiefly touched upon in the Survey of the Landscape. Though every Piece of this extensive and diversified Scene, is cast in the most elegant Mould; yet nothing is calculated merely for Shew and Parade. You see nothing formed in the Taste of the oftentations Obelist, or insignificant Pomp of the Pyramid. No such idle Expences were admitted into that consummate Plan, which regulated the Structure of the Universe. All the Decorations of Nature are no less advantageous, than ornamental; such as speak the MAKER infinitely beneficent, as well as incomparably magnificent.

1. Christ * made them, when they were not.—He fetched them up from utter Darkness; and gave them both their Being and their Beauty. He created the Materials, of which they are composed; and moulded them into this endless Multiplicity, of amiable Forms, and useful Substances. He arrayed the Heavens, with a Vesture

* When I afcribe the Work of Creation to the Son, I would by no Means be supposed, to withhold the same Honour, from the Eternal Father, and Ever-blessed Spirit. The Acts of those inconceivably glorious Persons are, like their Essence, undivided and one. But I choose to state the Point in this Manner, because this is the manifest Doctrine of the New Testament; is the express Belief of our Church; and a most noble Peculiarity of the Gospel Revelation.—I choose it also, because I would take every Opportunity of inculcating, and celebrating, the Divinity of the Redeemer. A Truth, which imparts an unutterable Dignity, to Christianity: A Truth, which lays an immoveable Foundation, for all the comfortable Hopes of a Christian: A Truth, which will render the Mystery of our Redemption, the Wonder and Delight of Eternity: And with this Truth, every one will observe, my Assertion is inseparably connected.

If any One questions, whether this be the Doltrine of our Church; let the Creed, which we repeat in our most folemn Devotions, determine Vesture of the mildest Blue; and clothed the Earth, in a Livery of the gayest Green. His Pencil streaked, and his Breath perfumed, whatever is beautiful or fragrant in the Universe. His Strength set fast the Mountains; His Goodness garnished the Vales; and the same Touch which healed the Leper, wrought the whole visible System into this complete Persection.

2. Christ recovered them, when they were forfeited.

—By Adam's Sin, we lost our Right to the Comforts of Life, and Fruits of the Ground. His Disobedience was the most impious and horrid Treason, against the King of Kings. Consequently, his whole Patrimony became confiscated: as well the Portion of temporal good Things, settled upon the human Race during their Minority; as that everlasting Heritage reserved for their Enjoyment, when they should come to full Age. But the "Seed of the Woman," instantly interposing, took off the Attainder, and redeemed the alienated Inheritance. The first Adam being disinherited, the second Adam * was appointed Heir of all Things, visible as well as invisible.

mine his Doubt: "I believe," fays that Form of found Words, "in "one LORD JESUS CHRIST, very God of very God, by whom all "Things were made."—If it be farther inquired, From whence the Nicene Fathers derived this Article of their Faith? I answer, From the Writings of the beloved Disciple, who lay on the Saviour's Bosom; and of that great Apostle, who had been caught up into the Third Heaven. John i. 3. Coloss. i. 16.

* Heb. i. 2.—In this Sense at least, Christ is the Saviour of all Men. The former and latter Rain; the precious Fruits of the Earth; Food to eat, and Raiment to put on;—all these he purchased, even for his irreclaimable Enemies. They eat of his Bread, who lift up their Heel against Him.

We learn from hence, in what a peculiar and endearing Light, the Christian is to contemplate the Things that are seen. Heathens might discover an eternal Power, and infinite Wisdom, in the Structure of the Universe; Heathens might acknowledge a most stupendous Liberality, invisible. And we hold our Possession of the former; we expect an Instatement in the latter; purely by virtue of our Alliance to Him, and our Union with Him.

3. Christ upholds them, which would otherwise tumble into Ruin.—By Him, fays the Oracle of Inspiration, all Things confift *. His Finger rolls the Seasons round, and prefides over all the celeftial Revolutions. Finger winds up the Wheels, and impels every Spring, of vegetative Nature. In a Word, the whole Weight of the Creation, rests upon his mighty Arm; and receives the whole Harmony of its Motion, from his unerring Eye.—This habitable Globe, with all its rich Appendages, and fine Machinery, could no more continue, than they could create themselves. Start they would into instant Confusion; or drop into their primitive Nothing; did not his Power support, and his Wisdom regulate them, every Moment. In Conformity to his Will, they fubfift ftedfast and invariable in their Orders; and wait only for his fovereign Nod, to "fall away like "Water, that runneth apace."

in the unreferved Grant of the whole Fabric, with all its Furniture, to the Service of Man. But the Christian should ever keep in Mind his Forseiture of them, and the Price paid to redeem them. He should receive the Gifts of indulgent Providence, as the Israelites received their Law, from the Hand of a Mediator. Or rather, To him they should come, not only issuing from the Stores of an unbounded Bounty, but swimming (as it were) in that Crimson Tide, which streamed from Immanuel's Veins.

* Col. i. 17. I beg leave to subjoin St. Chrysostom's pertinent and beautiful Note, upon the Passage; by which it will appear, that the Sentiment of these Sections, is not merely a private Opinion, but the avowed Belief of the primitive Church. These, how the cloquent Father, sis also repulate n washen, unorable n point also also set to eval waspassage, and a so also such a set up and other to eval waspassage, and and a description.

4. Christ * actuates them, which would otherwise be lifeless and infignificant.—Pensioners they are, conftant Penfioners on his Bounty; and borrow their All from his Fulness. He only has Life; and whatever operates, operates by an Emanation from his All-sufficiency. Does the Grape refresh you, with its enlivening Juices? It is by a Warrant received, and Virtue derived, from the Redeemer. Does Bread strengthen your Heart, and prove the Staff of your Life? Remember, that it is by the Saviour's Appointment, and through the Efficacy of his Operation. You are charmed with his Melody, when the "Time of the Singing of Birds is come, " and the Voice of the Nightingale is heard in your " Land." You taste bis Goodness in the luscious Fig, the melting Peach, and the musky Flavour of the Apricot. You finell bis Sweetness in the opening Honeysuckle, and every odoriferous Shrub.

Could these Creatures speak for themselves, they would, doubtless, disclaim all Sufficiency of their own, and ascribe the whole Honour to their Maker.—"We are Servants," would they say, "of Him, who died for you. Cisterns only, dry Cisterns in ourselves, we transmit to Mortals no more, than the uncreated Fountain transsuses into us. Think not, that, from any Ability of our own, we furnish you with Assistance, or administer to your Comfort. 'Tis the Divine Energy, the Divine Energy alone, that works in us, and does you Good.—We serve you, O ye Sons of ^{*} John v. 17. My Father worketh hitherto, and I work; or, I exert that unremitting and unwearied Energy, which is the Life of the Creation.—Thus the Words are paraphrased by a masterly Expositor, who has illustrated the Life of our blessed Lord, in the most elegant Taste of Criticism; with the most amiable Spirit of Devotion; and without any Mixture of the malignant Leaven, or low Singularities, of a Party. See the Family Expositor, Vol. I. Sect. 47.

"Men, that you may love Him, who placed us in these "Stations. O! love the Lord, therefore, all ye who are supported by our Ministry; or else we shall * groan, "with Indignation and Regret, at your Abuse of our "Services.—Use us, and welcome; for we are yours, if ye are Christ's. Crop our choicest Beauties; risle all our Treasures; accommodate yourselves with our most valuable Qualities; only let us be Incentives to your Gratitude, and Motives to your Obedience."

HAVING furveyed the spacious Sky; and fent a Glance round the inferior Creation; 'tis Time to descend from this Eminence, and confine my Attention to the beautiful Spot below—Here Nature, always pleafing, everywhere lovely, appears with peculiar Attractions. Yonder, shë seems dressed in her Deshabille; grand, but irregular. Here, she calls in her Hand-maid Art; and shines in all the delicate Ornaments, which the nicest Cultivation is able to convey. Those, are her common Apartments, where she lodges her ordinary Guests; This, is her Cabinet of Curiofities, where she entertains her intimate Acquaintance.—My Eye shall often expatiate, over those Scenes of universal Fertility: My Feet shall sometimes brush through the Thicket, or traverse the Lawn, or firoll along the Forest Glade: But to this delightful Retreat, shall be my chief Resort. Thither; will I make Excursions; but Here, will I dwell.

Ir, from my low Procedure, I may form an Allusion to the most exalted Practices; I would observe, upon this Occasion; That the celebrated Erasmus, and our judicious Locke, having trod the Circle of the Sciences, and ranged through the whole Extent of buman Literature, at length betook themselves solely to the Bible. Leaving the Sages of Antiquity, they sat incessantly at the Feet of Jesus. Wifely they withdrew, from that immense Multiplicity of Learning; from those endless Tracts of amusing Erudition; where, noxious Weeds are mixed with wholesome Herbs; where, is generally a much larger Growth of prickly Shrubs, than of fruitful Boughs. They spent their most mature Hours, in those hallowed Gardens, which God's own Wisdom planted; which God's own Spirit watereth; and in which God's own Som is continually walking. Where, He meeteth those that seek Him; and revealeth to them the Glories of his Person, and the Riches of his Goodness.

Thus would I finial the Remainder of my Days! Having inft tafted (what they call) the politer Studies; were now devote my whole Application to the lively Oracles. From other Pursuits, I might glean, perhaps, a few scattered Fragments of low, of lean, of unsatisactory Instruction. From this, I trust to reap a Harvest of the sublimest Truths; the noblest Improvements; and the pureft Joys *.—Waft me then, O! waft my Mind to Sien's confectated Bowers. Let my Thoughts perpetually rove, through the awfully pleasing Walks of inspiration. Here, grow these Heaven-born Plants, the Trees of Life and Knowledge; whose ambrosial Fruits we now may "take, and eat, and live for ever." Here, flow those precious Streams of Grace and Righteousness; whose living Waters " whosoever drinks, shall thirst no ' more." And, what can the Fables of Grecian Song, or the finest Pages of Roman Eloquence—what can they exhibit, in any Degree comparable to thefe natchless Prerogatives of Revelation? - Therefore, though I should not dislike to pay a Visit now-and-then to my Heathen Masters, I would live with the Prophets and Apostles. With those, I would carry on some occasional Correspondence: but these should be my Bosom-Friends; my inseparable Companions; "my Desight, and my Counsellors."

^{*} Quicquid docetur, Veritas; quicquid præcipitur, Bonitas; quicquid remittitur, Felicitas.

WHAT Sweets are these, which so agreeably salute my Noftrils? They are the Breath of the Flowers; the Incense of the Garden.-How liberally does the Jessamine difpense her odoriferous Riches? How deliciously has the Woodbine embalmed this Morning Walk? The Air is all Perfume.—And is not this, another most engaging Argument, to forfake the Bed of Sloth? Who would lie diffolved in fenfeless Slumbers; while so many breathing Sweets, invite him to a Feast of Fragrancy? Especially considering, That the advancing Day will exhale the volatile Dainties. A fugitive Treat they are, prepared only for the Wakeful and Industrious. Whereas, when the Sluggard lifts his heavy Eyes, the Flowers will droop; their fine Scents be diffipated; and, inflead of this refreshing Humidity, the Air will become a Kind of liquid Fire.

WITH this very Motive, heightened by a Representation of the most charming Pieces of Morning Scenery, the Parent of Mankind awakes his lovely Consort. There is such a Delicacy in the Choice, and so much Life in the Description, of these rural Images; that I cannot excuse myself, without repeating the whole Passage.—Whisper it, some friendly Genius, in the Ear of every One, who is now sunk in Sleep, and lost to all these refined Gratifications!

Awake: the Morning shines, and the fresh Field Calls you: Ye lose the Prime, to mark how spring The tended Plants, how blows the Citron Grove; What drops the Myrrh, and what the balmy Reed; How Nature paints her Colours; how the Bee Sits on the Bloom, extracting liquid Sweets *.

How delightful is this Fragrance! It is distributed in the nicest Proportion; neither so strong, as to oppress the Organs; nor fo faint, as to elude them. We are foon cloved at a fumptuous Banquet; but this Pleafure never loses its Poignancy, never palls the Appetite.—Here, Luxury itself is innocent; or rather, in this Case, Indulgence is incapable of Excess.-This balmy Entertainment, not only regales the Sense, but + chears the very Soul; and, instead of clogging, elates its Powers. -It puts me in Mind of that ever memorable Sacrifice, which was once made in Behalf of offending Mortals. I mean the Sacrifice of the bleffed Jesus; when He offered up Himfelf to GoD; " for a fweet-fmelling "Savour." Such the Holy Spirit stiles that wonderful Oblation: as if no Image, in the whole fenfible Creation, was so proper to give us an Idea of the ineffable Satisfaction; which the Father of Mercies conceived. from that unparalleled Atonement; as the pleasing Senfations, which fuch rich Perfumes are capable of raising. "Thousands of Rams, and Ten Thousands of Rivers " of Oil," from an apoftate World; the most submisfive Acknowledgments, added to the most costly Offerings, from Men of defiled Hands, and unclean Lips; what could they have effected? A Prophet reprefents the "High and Lofty One, that inhabiteth Eternity," turning Himfelf away from fuch filthy Rags; turning Himself away, with a disdainful Abhorrence 1, as from the noisome Steams of a Dunghill.—But in Christ's ^{*} MILT. Par. Loft. B. V. 1. 20.

[†] Ointment and Perfume rejoice the Heart. Prov. xxvii. 9. ‡ Amos v. 21, 22.

imma-

immaculate Holiness; in Christ's consummate Obedience; in Christ's most precious Blood-shedding; with what unimaginable Complacency, does Justice rest satisfied, and Vengeance acquiesce!—All thy Works, O Thou Surety for ruined Sinners! all thy Sufferings, O Thou slaughtered Lamb of God! as well as all thy Garments, O Thou Bridegroom of thy Church! smell of Myrrb, Alees, and Cassa *! They are infinitely more grateful to the eternal Godhead, than the choicest Exhalations of the Garden, than all the Odours of the spicy East, can be to the human Nostrils.

As the Altar of old fanctified the Gift; so this is the great Propitiation, which recommends the obnoxious Persons, and unprofitable Services of the believing World. In this, may my Soul be interested! by this, may it be reconciled to the Father!—There is such a seprous Depravity cleaving to my Nature, as pollutes whatever I personm. My most prosound Adorations, and sincerest Acts of Religion, must not presume to challenge a Reward, but humbly implore Forgiveness. Renouncing, therefore, myself in every Instance of Duty; disclaiming all Shadow of Considence ‡ in any Deeds of my own;

* Pfalm xlv. 8.

† A Writer of distinguished Superiority, thus addresses the great Observer of Actions, and Searcher of Hearts; and vindicates my Sentiments, while he so justly and beautifully utters his own;

Look down, great God, with Pity's foftest Eye,
On a poor breathing Particle in Dust.
His Crimes forgive; forgive his Virtues too,
Those finaller Faults, half Converts to the Right.
Night-Thoughts, N° IX.

† See Page 44 and 45, in the fecond Edition of a most candid and everyge ical little Treatife, called CHRISTIANITY the Great  RNAMENT of Human Life.—" If Christians happily avoid "the own: may I now, and evermore, be accepted through the Beloved!

WHAT Colours, what charming Colours, are here! These, so nobly bold; and Those, so delicately languid. What a Glow is enkindled in some! what a Gloss shines upon others! In one, methinks, I fee the Ruby with her bleeding Radiance; in another, the Sapphire with her Sky-tinctured Blue; in all, fuch an exquisite Richness of Dyes; as no other Set of Paintings in the Universe can boast *.—With what a masterly Skill, is every one of the varying Tints disposed! Here, they seem to be thrown on with an easy Dash, of Security and Freedom: there, they are adjusted by the nicest Touches, of Art and Accuracy. Those which form the Ground, are always fo judiciously chosen, as to heighten the Lustre of the superadded Figures; while the Verdure of the Impalement, or the Shadings of the Foliage, impart new Liveliness to the Whole. Indeed; whether they are blended, or arranged; foftened, or contrasted; they are manifestly under the Conduct of a Taste, that never [&]quot;the dangerous Extreme, and too often fatal Rock, of a dead fruitless" Faith on the one hand. He [i.e. Satan] will endeavour, by all kind of plausible Infinuations, to split them on the opposite, viz. Spiritual Pride, Ostentation, and Dependence on their Works, as if "THESE were the meritorious, or procuring Cause of all true Peace, Hope, Consolation, and Divine Acceptance.—Now this Self Dependence may be ranked among the most dangerous of the infernal Politics, because the satal Posson lies deep, and too often undifferented."

^{* — — —} Who can paint
Like Nature? Can Imagination boast, Amid his gay Creation, Hues like these?
And can he mix them with that matchless Skill,
And lay them on so delicately fine,
And lose them in each other, as appears
In ev'ry Bud that blows!

Thoms. Spring.

mistakes; a Felicity, that never falls short of; the very Persection of Elegance.—Fine, inimitably fine, is the Texture of the Web; on which these shining Treasures are displayed. What are the Labours of the Persian Looms, or the boasted Commodities of Brussels, compared with these curious Manusactures of Nature? Compared with these, the most admired Chintses lose their Reputation; even superfine Cambrics, appear coarse as Canvass in their Presence.

What a cheering Argument does our Saviour derive from hence, to strengthen our Affiance in God! He directs us to learn a Lesson of Heaven-depending Faith, from every Bird, that wings the Air; and from every Flower, that bloffoms in the Field. If Providence, with unremitted Care, supports those inferior Creatures; and arrays these insensible Beings, with so much Splendor; furely, He will in no-wife with-hold, from his elect Children, "Bread to eat, and Raiment to put on."-Ye faithful Followers of the Lamb, difmiss every low Anxiety, relating to the needful Suftenance of Life. He that feeds the Ravens, from an inexhaustible Magazine; He that paints the Plants, with fuch furpassing Elegance; in short, He that provides so liberally, both for the animal and vegetable Parts of His Creation; will not, cannot, neglect His own People.—Fear not, little Flock, ye peculiar Objects of Almighty Love! it is your Father's good Pleasure, to give you a Kingdom*. And If He freely gives you, an everlasting Kingdom hereafter; is it posfible to suppose, that he will deny you any necessary Conveniencies here?

ONE cannot forbear reflecting, in this Place, on the too prevailing Humour, of being fond and oftentatious of *Dress. What an abject and mistaken Ambition is this! How unworthy the Dignity of immortal, and the Wisdom of rational Beings! Especially, since these little Productions of the Earth, have indisputably the Preeminence, in such outward Embellishments.—Go: clothe

^{*} Luke xii. 32.

* Mr. Addison has a fine Remark on a semale Warrior, celebrated by Virgil. He observes, that with all her other great Qualities, this little Foible mingled itself. Because, as the Poet relates, an intemperate Fondness for a rich and splendid Suit of Armour, betrayed her into Ruin. In this Circumstance, our Critic discovers a Moral concealed; this He admires, as a neat, though oblique Satire, on that triffing Passion. Spect. Vol. I. Nº 15.

I would refer it to the judicious Reader, whether there is not a Beauty of the same Kind, but touched with a more masterly Hand, in the Song of Deborah-Speaking of Sifera's Mother, the facred eucharistic Ode represents Her, as anticipating, in her fond Fancy, the Victory of her Son; and indulging the following Soliloquy—Have they not sped? Have they not divided the Prey? To Sistera a Prey of divers Colours; a Prey of divers Colours of Needle-work; of divers Colours of Needle-work on both Sides; meet for the Necks of them that take the Spoil? -She takes no Notice of the Signal Service, which her Hero would do to his Country, by quelling to dangerous an Infurrection. She never reflects on the present Acclamations, the future Advancement, and the eternal Renown, which are the Tribute usually paid to a Conqueror's Merit. She can conceive, it feems, nothing greater, than to be clad in an embroidered Vesture; and to trail along the Ground, a Robe of the richest Dyes. This is, in her Imagination, the most lordly Spoil, He can win; the most stately Trophy, He can erect .- It is also obfervable, how She dwells upon the trivial Circumstance; reiterating it again and again. It has so charmed her ignoble Heart; so intirely engrossed her little Views; that She can think of nothing else; freak of nothing else; and can hardly ever defet from the darling Topic.—Is not this a keen, tho' delicately couched Cenfure, on that poor, contemptible, groveling Tafte; which is enamoured with filken Finery, and makes the Attributes of a Butterfly, the Idol of its Affections?

How conspicuous, is the elevated and magnificent Spirit of that venerable Mother in Ifrael; when viewed in comparison with the low, the despicable Turn of this Canaanitifu Lady!—Such strong and beautiful Contrasts are, I think, some of the most striking Excellencies of poetic Painting: and in no Book are they more frequently used, or expressed with greater Life, than in the sace of Volumes of Inspiration.

thyself with Purple, and fine Linen; trick thyself up in all the gay Attire, which the Shuttle or the Needle can furnish. Yet know, to the Mortification of thy Vanity, that the native Elegance of a common Daify *, eclipses all this elaborate Finery.—Nay, wert thou decked like fome illustrious Princess, on her Coronation-day, in all the Splendor of royal Apparel; couldit thou equal even Solomon, in the Height of his Magnificence and Glory; vet, would the meanest among the flowery Populace outfhine thee. Every difcerning Eye, would give the Preference, to these Beauties of the † Ground.—Scorn then to borrow thy Recommendations, from a neat Disposition of Threads, and a curious Arrangement of Colours. Assume a becoming Greatness of Temper. Let thy Endowments be of the immortal Kind. Study to be all-glorious within. Be clothed with Humility. Wear the Ornament of a meek and quiet Spirit 1. To fay all in a Word; Put on the LORD JESUS CHRIST &: Let His Blood be sprinkled upon thy Conscience, and it shall be whiter than the Virgin Snows. Let His Righteoufwels, like a spotless Robe, adorn thy inner Man; and

Peaceful and lowly in their native Soil,
 They neither know to fpin, nor care to toil;
 Yet with confefs'd Magnificence deride
 Our mean Attire, and Impotence of Pride.

† Mr. Cowley, with his usual Brilliancy of Imagination, stiles them Stars of Earth.

‡ How beautifully does the Prophet describe the Furniture of a renewed and heavenly Mind; under the Similitude of a rich and complete Suit of Apparel! I will greatly rejoice in the LORD; my Soul shall be joyful in my God; for he hath cloathed me with the Garments of Salvation; He hath covered me with a Robe of Righteousness, as a Bridegroom decketh himself with Ornaments, and as a Bride adorneth herself with her Jewels. Isa. 1xi. 10.

§ Rom. xiii. 14.

thou shalt be amiable, even in the most distinguishing Eye of God. Let His blessed Spirit dwell in thy Heart; and, under His sanctifying Operations, thou shalt be made Partaker of a Divine Nature.

These are real Excellencies; truly noble Accomplishments these. In this Manner be arrayed, be beautified; and thou wilt not find a Rival, in the Feathers of a Peacock, or the Foliation of a Tulip. These will exalt thee, far above the low Pretensions of Lace and Embroidery. These will prepare thee to stand in the beatistic Presence, and to take thy Seat among the Angels of Light.

What an inchanting Situation is this! One can scarce be melancholy within the Atmosphere of Flowers. Such lively Hues, and delicious Odours, not only address themselves agreeably to the Senses; but touch, with a surprising Delicacy, the sweetest Movements of the Mind.

——To the Heart inspiring Vernal * Delight and Foy.

MILT. B. IV.

How often have I felt them diffipate the Glocm of Thought, and transfuse a sudden Gaicty thro' the de-

" "I would have my Reader endeavour to MORALIZE this natural Pleasure of the Soul, and to improve this vernal Delight as Million "calls it, into a Christian Virtue. When we find ourselves inspired "with this pleasing Instinct, this secret Satisfaction and Complacency, arising from the Beauties of the Creation, let us confider, to Whom "we stand indebted for all these Entertainments of Sense; and Who "it is, that thus opens his Hand, and fills the World with Good.—"Such an habitual Disposition of Mind confectates every Field and "Wood; turns an ordinary Walk into a Morning or Evening Sacrisice; and will improve those transfert Gleams, which naturally brighten up and refresh the Soul on such Occasions, into an inviolable and "perpetual State of Bliss and Happiness."

Spect. Vol. V. Nº 394.

jected Spirit! I cannot wonder, that Kings defcend from their Thrones, to walk amidft blooming Ivory and Gold; or retire from the most sumptuous Feast, to be recreated with the more refined Sweets of the Garden. I cannot wonder, that Queens forego, for a while, the Compliments of a Nation, to receive the Tribute of the Parterre; or withdraw from all the Glitter of a Court, to be attended with the more splendid Equipage of a Bed of Flowers.-But, if this be to pleafing; what transporting Pleafure must arise, from the Fruition of uncreated Excellency! O! what unknown Delight, to enter into thy immediate Presence, most blessed Lord God! To see Thee *, Thou King of Heaven, and LORD of Glory, no longer "through a Glass darkly, but Face to Face!" To have all thy Goodness, all thy Greatness, shine before us; and be made glad for ever with the brightest Discovery of thy Persections, with the inestable Joy of thy Countenance!

This we cannot bear, in our present imperfect State. The Effulgence of unveiled Divinity would dazzle a mortal Sight. Our feeble Faculties, would be over-whelmed with such a Fulness of superabundant Blife; and must lie oppressed, under such an exceeding great, eternal Weight of Glory.—But, when this Corruptible hath put on Incorruption, the Powers of the Soul will be greatly invigorated; and these earthly Tabernacles, will

* Isaiah represents the Felicity of the Righteous, in the everlasting World, by this elegant and amiable Image; Thine Eyes shall see the King in his Beauty. Isa. xxxiii. 17.—Milton touches the same Subject, with wonderful Elevation and Majesty of Thought:

— — They walk with GOD, High in Salvation, and the Climes of Blifs. MILT. B. XI. v. 707.

Words, which, like the fiery Car, almost transport our Affections to those glorious Abodes.

be transformed into the Likeness of Christ's glorious Body. Then, though "the Moon shall be confound-"ed, and the Sun ashamed *," when the Lord of Hosts is revealed from Heaven; yet, shall his saithful People be enabled to see Him as He is †.

Here then, my Withes, here be fixed. Be this your determined and invariable Aim.—Here my Affections, here give a Loofe to your whole Ardour. Cry out, in the Language of Infpiration; This one Thing have I defired of the Lord, which, with inceffant Earnestness, I will require; that I may dwell in the celestial House of the Lord, all the Days of my future Life; to behold the fair Beauty of the Lord; and to contemplate, with Wonder and Adoration—with unspeakable and everlasting Rapture—all the Attributes of the incomprehensible Godhead.

SOLOMON, a most penetrating Judge of human Nature, knowing how highly Mankind is charmed, with the fine Qualities of Flowers; has figured out the bleffed Jesus, that "fairest among ten thousand," by these lovely Representatives. He stiles him § The Rose of Sharon, and The Lily of the Vallies #; like the first, full

* Ifai. xxiv. 23. † I John iii. 2. † Pfal. xxvii. 4. § Cant. ii. 1.

Malus ut arboribus decori est, ut vitibus uvæ,

Utque Rose campis, ut liliu vallibus alba,

Sic Christus decus omne suis.——

By the Lily of the Vallies, I apprehend, is meant, not the Flower which commonly passes under that Denomination, and is, comparatively mean; but the grand, majestic, Garden Lily; growing in a rich irriguous Soil, where it flourishes in the most ample Manner, and arrives at the highest Perfection. The Circumstance of the Vallies, added by the sacred Writer, is significant not of the Species, but of the Place.—This is by far the noblest Interpretation, and most exactly suitable to the spiritual Sense; which intimates, That the blessed Jesus delights to dwell, by the Communications of his Spirit, in humble Hearts.—

of Delights and communicable Graces; like the laft, exalted in Majesty, and complete in Beauty.-In that facred Pastoral, he ranges the Creation; borrows its most finished Forms; and dips his Pencil in its choicest Dyes, to present us with a Sketch of the Amiableness of his Person. His Amiableness, who is the Light of the World; the Glory of his Church; the only Hope, the fovereign Confolation of Sinners; and exalted, infinitely exalted, not only above the sublimest Comparison, but even "above all Bleffing and Praise."-May I also make the same heavenly Use, of all sublunary Enjoyments! Whatever is pleasurable, or charming below; let'it raise my Desire to those delectable Objects, which are above. Which will yield, not partial, but perfect Felicity; not transient, but never ending, Satisfaction and Joy.—Yes, my Soul, let these Beauties in Miniature, always remind thee of that glorious Person; in whom "dwells all the Fulness of the Godhead bodily." Let these little Emanations, teach thee to thirst after the eternal Fountain. O! may the Creatures, be thy conflant Clue to the Creator! For this is a certain Truth, and deferves thy frequent Recollection, demands thy most attentive Consideration; That the whole Compass of finite Perfection, is only a faint Ray *, shot from that immenfe Source—is only a finall Drop, derived from that inexhaustible Ocean-of all Good.

What a furprifing Variety is observable, among the flowery Tribes! How has the bountiful Hand of Providence, diversified these nicest Pieces of his Workman-

^{* —}Thou fitt'st above all Heav'ns,
To Us invisible, or dimly seen
In these thy lowest Works; yet these declare Thy Goodness beyond Thought, and Pow'r divine.
MILT. Book V.

their other Perfections!—A conftant Uniformity would foon render the Entertainment tirefome, or infipid; therefore, every Species is formed on a feparate Plan, and exhibits fomething entirely new. The Fashion spreads not from Family to Family; but every one has a Mode of its own, which is truly original. The most cursory Glance, perceives an apparent Difference, as well as a peculiar Delicacy, in the Airs and Habits, the Attitude and Lineaments, of every distinct Class.

Some rear their Heads, with a majestic Mien; and overlook, like Sovereigns or Nobles, the whole Parterre. Others feem more moderate in their Aims, and advance only to the middle Stations; a Genius turned for Heraldry, might term them, the Gentry of the Border. While others, free from all afpiring Views, creep unambitiously on the Ground, and look like the Commonalty of the Kind.—Some are interfected with elegant Stripes, or studded with radiant Spots. Some affect to be genteelly powdered, or neatly fringed; while others are plain in their Aspect, unaffected in their Dress, and content to please with a naked Simplicity. Some affume the Monarch's Purple; fome look most becoming in the Virgin's White; but Black, doleful Black, has no Admittance into the Wardrobe of Spring. The Weeds of Mourning would be a manifest Indecorum, when Nature holds an univerfal Festival. She would, now, infpire none but delightful Ideas: and therefore always makes her Appearance, in some * amiable Suit.—Here, stands a Warrior, clad with Crimson; there, sits a Magistrate, robed in Scarlet; and yonder, struts a pretty Fellow, that feems to have dipped his Plumes in the Rainbow, and glitters in all the gay Colours of that refplendent Arch. Some rife into a curious Cup, or fall into a fet of beautiful Bells. Some fpread themselves in a swelling Tust, or croud into a delicious Cluster.—In some, the predominant Stain, softens by the gentlest Diminutions; till it has even stole away from itself. The Eye is amused at the agreeable Delusion; and we wonder to find ourselves insensibly decoyed, into a quite different Lustre. In others, you would think, the sine Tinges were emulous of Pre-eminence. Disdaining to mingle, they confront one another, with the Resolution of Rivals, determined to dispute the Prize of Beauty; while each is improved, by the Opposition, into the highest Vivacity of Complexion.

* -Nunc formosissimus annus.

VIRG.

How manifeld are thy Works *, O Lord! Multiplied even to a Prodigy. Yet in Wisdom, consummate Wisdom, hast thou made them all.—How I admire the Vastness of the Contrivance, and the Exactness of the Execution! Man, feeble Man, with Difficulty accomplishes a fingle Work. Hardly, and after many Efforts, does He arrive at a tolerable Imitation, of some one Production of Nature. But the Almighty Artist spoke Millions of Substances, into instantaneous Being; the whole Collection wonderfully various, and each Individual completely perfect.—Repeated Experiments generally, I might fay, always discover Errors or Defects, in our happiest Inventions. Nay, what wins our Approbation, at the present Hour, or in this particular Place, is very probably, in some remote Period or some distant Clime, treated with Contempt. Whereas, these fine Structures have pleased every Taste, in every Country, for almost six thousand Years. Nor has any + Fault been detected in the original Plan, nor any Room lest for the least Improvement upon the first Model.—All our Performances, the more minutely they are scanned, the more imperset they appear. With regard to these delicate Objects, the more we search into their Properties, the more we are ravished with their Graces. They are sure to disclose fresh Strokes of the most masterly Skill; in Proportion to the Attention, with which they are examined.

* Pfal. civ. 24.

[†] Ecclef. iii. 14. I know, that whatfeever God doth, it shall be for ever; Nothing can be fut to it, nor any thing taken from it.

Nor is the Simplicity of the Operation less astonishing, than the Accuracy of the Workmanship, or the Infinitude of the Effects. Should you ask; "Where, " and what are the Materials, which beautify the bloom-" ing World? What rich Tints; what splendid Dyes; " what Stores of shining Crayons; stand by the Heaven-" ly Limner, when he paints the Robe of Nature?" 'Tis answered, His powerful Pencil needs no such costly Apparatus. A fingle Principle, under His conducting Hand, branches out into an Immensity of the most varied, and most finished Forms. The Moisture of the Earth, and of the circumambient Air, passed through proper Strainers, and disposed in a Range of pellucid Tubes: This performs all the Wonders, and produces all the Beauties, of Vegetation. This creeps along the Fibres of the low-spread Moss; and climbs to the very Tops of the lofty-waving Cedars. This, attracted by the Root, and circulating through invisible Canals; this bursts into Gems; expands itself into Leaves; and cloaths the Forest, with all its verdant Honours.-This one *, plain and fimple, Cause gives Birth to all the Charms; which deck the Youth, and Maturity, of the Year.

^{* &}quot;When every feveral Effect has a particular separate Cause, this "gives no Pleasure to the Spectator, as not discovering Contrivance.

Year. This blushes, in the early Hepatica; and stames, in the late advancing Poppy. This reddens into Blood, in the Veins of the Mulberry; and attenuates itself into leasen Gold, to create a Covering for the Quince. This breathes, in all the fragrant Gales of our Garden; and weeps odorous Gum, in the Groves of Arabia.—So twonderful is our Creator in Counsel, and so excellent in Working!

In a Grove of Tulips, or a Knot of Pinks, one perceives a Difference in almost every Individual. Scarce any two, are turned, and tinctured, exactly alike. Each allows himself a little Particularity in his Dress, though all belong to one Family: fo that they are various, and vet the fame.—A pretty Emblem this, of the smaller Differences between Protestant Christians. There are Modes in Religion, which admit of Variation, without Prejudice to found Faith, or real Holinefs. Just as the Drapery, on these Pictures of the Spring, may be formed after a Variety of Patterns, without blemishing their Beauty, or altering their Nature.—Be it fo then, that, in some Points of inconsiderable Consequence, feveral of our Brethren diffent: yet, let Us all live amicably and fociably together; for we harmonize in Principals, though we vary in Punctilios. Let us join in Conversation, and intermingle Interests; discover no Estrangement of Behaviour, and cherish no Alienation of Affection. If any Strife fubfifts, let it be to follow our Divine Master most closely, in Humility of Heart, [&]quot;But that Work is beheld with Admiration and Delight, as the Re"fult of deep Counsel, which is complicated in its Parts, and yet fimple and Unblameableness of Life. Let it be to serve one another most readily, in all the kind Offices of a cordial Friendship. Thus shall we be united, though distinguished; united in the same grand Fundamentals, though distinguished by some small Circumstantials; united in one important Bond of brotherly Love, though distinguished by some slighter Peculiarities of Sentiment.

[&]quot;in its Operations. Where a great Variety of Effects are feen to arife from one Principle operating uniformly." ABERNETHY on the Attributes.

BETWEEN Christians, whose Judgments disagree only about a Form of Prayer, or Manner of Worship, I apprehend, there is no more effential Difference; than between Flowers which bloom from the same Kind of Seed, but happen to be fomewhat diversified in the Mixture of their Colours.—Whereas, if one denies the Divinity of our LORD JESUS CHRIST, and degrades the incarnate God to the Meanness of a mere Creature; if another cries up the Worthiness of human Works, and depreciates the alone-meritorious Righteousness of the glorious Mediator; if a third addresses the incommunicable Honours to a finite Being, and bows to the Image, or prays to the Saint-Thefe are Errors, extremely derogatory to the REDEEMER's Dignity, and not a little prejudicial to the Comfort of his People. Against these to remonstrate; against these to urge every Argument, and use every Dissuasive; bespeaks not the centorious Bigot, but the Friend of Truth, and the Lover of Mankind.—Whereas, to stand neuter and filent, while fuch Principles are propagated, would be an Instance of criminal Remissness, rather than of Christian Moderation.—For the Persons, we will not fail to maintain a tender Compassion: we will not cease to put up earnest Intercessions: we will also acknowledge and love, whatever is excellent and amiable in their Character. Yet, we dare not subscribe their Creed; we cannot remit our affiduous, but kind Endeavours; if by any Means we may reconcile them to a more feriptural Belief, and a purer Worship *.

ANOTHER Circumstance, recommending and endearing the flowery Creation, is the regular Succession. They make not their Appearance all at once, but in an orderly Rotation. While a proper Number of these obliging Retainers are in waiting, the others abfcond; but hold themselves in a Posture of Service, ready to take their Turn, and fill each his respective Station, the Instant it becomes vacant.—The Snowdrop, foremost of the lovely Train, breaks her Way through the frozen Soil, in order to present her early Compliments to her Lord. Dreffed in the Robe of Innocency, the steps forth, fearless of Danger; long before the Trees have ventured to unfold their Leaves, even while the Icicles are pendent on our Houses.—Next, peeps out the Crocus; but cautiously, and with an Air of Timidity. She hears the howling Blafts, and skulks close to her low Situation. Afraid she seems, to make large Excursions from her Root; while fo many ruffian Winds are abroad, and fcouring along the Æther.-Nor is the Violet last, in this shining Embassy of the Year. Which, with all the Embellishments, that would grace a Royal Garden, condescends to line our Hedges, and grow at the Feet of Briars. Freely, and without any Solicitation, she distributes

^{*} In some former Editions, I expressed myself, on this Point, un-warily and barshy. But my Meaning, and real Sentiments, were no other than those represented above.—The Reader, from such unguarded Intimations, might too naturally be led to conclude, That the Author avows, and would stir up, a Spirit of Persecution. But this is a Method of dealing with Opponents in religious Doctrines which He disclaims, as absurd; and abhors, as iniquitous. He is for no Force, but that of rational Conviction; for no Constraint, but that of affectionate Persuasion. Thus, If You please, compel them to come in, Luke xiv. 23, diffributes the Bounty of her emissive Sweets: while herfelf, with an exemplary Humility, retires from Sight; feeking rather to administer Pleasure, than to win Admiration *. Emblem, expressive Emblem, of those modest Virtues, which delight to bloom in Obscurity: which extend a chearing Influence to Multitudes, who are scarce acquainted with the Source of their Comforts! Motive, engaging Motive, to that ever-active Beneficence; which stays not for the Importunity of the Distressed, but anticipates their Suit, and prevents them with the Bleffings of its Goodness !- The poor Polyanthus, that lately adorned the Border with her sparkling Beauties; and, transplanted into our Windows, gave us a fresh Entertainment; is now no more. I saw her Complexion fade; I perceived her Breath decay; till at length fhe expired, and dropt into her Grave.—Scarce have we fustained this Lofs, but in comes the Auricula, and more than retrieves it. Arrayed she comes, in a fplendid Variety of amiable Forms; with an Eye of Crystal, and Garments of the most glossy Sattin; exhaling Perfume, and powdered with Silver. A very diftinguished Procession this! The favourite Care of the Florist! Scarce one among them, but is dignified with a Character of Renown; or has the Honour to represent, some celebrated Toast. But these also, notwithstanding their illustrious Titles, have exhausted their whole Stock of Fragrance, and are mingled with the meanest Dust.-Who could forbear grieving at their Departure, did not the Tulips begin to raise themselves on their fine Wands, or stately Stalks? They slush the Parterre with one of the gayest Dresses, that blooming Nature wears. Did ever Beau or Belle make to gaudy an Appearance, in a Birth-night Suit? Here, one may behold the innocent Wantonness of Beauty. Here, she indulges a Thousand Freaks, and sports herself in the most charming Diversity of Colours. Yet, I should wrong her, were I to call her a Coquet; because, she plays her lovely Changes, not to enkindle diffolute Affections, but to difplay her Creator's Glory.—Soon arifes the Anemone; incircled at the Bottom, with a spreading Robe; and rounded, at the Top, into a beautiful Dome. In its loofely-flowing Mantle, you may observe a noble Negligence; in its gently-bending Tufts, the nicest Symmetry. I would term it, the fine Gentleman of the Garden; because, it seems to have learnt the singular Address, of uniting Simplicity with Refinement, of reconciling Art and Ease.—The same Month has the Merit of producing the Ranunculus. All bold and graceful, it expands the Riches of its Foliage; and acquires, by Degrees, the loveliest Enamel in the World. As Persons of intrinsic Worth, disdain the superficial Arts of Recommendation, practifed by Fops; so, this lordly Flower fcorns to borrow any of its Excellence, from Powders and Effences. It needs no fuch Attractives, to render it the Darling of the Curious; being sufficiently engaging from the Elegance of its Figure, the radiant Variety of its Tinges, and a certain superior Dignity of Afpect.-Methinks, Nature improves in her Operations. Her latest Strokes are most masterly. crown the Collection, she introduces the Carnation. Which captivates every Eye, with a noble Spread of Graces; and charmes another Sense, with a Profusion of exquifite Odours. This fingle Flower has centred in itself, the Perfections of all the preceding. Moment it appears, it so commands our Attention, that we scarce regret the Absence of the rest.—The Gillyflower, like a real Friend, attends you through all the Viciffitudes and Alterations of the Seafon. While others make make a transient Visit only, this is rather an Inhabitant, than a Guest in your Garden; adds Fidelity to Complaisance.

^{*} Prodesse quam conspini.

IT is in vain to attempt a Catalogue of these amiable Gifts. There is an endless Multiplicity, in their Characters; yet an invariable Order, in their Approaches. Every Month, almost every Week, has its peculiar Ornaments; not fervilely copying the Works of its Predecessor, but forming, still forming, and still executing some new Defign. So lavish is the Fancy, yet so exact is the Procefs, of Nature!

HERE, let me stand awhile, to contemplate this Diftribution of Flowers, through the feveral Periods of the Year.—Were they all to bloffom together; there would be at once a promiscuous Throng, and at once a total Privation. We should scarce have an Opportunity, of adverting to the dainty Qualities of Half; and must foon lose the agreeable Company of them All. But now, fince every Species has a separate Post to occupy; and a distinct Interval for appearing; we can take a leifurely and minute Survey of each fucceeding Set. We can view and review their Forms; enter into a more intimate Acquaintance with their charming Accomplishments; and receive all those pleasing Services, which they are commissioned to yield.—This remarkable Piece of Oeconomy, is productive of another very valuable Effect. It not only places, in a most advantageous Light, every particular Community: but is also a fure provisionary Resource, against the Frailty of the whole Nation. Or, to fpeak more truly, it renders the flowery Tribes a Sort of * Immortal Corps. For, though fome are

^{*} In Allusion to the celebrated Practice of the Persian Kings; "who " maintained, for their Lifeguard, a Body of Troops, called Immor-" tal;

are continually dropping; yet, by this Expedient, others are as continually rifing, to beautify our Borders, and prolong the Entertainment.

What Goodness is this, to provide such a Series of Gratifications for Mankind! Both to diversify, and perpetuate, the sine Collation! To take care, that our Paths should be, in a Manner, incessantly strewed with Flowers!—And what Wisdom, to bid every one of these insensible Beings, know the precise Juncture for their coming forth! Insomuch that no Actor on a Stage, can be more exact in performing his Part; can make a more regular Entry, or a more punctual Exit.

Wно imboldens the Daffodil, to venture abroad in February; and to trust her flowering Gold, with inclement and treacherous Skies? Who informs the various Tribes of Fruit-bearing Bloffoms; that vernal Suns, and a more genial Warmth, are fittest for their delicate Texture? Who teaches the Clove to flay; till hotter Beams are prepared, to infuse a spicy Richness into her Odours, and tincture her Complexion with the deepest Crimfon?—Who disposes these beautiful Troops, into fuch orderly Bodies; retarding some and accelerating others? Who has instructed them to file off, with such perfect Regularity; as foon as the Duty of their respective Station is over? And, when one Detachment retires, Who gives the Signal, for another immediately to advance? Who, but that unerring Providence, which, from the highest Thrones of Angels, to the very lowest Degrees of Existence, orders all Things in "Number, " Weight and Meafure!"

[&]quot;tal; because it perpetually subsisted: For as soon as any of the Men died, another was immediately put in his Place." Rowlin's Ancient History, Vol. II.

THESE, O my Soul, are the Regulations of that most adorable, that most beneficent Being, who bowed the Heavens; came down to dwell on Earth; and united the Frailty of thy mortal Nature, to all the Glories of His Godhead. All the Honour of this admirable Effablishment, belongs to thy Ransom, thy Surety, thy Saviour. To HIM it belongs, who fuftained the Vengeance, which thou hast deserved, and wast doomed to fuffer; who fulfilled the Obedience, which thou wast obliged, but unable; to perform; and who humbled himself (stupendous, ineffable Loving-Kindness!) humbled Himself to Death, even the Death of the Cross .-HE formed this vast Machine, and adjusted its nice Dependencies. The Pillars; that support it; the Embellithments, that adorn it; and the Laws, that govern it; are the Refult of his unsearchable Counsels. the Heights of his Majesty, and the Depths of his Abasements!

Which shall we admire most, His essential Greatness, or His free Grace? He created the exalted Seraph, that fings in Glory; and every the minutest Infect, that flutters in Air, or crawls in Dust. He marks out a Path, for all those Globes of Light; which travel the Circuit of the Skies; and disdains not to rear the Violet from its lowly Bed, or to plait the Daify which dreffes our Plains. So grand are his operations; yet fo condescending his Regards !- If Summer, like a sparkling Bride, is brilliant and glorious in her Apparel; what is this, but a feeble Reflection of his uncreated Effulgence? If Autumn, like a munificent Host, opens her Stores, and gives us all Things richly to enjoy; what is this but a little Taste of his inexhaustible Liberality? If Thunders roar, you hear the Sound of his Trumpet: If Lightnings glare, you fee the Launching of his glittering Spear: If "the perpetual Hills be feattered, and the " everlast-K

" everlasting Mountains bowed," you behold a Display—No, says the Prophet, you have rather * The Hiding of bis Power. So immense is His Power; so uncontroulable and inconceivable; that all these mighty Works are but a Sketch, in which more is concealed than discovered.

Thus, I think, we should always view the visible System; with an Evangelical Telescope (if I may be allowed the Expression,) and with an Evangelical Microfcope. Regarding Christ Jesus, as the great Projector and Architect; who planned, and executed, the

* Hab. iii. 4. Nothing can be more magnificently conceived, than the Imagery of this whole Chapter; and upon the Foot of our Interpretation, nothing was ever more delicately and nobly turned, than the Sentiment of this Clause. Other Senses of the Passage, I acknowledge, may be affigned with equal Propriety. But none, I think, can be imagined so majestic and sublime. As the Original will fairly admit of it; as it carries no Disagreement with the Context; and expresses a most important, as well as undoubted Truth; I hope, I may be permitted to use it, at least by way of Accommodation.—Especially, as it fuggetts one of the finest Mottes imaginable; wherewith to inscribe all the visible Productions of the Creator's Hand. When, struck with Astonishment, we consider their Grandeur, Beauty, and consummate Perfections; let us, in Justice to their Author, apply the exalted Reflection of this facred Ode: " In all the is the Hiding, rather than an " adequate Display, of his matchless Power. Tho' they challenge our " Praise, and surpass our Comprehension; yet are they by no means the " utmost Exertions, but rather some slighter Essays, of omnipotent " Skill."-Milton, relating the Overthrow of the fallen Angels, introduces a grand Circumstance, not much unlike the preceding. Messal, unaided and alone, had routed an innumerable Host of apostate Spirits. This was great and marvellous. But to create a juster Idea of the illustrious Conqueror, our Poet beautifully adds;

Yet half his Strength he put not forth.

If we forget to make the fame Remark, when we contemplate God in his Works; we must necessarily form very scanty Conceptions of that SUPREME BEING, before whom all Nations are as a "Drop of a Bucket, and are counted as the small Dust of the Balance."

amazing Scheme. Whatever is magnificent or valuable; tremendous or amiable; should ever be ascribed to the Redeemer. This, is the Christian's Natural Philesophy. With Regard to this Method of considering the Things that are feen; we have an inspired Apostle, for our Preceptor and Precedent. Speaking of Christ, He fays; "Thou, LORD, in the Beginning, hast laid " the Foundation of the Earth; and the Heavens are " the Work of thy Hands."—Did we carefully attend to this leading Principle, in all our Examinations of Nature; it would, doubtlefs, be a most powerful Means of enkindling our Love, and * strengthening our Faith. When I look round upon Millions of noble Substances, and carry with me this transporting Reflection, "The "Maker of them all, expired on a Cross for me;" how can

* The Apostles, I observe, delight to use this Method, of displaying the Honours of the Redeemer, and establishing the Faith of his People.—The beloved Disciple, teaching that most precious Doctrine, of a Lamb flain to take away the Sins of the World;" in order to evince the Sufficiency of CHRIST's Sacrifice for this bleffed Purpofe, affirms, That All Things were made by Him: And without Him was not any thing, no, not so much as one single being, made, John i. 3.—St. Poul, preaching the same glad Tidings to the Colossians, and expressly maintaining, That we have Redemption through his Blood; feems to foresee an Objection of this Kind. "To expiate Transgressions against " an infinite Majesty, is a most prodigious Act. It must cost vastly "more than any common Surety can pay, to redeem a finful World. "What Reason have we to believe, that Jesus is equal to this mighty "Undertaking?" All possible Reason, replies the Apostle, from the Dignity of his Person, For He is the Image of the invisible GoD; and from the Greatness of his Works, For by Him all Things were made. Consider the Operations of his Hands, and you cannot doubt the atoning Efficacy of his Death, Col. i. 15, 16. - The Author of the Epistle to the Hebrews, falls exactly into the same Train of arguing. Declaring, that CHRIST JESUS has purged our Sins, by the Sacrifice of Himself; he proves His ample Ability for this tremendous Office, from His essential Excellence, because He is the Brightness of his Father's Glory; and from His admirable Works, because He made the K 2 Worlds.

can I remain any longer indifferent? Must not the coldest Heart, begin to glow with Gratitude?—When I survey an Immensity of the finest Productions imaginable; and remember, That the Author of them all, is my "Righteousness and my Redemption;" how can I choose but repose the most chearful Considence, in such a Mediator!

LET me add one more Remark, upon the admirable Adjustment of every Particular, relating to these fine Colonies planted in the Parterre.-With fuch Accuracy and Correctness, is their Structure finished; that any the least conceivable Alteration, would very much impair their Perfection. Should you fee, for Instance, the nice Disposition of the Tulip's Attire fly abroad, diforderly and irregular, like the flaunting Woodbine: Should the Jessamine rear her diminutive Head, on those grand Columns which support the Hollibock: Should the erect and manly Aspect of the Piony, hang down with a penfive Air, like the flexile Bells of the Hyacinth: Should that noble Plainness, which distinguishes the Lily, be exchanged for the glittering Fringes, which edge the Pink; or the gaudy Stains, which bedrop the Iris: Should those tapering Pillars, which arise in the Middle of its Vafe, and, tipt with golden Pendants, give fuch a Lustre to the surrounding Panels of Alas bafter.—Should those fink and disappear, like the Chives which cover the Heart of the Aneinone:-In many of these Cases, would not the Transposition be fantastical

Worlds, and uphold the all Things by the Word of his Power, Heb. i. 2, 3. —Which Truth, as it is so important in itself; of such signal Comfort to Christians; and so particularly insisted on, by the inspired Writers; I hope, I shall need no Apology, for an Attempt to illustrate and enforce it, in a Kind of evangelical Descant upon Creation, annexed to these Reflections.

and aukward? In all, to the apparent Prejudice of every Individual?

AGAIN; with regard to the Time of their appearing; this Circumstance is settled, by a remarkable Foresight and Precaution. What would become of the Sailor; if. in very stormy Weather, he should raise a losty Mast, and croud it with all his Canvass! Such would be the ill Effect; if the most stately Species of Flowers, should prefume to come abroad, in the bluftering Months. Ah! how would they rue the imprudent Boldness! Therefore, those only that shoot the shortest Stems, and display the smallest Spread of Leaves, or (if you please) carry the least Sail, are launched amidst the blowing Seasons.—How injudiciously would the Perfumer act; if he should unseal his finest Essences and expose them to the Northern Winds, or Wintry Rains! Our blooming Artists of the aromatic Profession, at least the most delicate among them, feem perfectly aware of the Confequences of fuch a Procedure. Accordingly, they postpone the Opening of their odoriferous Treasures; till a ferener Air, and more * unclouded Skies, grant a Pro-

* Casimir, in a very poetical Manner, addresses himself to the dormant Rose; and most prettily invites her to venture abroad, by the Mention of these two Circumstances:

Siderum facros imitata vultus, Quid lates dudum, Rofa? Delicatum Effer e terris caput. O tepentis Filia cæli.

Jam tibi nuhes fugiunt aquosæ, Quas fugant albis Zephyri quadrigis; Jam tibi mulcet Boream jocantis Aura Favons.

Child of the Summer, charming Rose,
No longer in Confinement lie;
Arise to Light; thy Form disclose;
Rival the Spangles of the Sky,

Kз

a Protection to their amiable Traffic: till they are under no more Apprehensions, of having their spicy Cells risled by rude Blasts, or drowned in incessant Showers!

WHAT a striking Argument is here for Resignation; unfeigned Refignation, to all the Disposals of Providence! Too often are our diffatisfied Thoughts apt to find Fault with Divine Difpensations. We tacitly arraign our Maker's Conduct, or question his Kindness with regard to ourselves. We fancy our Lot, not so commodiously situated; or our Condition, not so happily circumstanced; as if we had been placed in some other Station of Life.—But, let us behold this exquifitely nice Regulation of the minutest Plants; and be ashamed of our repining Folly. Could any Fibre in their Composition, be altered; or one Line in their Features be transposed; without clouding some of their Beauties? Could any Fold in their Vestments, be varied; or any Link in their orderly Succession, be broken; without injuring some delicate Property? And does not that All-feeing Eye, which preferves fo exact a Harmony, among these pretty Toys! maintain as watchful a Care, over His rational Creatures? Does He choose the properest Season, for the Cowslip to arise, and drink the Dews? And can He neglect the Concerns, or misjudge the Conveniences, of His Sons and Daughters? He, who has fo completely disposed, whatever pertains to the vegetable Oeconomy; that the

The Rains are gone; the Storms are o'er; Winter retires to make thee Way:
Come then, thou fweetly blushing Flow'r;
Come, lovely Stranger, come away.

The Sun is dress'd in beaming Smiles,
To give thy Beauties to the Day:
Young Zephyrs wait, with gentlest Gales,
To fan thy Bosom, as they play.

least Diminution or Addition, would certainly hurt the finished Scheme; does, without all Peradventure, pre-fide, with equal Attention, over the Interests of his own People.

BE still, then, thou uneasy Mortal*; know, that God is unerringly wise; and be assured, that, amidst the greatest Multiplicity of Beings, He does not overlook thee. Thy Saviour has given me Authority to assert, That thou art of far superior Value, in the Estimate of Omnipotence, than all the Herbage of the Field.—If His sacred Will, ordains Sickness for thy Portion; never dare to imagine, That uninterrupted Health would be more advantageous. If He pleases to with-hold, or take away, Children; never presume to conclude, That thy Happiness is blasted, because thy Hopes of an increasing Family are disappointed. He, that marshals all the Starry Host, and so accurately arranges every the meanest Species of Herbs; HE orders all the Peculiarities, all the Changes of thy State, with a Vigilance, that

* Permittas ipsis expendere numinibus, quid Conveniat nobis, rebusque sit utile nostris, Nam pro jucundis aptissima quæque dabunt dii: Carior est illis homo, quam sibi.——

Juy.

Since all the downward Tracts of Time God's watchful Eye furveys; O! who fo wife to choose our Lot, And regulate our Ways?

Since none can doubt his equal Love, Unmeasurably kind; To his unerring, gracious Will, Be ev'ry Wish resign'd.

Good when He gives, supremely Good; Nor less, when he denies; Ev'n Crosses, from his sov'reign Hand, Are Blessings in Disguise. nothing can elude; with a Goodness, that endureth for ever.—Bow thy Head, therefore, in humble Acquie-scence. Rest satisfied, That whatever is, by the Appointment of Heaven *, is right, is best.

Among all the Productions of the Third Creating-Day, this of Flowers feems to be peculiarly defigned for Man. Man has the Monopoly of this Favour: it is conferred on Him, by a Sort of exclusive Charter. See the Imperial Crown, splendid and beautifully grand! See the Tuberose, delicate and languishingly fair! See all the Pomp and Glory of the Parterre; where Paint and Persume do Wonders. Yet the inferior Animals are neither smit with their Beauties, nor regaled with their Odours. The Horse never stands still, to gaze upon their Charms; nor does the Ox turn aside, to browse upon their Sweets. Senses they have, to discern

* Whatever is, is right-If Mr. Pope understands the Maxim, according to the Limitation suggested above, he speaks a most undeniable and glorious Truth. But if that great Poet includes whatever comes to pass, through the wild and extravagant Passions of Men; furely no thinking Person, at least no Christian, can accede to his Opinion .-What Gop orders, is wife, beyond all Possibility of Correction; and good, above all that we can ask or think. His Decrees, are the Result of infinite Discernment; and his Dispensations, the Islues of unbounded Benevolence .- But Man, fallen Man, is hurried away, by his Lufts, into a thousand Irregularities; which are deplorably evil in themselves, and attended with Confequences, manifestly pernicious to Society,-Let the Sentiment, therefore, be restrained to the Disposals of Heaven, and I most readily subscribe it. But, if it be extended to the Conduct of Men, and the Effects of their Folly; I think myself obliged, to enter my Protest against it. For, whatever kindles the Divine Indignation—is Cause of final Ruin to the Author—is strictly forbidden by God's holy Word-is contrary to the whole Design of his revealed Will, and the very Reverse of his effential Attributes-This, cannot possibly be right. This, is most undoubtedly wrong. Omnipotence, indeed, can over-rule it, and educe Good from it. But the very Notion of over-ruling, supposes it to be absolutely awrong in itself.

these curious Objects in their gross; but no Taste, to distinguish or relish their fine Accomplishments.—Just so, carnal and unenlightened Men, may understand the literal Meaning of Scripture; may comprehend the Evidences of its Divine Inspiration. Yet have no ardent Longing for the spiritual Blessings, it offers; see "no Form or "Comeliness" in the Saviour, it describes, so as to render Him the supreme Desire of their Souls.

THE chief End of these beautiful Appearances, Philofophers fay, is to enfold and cherish the Embryo Seed : or to fwathe the tender Body, during its Infant State. But, whatever is the chief End of Nature; 'tis certain she never departs from the Design, of administering Delight to Mankind *. This is inseparably connected with her other Views.—Were it only to fecure a re-productive Principle, what need of fuch elegant Complications? Why fo much Art employed, and fo many Decorations added? Why should Vestments be prepared, richer than Brocades; more delicate than Lawns; and of a finer Glow, than the most admired Velvets?—If the great Mother had no other Aim, than barely to accommodate her little Offspring; warm Flannel, or homely Fustian. would have ferved her Turn. Served it, full as well as the most sumptuous Tissues, or all the Furniture of the Mercer's Shop.

EVIDENT then it is, that Flowers were endued with fuch enchanting Graces, for the Pleafure of Man. In

Spect. Vol. V. Nº 387.

^{* &}quot;We find that the most important Parts in the Vegetable World, are those which are the most beautiful. These are the Seeds by "which the several Races of Plants are propagated and continued, and which are always lodged in Flowers or Blossoms. Nature feems to hide her principal Design, and to be industrious in making the Earth gay and delightful, while she is carrying on her great Work, and intent upon her own Preservation."

Purfuance of this original Intention, they have always paid their Court to the Human Race; they still seem particularly folicitous of recommending themselves to our Regard. The finest of each Species croud about our Habitations; and are rarely to be feen, at a Diftance from our Abodes. They thrive under our cultivating Hand, and observing Eye; but degenerate, and pine away, if unregarded by their Lord.—To win his Attention, and deck his Retreats, they hide their Deformities under Ground; and display nothing but the most graceful Forms and engaging Colours, to his Sight.

—To merit a farther Degree of his Esteem, the Generality of them dispense a delightful Persume. What is ffill more obliging, they * referve their richest Exhalations, to embalm his Morning and Evening Walks +. Because He usually chooses those cool Hours, to recreate himself among their blooming Ranks; therefore, at those Hours, they are most lavish of their Fragrance, and breathe out their choicest Spirits.

O MAN, greatly beloved by thy Creator! The Darling of Providence! Thou art distinguished by bis Goodness; distinguish thyself also by thy Gratitude. Be it thy one undivided Aim, to glorify him; who has been at so much Expence, to gratify thee!—While all these inferior Creatures, in filent Eloquence, declare the Glory of God; do thou lend them thy Tongue. Be thou the High-Priest of the mute Creation. Let their Praises

MILT.

PRIOR's Sal.

^{* — — —} The Flow'rs,

That open now their choicest bosom'd Smells,

Referv'd from Night, and kept for thee in Store.

[†] The twining Jasinine, and the blushing Rose, With lavish Grace their Morning Scents disclose; The smelling Tub'rose and Jonquil declare The kronger Impulse of an Evining Air.

become vocal in thy Songs.—Adore the supreme Benefactor, for the Bleffings He showers down, upon every Order of Beings. Adore him for numberless Mercies. which are appropriated to thyfelf. But, above all, adore Him, for that noble Gift of a rational and immortal Soul.—This constitutes us Masters of the Globe, and gives us the real Enjoyment of its Riches. This difcovers ten thousand Beauties, which otherwise had been loft; and renders them both a Source of Delights, and a Nursery of Devotion .- By Virtue of this exalted Principle, we are qualified to admire our Maker's Works, and capable of bearing his illustrious Image: bearing his illustrious Image, not only when these Ornaments of the Ground, have refigned their Honours; but, when the great Origin of Day, is extinguished in the Skies; and all the flaming Orbs on high, are put out in obscure Darkness.—Then to survive; to survive the Ruins of one World, and to enjoy Gon-to refemble Gon-to be "filled with all the Fulness of God," in another-What a Happiness, what an inestimable Happiness, is this! Yet, this is thy Privilege, (barter it not, for Trifles of an Hour!) this thy glorious Prerogative, O Man!

O! THE Goodness, the exuberant Goodness, of our God! I cannot forbear celebrating it once more, before I pass to another Consideration.—How much should we think ourselves obliged, to a generous Friend; who should build a stately Edifice*, purely for our Abode! But, how

^{*} I cannot persuade myself, that the Comparison is stretched beyond proper Bounds, when carried to this Pitch. It is my stedfast Opinion, That the World, at least this lower World, with its various Appurtenances, was intended furely for Man; that it is apprepriated to him; and that he (in Subordination to God's Glory) is the End of its Creation.—Other Animals, 'tis true, partake of the Creator's Benefits:

how greatly would the Obligation be encreased; if the Hand that built, should also furnish it! And not only furnish it, with all that is commodious and comfortable: but ornament it also, with whatever is splendid and delightful!

fits: but then, they partake under the Notion of Man's Domesticks, or on the Foot of Retainers to Him; as Creatures, which bear some Relation to his Service, and some Way or other contribute to his Good. So that still He is the Centre of the Whole; or, as our incomparable Milton, equally Master of Poetry and Divinity, expresses himself, All Things live for Man. Par. Loft. B. XI. 161;

Mr. Pope, in his Ethic Epiftles, is pleased to explode this Tenet, as the Height of Pride, and a gross Absurdity .- For my Part, I see no Reason for such a Charge. With all Submission to so a superior Genius, it seems very remote from Pride, to be duly sensible of Favours vouchfafed: to contemplate them in all the Extent of their Munificence, and acknowledge them accordingly. I should rather imagine, That to contract their Size, when they are immensely large: to stint their Number, when they are altogether innumerable: that such a Procedure favours more of Infenfibility, than our Hypothesis of Presumption; and has more in it of Ingratitude, than that of Arrogance.

And how can it be deemed an Absurdity, To maintain that Gop gave us a World, for our Poffession; when it is our Duty to believe, That he gave us his only Son, for our Propitiation? Sure, it can be neither difficult, nor extravagant to suppose, That he designed the habitable Globe, with its whole Furniture, for our present Use; fince he with-held not his holy Child Jesus, but freely delivered him up, for our final Salvation.

Upon the Whole; I cannot but conclude, That the Attempt of our famous Poet is neither kind, with regard to his Fellow-creatures-nor grateful, with regard to his Creator-neither is his Scheme, in Fact, true. The Attempt not kind, with regard to Man; because, it robs him of one of the most delightful and ravishing Contemplations imaginable. To consider the great Author of Existence as having me in his Eye, when he formed univerfal Nature; as contriving all Things, with an immediate View, to the Exigencies of my particular State; and making them all in such a Manner, as might be most conducive to my particular Advantage; this must occasion the strongest Satisfactions, whenever I cast a Glance on the Objects that surround me-Not grateful with regard to Goo; because it has the most direct Tendency to diminish our Sense of his Kindness, and by that Means, to throw a Damp lightful! This, has our most indulgent Creator done; in a Manner infinitely surpassing, all we could wish, or imagine.

THE Earth is affigned us for a Dwelling.—The Skies are stretched over us, like a magnificent Canopy, dyed in the purest Azure; and beautified, now with Pictures of floating Silver, now with Colourings of reflected Crimfon.—The Grass is spread under us, as a spacious Carpet; wove with silken Threads of Green, and damasked with Flowers of every Hue.—The Sun, like a golden Lamp, is hung out in the ethereal Vault; and pours his upon our Gratitude. It teaches us to look upon ourselves, as almost loft among a Croud of other Beings, or regarded only with an occasional and incidental Beneficence. Which must certainly weaken the Disposition, and indeed flacken the Ties, to the most adoring Thankfulness .- To which, I apprehend, we may justly add; Neither is the Scheme, in Fact, true. For, not to mention what might be urged from the fure Word of Revelation, this one Argument appears fufficiently conclusive. The World began with Man; the World must cease with Man; consequently, the grand Use, the principal End of the World, is, to subserve the Interest of Man. It is on all Sides agreed, That the Edifice was erected, when Man was to be furnished with an Habitation; and that it will be demolished, when Man has no farther Need of its Accommodations. When he enters into the House not made with Hands, eternal in the Heavens, "the Earth, and all the "Works that are therein, shall be burnt up." From which it feems a very obvious and fair Deduction, That Man is the final Cause of this inferior Creation.

So that I think my Readers and myself, privileged (not to say, on the Principles of Gratitude, obliged) to use those lovely Lines of our Author, with a Propriety and Truth, equal to their Elegance and Beauty;

> For me kind Nature wakes her genial Pow'r, Suckles each Herb, and spreads out ew'ry Flow'r! Annual, for me, the Grape, the Rose renew The Juice nestarcous, and the balmy Dow; For me, the Mine a thousand Treasures brings; For me, Health gushes from a thousand Springs.

Eth. Ep. I. ver. 129.

Effulgence, all the Day, to lighten our Paths.—When Night approaches, the Moon takes up the friendly Office; and the Stars are kindled in twinkling Myriads, to chear the Darkness with their milder Lustre, not disturb our Repose by too intense a Glare.—The Clouds, besides the rich Paintings they hang around the Heavens, act the Part of a shifting Screen; and defend us, by their seasonable Interposition, from the scorching Beams of Summer. May we not also regard them, as the great Watering-pots of the Globe? Which, wafted on the Wings of the Wind, dispense their Moisture * evenly through the universal Garden; and fructify, with their Showers, whatever our Hand plants.—The Fields are our exhauftless Granary.—The Ocean is our vast Reservoir.—The Animals spend their Strength, to dispatch our Business; resign their Cloathing, to replenish our Wardrobe; and furrender their very Lives, to provide for our

* This Circumstance, amidst Abundance of other delicate and edifying Remarks upon the Wonders of Nature, is finely touched in the Philosophical Transactions recorded in the Book of Job, Chap. xxxviii. ver. 25 .- מיפלג לשמם תצלה Who hath divided a Water-course for the Overflowing of Waters?-The Hebrew is fo pregnant and rich with Sense, that no Translation can do it Justice. The following Paraphrase perhaps, may represent the principal Ideas comprehended in the expresfive Original,-Who has branched out, and with admirable Judgment, disposed a Variety of Aquedues; for that immense Collection of Waters, which float in the Sky? Who distributes those pendulous Floods, through all the Borders of the Earth? Distributes them, not in dreadful Cataracts, or promiscuous Gluts of Rain; but in kindly Drops, and refreshing Showers; with as much Regularity and Occonomy, as if they were conveyed by Pipes from a Conduit? To WHOM shall we ascribe that Niceness of Contrivance, which now emits, now restrains them: fometimes drives their humid Train to one Place, fometimes to another: dispenses them to this Soil in larger, to that in smaller Communications: and, in a Word, fo manages the mighty Fluid, that every Spot is Supplied, in exact Proportion to its Wants; none destroyed by an undiffinguishing Deluge?

Tables.—In short, every Element is a Storehouse of Conveniencies; every Season brings us the choicest Productions; all Nature is our Caterer.—And, which is a most endearing Recommendation of these Favours, they are all as lovely, as they are useful. You observe nothing mean or inelegant. All is clad in Beauty's fairest Robe*, and regulated by Proportion's nicest Rule. The whole Scene, exhibits a Fund of Pleasures to the Imagination, at the same Time, that it more than supplies all our Wants †.

Therefore thou art inexcufable, O Man, whosoever thou art, that rebellest against thy Maker. He surrounds thee, with unnumbered Benefits; and follows thee, with an Essusion of the richest, noblest Gifts. He courts thy Assections; He solicits thy Gratitude; by Liberalities which are never intermitted, by a Bounty which knows no Limits—Most Blessed Lord, let this thy Goodness, thy unwearied Goodness, lead us to Repentance. Win us to thyself, Thou Fountain of Felicity, by these sweet Inducements. Draw us to our Duty, Thou God of our Salvation, by these "Cords of Love."

What a living Picture is Here, of the beneficial Effects of Industry! By Industry and Cultivation, this neat Spot is an Image of Eden. Here, is all that can entertain the Eye, or ‡ regale the Smell. Whereas, without

^{*} Perhaps, it was from fuch an Observation, that the Greeks, those critical and refined Judges of Things, expressed the Mundane System by a Word, which fignifies Beauty—2007, 2009.

^{† &}quot;Those several living Creatures, which are made for our Ser"vice or Sustenance, at the same Time either fill the Woods with their "Music, furnish us with Game, or raise pleasing Ideas in us by the "Delightfulness of their Appearance. Fountains, Lakes, and Rivers, " are as refreshing to the Imagination, as to the Soil through which "they pass."

Spect. Vol. V. N° 387.

I Omnis copia narium.

out Cultivation, this sweet Garden had been a desolate Wilderness. Vile Thistles had made it loathsome, and tangling Briars inaccessible. Without Cultivation, it might have been a Nest for Serpents, and the horrid Haunt of venomous Creatures. But, the Spade and Pruning-knife in the Hand of Industry, have improved it into a Sort of Terrestrial Paradise.

How naturally does this lead our Contemplation, to the Advantages which flow from a virtuous Education; and the Miseries, which ensue from the * Neglett of it! -The Mind, without early Instruction, will, in all Probability, become like the "Vineyard of the Sluggard." If left to the Propensities of its own depraved Will; what can we expect, but the most luxuriant Growth of unruly Appetites; which, in Time, will break forth into all Manner of scandalous Irregularities? What?-but that Anger, like a prickly Thorn, arm the Temper with an untractable Moroseness: Peevishness, like a stinging Nettle, render the Conversation irksome and sorbidding: Avarice, like fome choaking Weed, teach the Fingers to gripe, and the Hands to oppress: Revenge, like some poisonous Plant, replete with baneful Juices, rankle in the Breast, and meditate Mischief to its Neighbour: While unbridled Lusts, like Swarms of noisome Insects, taint each rifing Thought; and render " every Imagi-"nation of the Heart, only evil continually."-Such, are the usual Products of savage Nature!-Such, the Furniture of the uncultivated Soul!

WHEREAS, let the Mind be put under the "Nur"ture and Admonition of the Lord:" Let holy Difcipline clear the Soil: Let facred Instructions fow it withthe best Seed: Let Skill and Vigilance dress the rising

Hor. Shoots

^{*} Neglectis urenda filix innascitur agris.

Shoots; direct the young Ideas, how to fpread; the way-ward Passions, how to move.—Then, what a different State of the inner Man, will quickly take place! Charity will breathe her Sweets, and Hope expand her Blof-toms: The personal Virtues display their Graces, and the focial ones their Eruits*: The Sentiments become generous; the Carriage endearing; the Life honourable and useful †.

O! THAT Governors of Families, and Masters of Schools, would watch, with a conscientious Solitude, over the Morals of their tender Charge! What Pity it is, that the advancing Generation should lose these invaluable Endowments, through any Supineness in their Instructors!—See! with what Assiduity, the curious Florist attends his little Nursery! He visits them early and late; furnishes them with the properest Mould; supplies them with seasonable Moisture; guards them from the Ravages of Insects; screens them from the Injuries of the Weather; marks their springing Buds; observes them attentively, through their whole Progres; and

* This Transformation of the Heart, and Renewal of the Life, are represented in Scripture, by Similitudes very nearly allied to the Images used above.—God, by his similitying Spirit, will make the Soul as a watered Garden. Under the Operation of this divine Principle, The Desert shall rejoice, and blossom as a Rose. Wherever it exerts the refining and ennobling Energy, Instead of the Thorn, shall come up the Fir-tree; and, instead of the Briar, the Myrtle-tree, Jerem. xxxi. 12. Isa. xxxv. 1. lv. 13.

† - A teneris assuescere tanti est! VIRG.

The Principles we imbibe, and the Habits we contract, in our early Years, are not Matters of finall Moment, but of the utmost Configuence imaginable. They not only give a transfert or superficial Tincture, to our first Appearance in Life; but most commonly stamp the Form, of our robole stature Conduct, and even of our etanal State.

^{— — —} υ γας μικρον διαφερει, το είως η είως ειθυς εκ νεων εθιζεσθαί, αλλα σαμπολυ, μαλλον δε το σαν. ΑRISTOT.

never intermits his Anxiety, till he beholds them blown into full Perfection.—And shall a Range of painted Leaves, which flourish To-day, and To-morrow fall to the Ground—Shall these be tended, with more zealous Application, than the exalted Faculties of an immortal Soul!

YET trust not in Cultivation alone. It is the Blessing of the Almighty Husbandman, which imparts Success to such Labours of Love. If God "feal up the Bottles" of Heaven," and command the Clouds to with-hold their Fatness, the best manured Plot becomes a barren Desart. And if HE restrain the Dew of his Heavenly Benediction, all human Endeavours miscarry; the rational Plantation languishes; our most pregnant Hopes, from Youths of the most promising Genius, prove abortive. Their Root will be as Rottenness, and their Blossom will go up as Dust *.—Therefore, let Parents plant; let Tutors water; but let both look up to the Father of Spirits, for the desired Increase.

On every Side, I espy several budding Flowers. As yet, they are like Bales of Cloth from the Packer's Warehouse. Each is wrapt within a strong Enclosure, and its Contents are tied together by the sirmest Bandages. So that all their Beauties lie concealed, and all their Sweets are locked up.—Just such is the niggardly Wretch; whose Aims are all turned inward, and meanly terminated upon Himself. Who makes his own private Interests, or personal Pleasures, the sole Centre of his Designs, and the scanty Circumsterence of his Actions.

Ere long, the fearching Beams will open these filken Folds, and draw them into a graceful Expansion. Then, what a lovely Blush will glow in their Cheeks; and what a balmy Odour exhale from their Bosoms!—So, when Divine Grace shines upon the Mind, even the Churl becomes bountiful. The Heart of Stone is taken away; and a Heart of Flesh, a Heart susceptible of the softest, most compassionate Emotions, is introduced in its Stead. O! how sweetly do the social Affections dilate themselves, under so benign an Instruence! Just like these disclosing Gems, under the powerful Eye of Day. The tender Regards, are no longer confined to a single Object; but extend themselves into a generous Concern for Mankind, and shed liberal Resreshments on all within their Reach *.

Arise then, Thou Sun of Righteousness; arise, with Healing under thy Wings; and transsuse thy gentle, but penetrating Ray, through all our intellectual Powers. Inlarge every narrow Disposition, and fill us with a disfusive Benevolence. Make Room in our Breasts for the whole human Race; and teach us to love all our Fellow-creatures, for their amiable Creator's Sake. May we be pleased with their Excellencies, and rejoice in their Happiness; but feel their Miseries as our own, and, with a Brother's Sympathy, hasten to relieve them!

DISPOSED at proper Distances, I observe a Range of strong and feately Stalks. They stand like Towers, along

the

^{*} The Prophet, describing the charitable Temper, very beautifully says; If iton draw out thy Soul to the Hungry!—This, I think may not improperly be illustrated by the Circumstances observed above. The opening of those Buds into a large and extensive Spread, is a pretty Pourtrait of the Amplitude of a generous Heart; which cannot shut up its Compassion, or remain unconcerned at any human Calamity. The Freeness and Copiousness, with which the expanded Flowers are continually pouring out their choicest Essences, may represent the various Acts of an unwearied Liberality; together with those endearing Words, and that cordial Assection, which embalm, as it were, a Gift; double its Value; and constitute what the sacred Penman stiles, Drawing out the Soul. The Deprempser is Animam tuam. Is a lvii. 10.

the Walls of a fortified City; or rise like lofty Spires, amidst the Group of Houses. They part, at the Top, into several pensile spiky Pods. From each of which, We shall soon see a fine Figure displaying itself, rounded into a Form, which constitutes a perfect Circle; spread wide open, into the most frank and communicative Air; and tinged with the Colour, which is so peculiarly captivating to the Miser's Eye.

But the Property I chiefly admire, is its passionate Fondness for the Sun. When the Evening Shades take place, the poor Flower droops, and folds up its Leaves. It mourns all the long Night, and pines amidst the Gloom, like some forlorn Lover, banished from the Object of his Affections. No sooner does Providence open "the Eyelids of the Morning," but it meets * and welcomes the returning Light; courts and caresses it, all the Day; nor ever loses Sight of the resulgent Charmer, so long as he continues above the Horizon!—In the Morning, you may perceive it, presenting a golden Bosom to the East; at Noon it points upward, to the middle Sky; in the Evening sollows the same attractive Influence to the West.

Surfly, Nature is a Book, and every Page rich with facred Hints. To an attentive Mind, the Garden turns Preacher; and its blooming Tenants, are so many lively Sermons. What an engaging Pattern, and what an excellent Lesson, have we here!—So, let the Redeemed of the Lord look unto Jesus; and be conformed to their Beloved. Let us all be Heliotropes (if I may use the Expression) to the Sun of Righteousness. Let our Passions rise and fall; take this Course or that; as his

OVID.

^{* —} Illa fuum, quamvis Radice tenetur, Vartitur ad Solom.—

Word determines, as his holy Example guides. Let us be so accommodated, both to his commanding and providential Will, as the Wax is turned to the imprinted Seal; or, as the Aspect of this enamoured Flower, to the splendid Star, which creates our Day.

In every Enjoyment, O thou watchful Christian, look unto Jesus; receive it as proceeding from his Love, and purchased by his Agonies*.—In every Tribulation look unto Jesus; mark his gracious Hand, managing the Scourge, or mingling the bitter Cup; attempering it to a proper Degree of Severity; adjusting the Time of its Continuance; and ready to make these seeming Disasters, productive of real Good.—In every Infirmity and Failing, look unto Jesus, thy merciful High-Priest; pleading his atoning Blood, and making Intercession for Transgressors.—In every Prayer look unto Jesus, thy prevailing Advocate; recommending thy Devotions, and " bearing the Iniquity of thy holy Things †."-In every Temptation look unto Jesus, the Author of thy Strength, and Captain of thy Salvation; who alone is able to lift up the Hands which hang down, to invigorate the enfeebled Knees, and make thee more than Conqueror over all thy Enemies.—But especially, when the Hour of thy Departure approaches; when "thy Flesh and thy "Heart fail;" when all the Springs of Life are irreparably breaking; then look unto Jesus with a believing Eye 1. Like expiring Stephen, behold him standing at Warts.

^{*} He funk beneath our heavy Woes, To raise us to his Throne; There's not a Gift his Hand bestow; But cost his Heart a Groan.

⁺ Exod. xxviii. 38.

[‡] Look unto ME, and be ye saved, all the Ends of the Earth. Isa, xlv. 22.

the Right-hand of God, on purpose to succour his People, in this their last Extremity. Yes, my Christian Friend; when thy Journey through Life is finished, and thou art arrived on the very Verge of Mortality; when thou art just launching out into the invisible World, and all before thee is vast Eternity; Then, O then, be sure to look steelfastly unto Jesus! "See by Faith the "Lord's Christ." View him, as the only Way*, to the everlasting Mansions; as the only Door †, to the Abodes of Bliss.

YONDER Tree, which faces the South, has fomething too remarkable, to pass without Observation.—Like the fruitful, through feeble Vine, She brings forth a large Family of Branches: but, unable to support them herfelf, commits them to the Tuition of a sunny Wall. As yet the tender Twigs have scarce gemmed their suture Blossoms. However, I may anticipate the well-known Productions; and picture to myself the Passion-Flower. Which will, in due Time, with a long and copious Succession, adorn the Boughs.

I HAVE read, in a Latin Author, of Flowers inscribed with the Names of Kings ‡: but here is One, imblazoned with the Marks of the bleeding Prince of Life. I read, in the inspired Writings, of Apostolic Men; who bore about in their Bodies, the Dying of the Lord Jesus §: but, here is a blooming Religioso, that carries apparent Memorials of the same tremendous and fatal Catastrophe.—Who would have expected to find such a Tragedy of Woe, exhibited in a Collection of the most delicate Delights? Or to see Calvary's horrid Scene, pourtrayed on the softest Ornaments of the Garden?—Is Nature then actuated by the noble Ambition, of paying commemorative Honours, to her agonizing Sovereign? Is She kindly officious to remind sorgetful Mortals, of that Miracle of Mercy; which it is their Duty to contemplate, and their Happiness to believe?—Or, is a sportive Imagination my Interpreter; and all the supposed Resemblance, no more than the precarious Gloss of Fancy? Be it so: yet even Fancy has her Merit, when she sets forth, in such pleasing Imagery, the crucified Jesus. Nor shall I resuse a willing Regard, to Imagination herself; when she employs her creative Powers, to revive the Sense of such unparalleled Love, and prompt my Gratitude to so divine a Friend.

^{*} John xiv. 6. + John x. 9.

^{§ 2} Cor. iv. 10.

THAT spiral Tendril, arising from the Bottom of the Stalk; is it a Representation of the Scourge, which lashed the Redeemer's unspotted Flesh; and inslicted those Stripes, by which our Souls are healed? Or, is it twifted for the Cord, which bound his Hands in painful and ignominious Confinement; those beneficent Hands, which were inceffantly stretched out to unloose the heavy Burdens, and to impart Bleffings of every choice Kind?-Behold the Nails, which were drenched in his facred Veins, and riveted his Feet to the accurled Tree: those beautiful Feet *, which always went about doing Good; and travelled far and near, to spread the glad Tidings of everlasting Salvation.—See the Hammer ponderous and massy, which drove the rugged Irons through the shivering Nerves; and forced a Passage for those dreadful Wedges, between the dislocated Bones.

^{*} How beautiful are the Feet of him that bringeth good Tidings, that publisheth Peace, that bringeth good Tidings of Good, that publisheth Salvation! Isa. III. 7.

-View the Thorns, which incircled our Royal Mafter's Brow, and that their keen afflictive Points into his bleffed Head. O the Smart! the racking Smart! when, instead of the triumphal Laurel, or the odoriserous Garland, that pungent and ragged Wreath, was planted on the meek Messiah's Forehead! When violent and barbarous Blows of the ftrong Eastern Cane *, struck the prickly Crown, and fixed every Thorn deep in his throbbing Temples +. There stand the Disciples, ranged in the green Impalement; and forming a Circle, round the Instruments of their great Commander's Death, They appear like fo many faithful Adherents, who breathe a gallant Resolution, either of desending their LORD to the last Extremity, or of dropping honourably by his Side. But did they give such Proofs of Zeal and Fidelity in their Conduct, as their steady Posture, and determined Aspect, seem to promise? Alas! what is all human Firmness, when destitute of Succours from —tremblingly alive all o'er, Must snart and agonize at ev'ry Pore.

^{*} They reck the Reed, fays the facred Historian, and smote Him on the Head: "and so, as it were, nailed down the Thorns into his Fore- head and Temple's, and occasioned thereby exquisite Pain, as well as a great Essuion of Blood." Family Expositor, Vol. II. Sect. 188.—"It is most probable, adds the same judicious Critic, this was a Walk- ing-Staff, which they put into his Hand as a Sceptre; for a Blow with a slight Reed would scarce have been felt, or have deserved a "Mention in a Detail of such dreadful Susserings."

[†] The Smart, attending this unparalleled Piece of Contempt and Barbarity, must be inexpressibly sewere: not only, on account of the many painful Punctures made in the Flesh; but principally, because the Periosicum, an exquisitely sensible Tegument of the Bones; lying, in those Parts, very near the external Skin; must receive a Multitude of terrible Wounds. The Anguish of which, could not fail of being inflamed to an Excess of Rage, by the Continuance of so many thorny Lancets, in that extremely tender Membrane; which in such a Case, above, but an expiring Vapour? What is every Saint, if unsupported by powerful Grace, but an abandoned Traitor?—Observe the Glory, define ated in double Rays, grand with imperial Purple, and rich with æthereal Blue. But ah! how incapable are Threads, though spun by Summer's finest Hand; though dyed in Snows, or dipped in Heaven; to display the immaculate Excellency of his human, or the inestable Majesty of his Divine Nature! Compared with these sublime Perfections, the most vivid Assemblage of Colours, sades into an unmeaning Flatness; the most charming Effects of Light and Shade, are not only mere Daubings, but an absolute Blank.

Among all the Beauties, which shine in funny Robes, and fip the Silver Dews; this, I think, has the noblest Import, if not the finest Presence. Were they all in Review, and expect the Award of Superiority from my Decision: I should not hesitate a Moment. Be the Prize affigned to this amiable Candidate; which has so eminently distinguished, and so highly dignified herself by bearing fuch a remarkable Resemblance to "The righte-" ous Branch; The Plant of Renown *." While Others appoint it a Place in the Parterre; I would transplant the Passion-Flower, or rather transfer its facred Significancy, to my Heart. There let it bloom, both in Summer and in Winter; bloom, in the most impressive Characters, and with an undecaying Lustre. That I also may wear-wear on my very Soul, the Traces of Im-MANUEL; pierced for my Sins, and bruised for my Transgressions. That I also may be crucified with CHRIST +; at least in penitential Remorfe, and affectionate Sympathy. That I may know the Fellowship of bis Sufferings *; and feel all my evil Affections, wounded by his Agonies, mortified by his Death.

^{*} So the bleffed Jesus is described, Jerem. xxiii. 5. Ezek. xxxiv. 29. † Gal. ii. 20.

THERE is another Subject of the verdant Kingdom. which, on Account of its very uncommon Qualities, demands my particular Notice. One, fo extremely diffident in her Disposition, and delicate in her Constiturion: that She dares not venture herfelf abroad in the open Air: but is nurfed up in the Warmth of a Hot-bed, and lives cioistered in the Cells of a Green-bouse. But, the most curious Peculiarity is, That of all her kindred Species, she alone partakes of perceptive Life; at least advances nearest to this more exalted State of Being; and may be looked upon as the Link, which connects the animal and the vegetable World. A Stranger, observing her Motions, would almost be induced to fuspect; that she is endued with some inferior Degrees of Consciousness and Caution. For, if You offer to handle this Senfitive Plant, she immediately takes an Alarm; haftily contracts her Fibres; and, like a Person under Apprehensions of Violence, withdraws from your Finger, in a Kind of precipitate Diforder. Perhaps, the Beauty of her Aspect might be fullied, or the Niceness of her Texture discomposed, by the human Touch. Therefore, like a coy Virgin, she recedes from all unbecoming Familiarities; and will admit no fuch improper, if not pernicious, Freedoms.

WHATEVER be the Cause of this unusual Effect; it suggests an instructive Admonition to the Christian. Such should be our apprehensive timorous Care, with Regard to Sin; and all, even the most distant, Approaches of Vice. So should we avoid the very Appearance of Evil, and stand aloof from every Occasion of falling.—If Sinners entice; if forbidden Pleasures tempt; or if Opportunity beckon, with the Gain of Injustice in her Hand: O! turn from the gilded Snare; touch not the beauteous Bane; but fly, fly with Haste, fly without any Delay, from the bewitching Ruin .- Does Anger draw near with her lighted Torch, to kindle the Flame of Resentment in our Breasts? Does Flattery ply our Ears, with her inchanting and intoxicating Whifpers? Would Discontent lay her leaden Hand upon our Temper, and mould into our Minds her four Leaven; in order to make Us a Burden to ourselves, and unamiable to Others? Inftantly let us divert our Attention from the dangerous Objects; and not so much endeavour to antidote, as to shun, the moral Contagion. Let us revolve in our Meditations, that wonderful Meekness of our distressed Master; which, amidst the most abusive and provoking Infults, maintained an uniform Tenour of unshaken Serenity. Let us contemplate that prodigious Humiliation; which brought Him, from an infinite Height above all Worlds, to make his Bed in the Duft of Death. Let us footh our jarring, our uneasy Passions, with the Remembrance of that Chearfulness and Resigna-tion; which rendered him, in the deepest Poverty, unfeignedly thankful; and, under the heaviest Tribulations, most submissively patient.

HARBOUR not, on any Confideration, the Betrayer of your Virtue. Be deaf, inflexibly deaf, to every beguiling Solicitation. If it obtrude into the unguarded Heart; give it Entertainment, no, not for a Moment. To parley with the Enemy, is to open a Door for Destruction. Our Sasety consists in Flight: and, in this Case, Suspicion is the truest Prudence; Fear, the greatest Bravery.—Play not on the Brink of the Precipice. Flutter not round the Edges of the Flame. Dally not with the Stings of Death. But reject, with a becoming Mixture of Solicitude and Abhorrence, the very first Infiniations of Iniquity: as cautiously, as the facting Seee thrinks even from the softest Hand; as constantly, as this fealers Flint recoils at the approaching Touch*.

Not long ago, these curious Productions of the Spring, were crutic and misschapen Reces. Had we opened the Earth, and beheld them in their Seed, how uncouth and contemptible had their Appearance been! But now, they are the Boast of Nature; the Delight of the Sons of Men. finished Patterns for Enamelling and Embroidery: ourthining even the happiest Strokes of the Pencil. They are taught to bloom, but with a very interior Lustre †, in the richest Tapestries, and

The Prophet I high, in an elegant and lively Description of the pright Moe, says He bound in House from healing of Bribes; and, I may add, from practiting any Kind of Iniquity. The Image, exceedingly beautiful, and equally expressive, both illustrates and enforces the Doctrine of this whole Section.—Season in Hand; just as a Perform would do, who happens to have having Coal fall into his Lap, or some a manual Comment to consider, or to debate with Himself the Expediency of the Taing. He would instantly sing off the periodous Insumbrance: instantly endeavour to disengage Himself, from the chinging Milchief.—In anxill, 15.

I have represented the Danger. of not extinguishing immediately the very first Sparks of Temperation, in a Variety of Views. Because a proper Behaviour, in this Conjuncture, is of such vari Importance to the Parky, the Safety, and the Comfort of our Minds.—Because, I had the Renal Manalist in my Eye; who, deterring his Pupils from the Path of the Wicked, cries; with an Air of deep Concern, and in the Language of vehement Importunity, tries; Maridin; paji nu by it; turn from n; and put must. How frongly is the Counsel arged, by being to frequently repeated: in such a remarkable Diversity of concile and thropt, consequently of forcible and preffing Admonitions! Prov. iv. 15.

[†] The Cowflip fmiles in heighter Yellow dreit,
Than that which wells the nabil Virgin's Breaft:
A fairer Red stands blufting in the Rose,
Than that which on the Bridegroom's Vestment flows.
Parea's Sell.

most magnificent Silks. Art never attempts to equal their incomparable Elegancies; but places all her Merit, in copying after these delicate Originals. Even those, who glitter in Silver, or whose Cloathing is of wrought Gold; are desirous to borrow additional Ornaments, from a Sprig of Jessamine, or a little Assemblage of Pinks.

What a fine Idea may we form, from hence, of the Rejurration of the Just, and the State of their reanimated Bodies! As the Roots even of our choicest Flowers, when deposited in the Ground, are rude and ungraceful; but, when they foring up into blooming Life, are most elegant and splendid: io, the Flesh of a Saint, when committed to the Duk, alas! what is it? A Heap of Corruption; a Mais of nutrening Clay. But, when it obeys the great Arthungel's Call, and starts into a new Existence; what an astenishing Change enfues! What a most ennobling Improvement takes place!—That which was fown in Weakneys, is reifed in all the Vivacity of Power. That which was fown in Defermity, is raised in the Bloom of celestial Beauty. Exalted, refined, and glorified, it will shine " as the "Brightness of the Firmament," when it darts the inimitable Blue, through the Fleeces-the faowy Fleeces of fome cleaving Cloud.

FEAR not, then, thou faithful Christian; fear not, at the appointed Time, to deftend into the Tomb. Thy Scal thou mayeft trust with thy omnipotent Redeemer, who is Load of the unseen World; "Who has the "Keys of Hell, and of Death." Most safely mayest thou trust thy better Part, in those beneficent Hands, which were pierced with Nails, and fastened to the ignominious Tree, for thy Salvanian.—With regard to thy earthly Tubernacle, be not dismayed. It is taken down, only to be rebuilt upon a diviner Plan, and in a more heavenly heavenly Form. If it retires into the Shadow of Death, and lies immured in the Gloom of the Grave; it is only to return, from a short Confinement, to endless Liberty. If it falls into Dissolution, it is in order to rise more illustrious from its Ruins; and wear an infinitely brighter Face of Perfection, and of Glory.

HAVING, now, made my Panegyric; let me, next, take up a Lamentation, for these loveliest Productions of the vegetable World.—For, I foresee their approaching Doom. Yet a little while, and all these pleasing Scenes vanish. Yet a little while, and all the Sweets of the breathing, all the Beauties of the blooming Spring, are no more. Every one of these amiable Forms, must be fhriveled to Deformity, and trodden to the Earth.-Significant Refemblance this, of all created Beauty. All Flesh is Grass; like the green Herbage, liable and prone to fade. Nay, all the Goodline's thereof, its finest Accomplishments and what the World universally admires, is as the Flower of the Field *; which loses its Glos, decays and perifhes, more speedily than the Grass itfelf.—Behold then, ye brightest among the Daughters of Eve; behold yourselves, in this Glass. Charms of your Person eclipsed, by the Lustre of these little Flowers; and the Frailty of your State represented, † by their transient Glories. A Fever may scorch those

* Ifa. xl. 6.

† Και το godor καλον εςι, και ο χρονος αυθο μαραιπει. Και το ιον καλον εςιν εν ειαρι, κή ταχυ γηρα. Αυκον το κρινον εςι, μαραινείαι ανικα απάθη. Α δε χιων λευκα, και τακείαι ανικα απαχθη. Και καλλος καλον εςι το απαιδικον, αλλ' αλιγον ζη.

The Reader will excuse me, if I imitate, rather than translate, these Lines from Theocritus. If I vary one Image, add another, and give a new Turn to the whole.

those polished Veins; a Consumption may emaciate the dimpling Cheeks; and a Load of unexpected Sorrows, depress those lively Spirits. Or should these Disasters, in Pity, spare the tender Frame; yet Age, inexorable Age and Wrinkles, will assuredly come at last; will wither all the fine Features, and blast every sprightly Grace.

Then, ye Fair, when those sparkling Eyes are darkened, and sink in their Orbs; when they are rolling in Agonies, or swimming in Death; How will you sustain the Affliction? How will you repair the Loss?—Apply your Thoughts to Religion. Attend to the One Thing needful. Believe in, and imitate, the blessed Jesus.

When Snows descend, and robe the Fields In Winter's bright Array; Touch'd by the Sun, the Lustre fades,
And weeps itself away.

When Spring appears; when Violets blow, And shed a rich Persume; How soon the Fragrance breathes its last! How short-liv'd is the Bloom!

Fresh in the Morn, the Summer Rose Hangs withering ere 'tis Noon; We scarce enjoy the balmy Gift, But mourn the Pleasure gone.

With gliding Fire, an Evening Star Streaks the Autumnal Skies; Shook from the Sphere, it darts away, And, in an Instant, dies.

Such are the Charms, that flush the Cheek, And sparkle in the Eye: So, from the lovely finished Form The transient Graces sly.

To this the Seasons, as they roll,
Their Attestation bring:
They warn the Fair; their ev'ry Round
Confirms the Truth I sing.

Then

Then shall your Souls mount up to the Realms of Happiness; when the well proportioned Clay, is mingling with its mean Original. The Light of God's Counternance will irradiate, with matchless and consummate Perfection, all their exalted Faculties. Cleansed intirely from every Dreg of Corruption, like some unfulled Mirror, they will reflect the complete Image of their Creator's Holiness.—O! that you would thus dress your Minds, and prepare for the immortal State! Then, from shining among your Fellow-creatures on Earth; you shall be translated, to shine around the Throne of God. Then, from being the Sweeteners of our Life, and the Delight of our Eyes, here below; you shall pass, by an easy Transition, into Angels of Light; and become, "an everlasting Excellency, the Joy of all Generations."

YES; Ye flowery Nations, Ye must all decay.—Yonder Lily, that looks like the Queen of the gay Creation—See, how gracefully it erects its majestic Head! What an Air of Dignity and Grandeur ennobles its Aspect! For elevated Mien, as well as for incomparable Lustre, justly may it be preferred to the magnificent Monarch of the East*. But, all stately and charming as it is, it will hardly survive, a few more Days. That unspotted Whiteness, must quickly be tarnished; and the snowy Form, defiled in the Dust.

As the Lily pleases, with the noble Simplicity of its Appearance; the Tulip is admired, for the Gaiety and Multiplicity of its Colours. Never was Cup, either painted, or enamelled, with such a Prosusion of Dyes. Its Tinges are so glowing; its Contrasts so strong; and the Arrangement of them both, so elegant and artful!

—'Twas sately the Pride of the Border, and the reigning Beauty of the delightful Season. As exquisitely fine as the Rainbow, and almost as extremely transient. It spread, for a little Moment, its glittering Plumage; but has, now, laid all its variegated and superior Honours down. Those radiant Stripes are blended, alas! rudely blended with common Mould.

To a graceful Shape, and blooming Complexion, the Rose adds the most agreeable Persume. Our Nostrils make it repeated Vifits, and are never weary of drinking in its Sweets. A Fragrance, fo peculiarly rich and reviving, transpires from its opening Tusts; that every one covets its Acquaintance. How have I feen even the accomplished Chariffa, for whom so many Votaries languish, fondly caressing this little Flower! That lovely Bosom, which is the Seat of Innocence and Virtue; whose least Excellency it is, to rival the Delicacy of the purest Snows; among a thousand Charms of its own, thinks it possible to adopt another from the Damask Rose-bud.—Yet, even this universal Favourite must fail. Its native Balm cannot preserve it from Putrefaction. Soon, toon, must it refign all those endearing Qualities; and hang neglected on its Stem, or drop despised to the Ground.

ONE could wish, methinks, these most amiable of the inanimate Race, a longer Existence: But in vain. They fade, almost as soon as they flourish. Within less than a Month, their Glories are extinct. Let the Sun take a sew more Journeys through the Sky; then visit this inchanting Walk; and you will find nothing, but a wretched Wilderness of ragged or naked Stalks.—But (my Soul exults in the Thought) the Garment of celestial Glory, which shall ere long array the reanimated Body, will never wax old. The illustrious Robes of a Saviour's consummate Righteousness, which even now adorn the justified Spirit, are incorruptible and immortal. No Moth can corrode their Texture; no Number of Ages fully their Brightness. The Light of Day may be quenched, and all the Stars sink in Obscurity; but, the Honours of "Just Men made perfect," are subject to no Diminution. Inextinguishable and unfading, is the Lustre of their Crown.

YES; Te flowery Nations, Te must all decay.-Winter, like some enraged and irrefistible Conqueror, that carries Fire and Sword, where-ever he advances: that demolishes Towns; depopulates Countries; spreads Slaughter and Defolation, on every Side—So, just fo, will Winter, with his favage and unrelenting Blafts, invade this beautiful Prospect. The Storms are gathering, and the Tempests mustering their Rage, to fall upon the Vegetable Kingdoms. They will ravage through the Dominions of Nature; and plunder her Riches, and lay waste her Charms .- Then, ye Trees, must ye stand stript of your verdant Apparel; and, ye Fields, be spoiled of vour waving Treasures. Then the Earth, disrobed of all her gay Attire, must sit in Sables, like a disconsolate Widow. The Sun too, who now rides in Triumph round the World, and scatters Gasety from his radiant Eve, will then look faintly from the Windows of the South; and, casting a short Glance on our dejected World, will leave us to the uncomfortable Gloom of tedious Nights.—Then, these pretty Choristers of the Air, will chant no more to the gentle Gales. The Lark, the Linnet, and all the feathered Songsters, abandon their Notes, and indulge their Woes. The Harmony of the Woods is at an End; and Silence, (unless it be interrupted by howling Winds) a fullen Silence, fits brooding upon the Boughs; which are now made vocal, by a thousand warbling Throats.

BUT (sweet Recollection! ravishing Expectation!) the Songs of Saints in Light, never admit a Paule for Sadness.

Sadness. All Heaven will resound with the Melody of their Gratitude; and all Eternity echo to their triumphant Acclamations. The Hallehijahs of that World; and the harmonious Joy of its Inhabitants; will be as lasting, as the Divine Perfections, they celebrate—Come then, Holy Love, and tune my Heart; descend, Celestial Fire, and touch my Tongue; that I may stand ready to strike up, and bear my Part, in that great Hosanna, that everlatting Hymn.

TES; yes, Ye flowery Nations, Ye must all decay.—And, indeed, could you add the Strength of an Oak, or the Stability of a Pyramid*, to all the Delicacy of your Texture; yet short, exceeding short, even then, would your Duration be. For Isee, that all Things come to an End. The Pillars of Nature are tottering. The Foundations of the round World are falling away. "The Heam vens themselves wax old like a Garment."—But, amidst these Views of general Ruin, Here is our Refuge; This is our Consolation; We know, that our Redeemer liveth. Thy Years, blessed Jesus, shall not fail. From Ever-

* I know not any Performance, in which the transitory Nature, of these most durable Monuments of human Grandeur, is hinted with such a modest Air of Instruction; or their hideous Ruin described, in such a Pomp of pleasing Horror; as in a small, but solemn, picturesque, and majestic Poem, intitled—The Ruins of Rome, written by the Rev. Mr. Dyer. Whom the Reader (if he has the Pleasure of perusing that beautiful Piece) will easily perceive, to have taken his Draughts from the Originals themselves; as nothing but the Sight of those magnificent Remains, could have inspired his Lines with such Vivacity.—As a Specimen of the Work, and a Consirmation of the Remark suggested above, I take Leave to transcribe the following Passage:

The Pilgrim oft,
At dead of Night, mid his Oraison hears
Ashast the Voice of Time, disparting Tow'rs,
Tumbling all precipitate down dashed,
Rattling around, loud thund'ring to the Moon.

lasting to Everlasting, Thou art still the same; the same most excellent and adorable Person; the same omnipotent and faithful Friend; the same all-sufficient and inestimable Portion. O! may we but partake of thy Meries; be fanctified by thy Grace; and received into thy Glory!—Then perifh, if ye will, all inferior Delights. Let all that is fplendid in the Skies, expire; and all that is amiable in Nature, be expunged. Let the whole Extent of Creation, be turned again into one undiffinguishable Void; one univerfal Blank .- Yet, if Gon be ours, we shall have enough. If God be ours, we shall have all, and abound *. All that our Circumstances can want, or our Wishes crave, to make us inconceivably bleffed and happy. Bleffed and happy, not only through this little Interval of Time, but through the unmeasureable Revolutions of Eternity.

The Sun is, now, come forth in his Strength; and beats fiercely, upon my throbbing Pulse.—Let me retire to yonder inviting Arbour. There, the Woodbines retain the lucid Drop; there, the Jessamines, which line the verdant Alcove, are still impearled, and deliciously wet with Dews.—Welcome, ye refreshing Shades! I feel, I feel, your chearing Insluence. My languid Spirits revive; the slackened Sinews are new strung; and Life bounds brisker, through all her crimson Channels.

RECLINED on this mossly Couch; and surrounded by this fragrant Coldness; let me renew my Aspirations, to the ever-present Deity. Here, let me remember, and imitate, the pious Augustine, and his Mother Monica. Who, being engaged in Discourse on the Beauties of the visible Creation; rose, by these Ladders, to the Glories of the invisible State. Till they were inspired with the most affecting Sense, of their supereminent Excellency; and actuated with the most ardent Breathings, after their sull Enjoyment. Insomuch, that they were almost rapt up into the Bliss they contemplated; and scarce "knew whe-" ther they were in the Body, or out of the Body."

^{*} His Hand the good Man fastens on the Skies, And bids Earth roll, nor seels the idle Whirl.

WHEN Tempests toss the Ocean: when plaintive Signals of Distress, are heard from the bellowing Deep; and melancholy Tokens of Shipwreck, come floating on the foaming Surge; then, how delightful to stand fafe on Shore, and hug one's felf in confcious Security *! -When a Glut of Waters, bursts from some mighty Torrent; rushes headlong over all the neighbouring Plains; fweeps away the helplefs Cattle; and drives the affrighted Shepherd from his Hut: then, from the Top of a distant Eminence, to descry the Danger, we need not fear; how pleasing!—Such, methinks, is my pre-fent Situation. For, now, the Sun blazes from on high: The Air glows with his Fire: The Fields are rent with Chinks: The Roads are fcorched to Duft: The Woods feem to contract a fickly Aspect, and a russet Hue: The Traveller, broiled as he rides, hastens to his Inn, and intermits his Journey: The Labourer, bathed in Sweat, drops the Scythe, and defists from his Work: The Cattle flee to fome shady Covert, or else pant and tofs under the burning Noon. Even the stubborn Rock, simit with the piercing Beams, is ready to cleave. All Things languish, beneath the dazzling Deluge-While I fhall enjoy a cool Hour, and calm Reflection; amidst the Gloom of this bowery Recess, which scarce admits one Speck of Sunshine.

^{*} As Lucretius gave the Hint for these Observations; so He assigns the Reason of the Pleasure specified. It arises, not from the Consideration of Another's Miscry; this would argue the rankest Malevolence: but from the agreeable Contemplation of our oron personal Sasity. Which, while We view Circumstances, that are permicious to Others, but harmless to Ourselves, is not a little heightened by the Contrast. Suave Mari magno, &c.

Thus, may both the Flock, and their Shepherd, dwell beneath the Defence of the Most High, and abide under the Shadow of the Almighty*. Then, though † the Pestilence walketh in Darkness, and the Sickness destroyeth at Noon-day; though Thousands fall beside us, and ten Thousands at our Right-hand; we need sear no Evil. Either, the destroying Angel shall pass over our Houses; or else, He shall dispense the Corrections of a Friend, not the Scourges of an Enemy; which, instead of hurting us, shall work for our Good.—Then, though Profaneness and Insidelity, far more malignant Evils, breathe deadly Contagion, and taint the Morals of Multitudes around us; yet, if the great Father of Spirits "hide "us in the Hollow of his Hand," we shall hold fast our Integrity, and be saithful unto Death.

LET then, dearest Lord, O! let thy Servant, and the People committed to his Care, be received into thy Protection. Let us take Sanctuary under that Tree of Life, erected in thy ignominious Cross. Let us fly for Sasety to that City of Refuge, opened in thy bleeding Wounds. These shall be a facred Hiding-place, not to be pierced by the Flames of Divine Wrath, or the fiery Darts of Temptation. Thy dying Merits, and persect Obedience, shall be to our Souls, as Rivers of Water in a dry Place, or as the Shadow of a great Rock in a weary Land ‡.

But most of all, in that last tremendous Day, when the Heavens are rent asunder, and wrapped up like a ^{*} Psalm xci. 1.

[†] This was written, when a very infectious and mortal Distemper, raged in the Neighbourhood.

[‡] Ifa. xxxii. 2.

Scroll: when thy Almighty Arm shall arrest the Sun in his Career, and dash to Pieces the Structure of the Universe: when the Dead, both Small and Great, shall be gathered before the Throne of thy Glory; and the Fates of all Mankind, hang on the very Point of a final irreversible Decision:—Then, blessed Jesus, let us be owned by Thee, and we shall not be assaured; defended by Thee, and we shall not be assaured; may we, at that awful, that unutterably important Juncture, be covered with the Wings of thy Redeeming Love; and we shall behold all the horrible Convulsions of expiring Nature, with Composure, with Comfort! We shall even welcome the Dissolution of all Things as the Times of Refreshing from the Presence of the Lord*.

THERE are, I perceive, who still attend the Flowers; and, in Defiance of the Sun, ply their Work on every expanded Blossom. The Bees I mean. That Nation of Chymists! To whom Nature has communicated the rare and valuable Secret, of enriching themselves, without impoverishing others. Who extract the most delicious Syrup, from every fragrant Herb; without wounding its Substance, or diminishing its Odours.—I take the more Notice of these ingenious Operators; because, I would willingly make them my Pattern†. While the Buttersly, slutters her painted Wings; and sips a little fantastic Delight, only for the present Moment, While the gloomy Spider, worse than idly bussed, is preparing his insidious Nets for Destruction; or sucking Venom, even from the most wholesome Plants—

* Acts iii. 19.

† Ego ațis matinæ More modoque Grata carpentis thyma.

Hor.

This frugal Community, are wifely employed in providing for Futurity; and collecting a copious Stock of the most balmy Treasures.—And O! might these Meditations sink into my Soul! Would the God, who suggested each heavenly Thought; vouchfase to convert it, into an established Principle; to determine all my Inclinations, and regulate my whole Conduct! I should, then, gather Advantages from the same blooming Objects; more precious than your golden Stores, ye industrious Artists. I also should go home, laden with the richest Sweets, and the noblest Speils; though I crop not a Leas, nor call a single Flower my own.

HERE I behold, affembled in one View, almost all the various Beauties, which have been feverally entertaining my Imagination. The Viftas, struck through an ancient Wood, or formed by Rows of venerable Elms; conducting the Spectator's Observations, to some remarkable Object; or leading the Traveller's Footsteps, to this delightful Seat:—The Walls, enriched with Fruit-trees, and faced with a Covering of their leafy Extensions; I should rather have faid, hung with different Pieces of Nature's noblest Tapestry:—The Walks, neatly shorn, and lined with Verdure; or finely smoothed, and coated with Gravel:—The Alleys, arched with Shades, to embower our Noon-tide Repose; or thrown open for the free Accession of Air, to invite us to our Evening Recreation:—The decent Edgings of Box, which inclose, like a plain Selvage, each beautiful Compartment, and its splendid Figures:—The shapely Evergreens, and flowering Shrubs; which strike the Eye, and appear with peculiar Dignity, in this distant Situation:—
The Bajon, with its crystal Fount, floating in the Centre; and diffusing an agreeable Freshness, through the Whole: The Waters, falling from a remote Cascade; and gently

gently murmuring, as they flow along the Pebbles; Thefe, added to the reft; and all fo disposed, that each recommends, and endears each; render the Whole, a most sweet ravishing Scene, of Order and Variety, of Elegance and Magnificence.

From fo many lovely Prospects, clustering upon the Sight, it is impossible not to be reminded of Heaven. That World of Bliss; those Regions of Light; where the Lamb that was slain manifests his beatistic Presence, and his Saints live for evermore.—But O! what Pencil can sketch out a Draught of that goodly Land! What Colours, or what Style, can express the Splendors of IMMANUEL'S Kingdom! Would fome celeftial Hand draw aside the Veil, but for one Moment; and permit us to throw a fingle Glance, on those Divine Abodes; how would all fublunary Possessions, become tarnished in our Eyes, and grow flat upon our Taste! A Glimpse, a transient Glimpse of those unutterable Beatitudes, would captivate our Souls, and engross all their Faculties. Eden itself, after such a Vision, would appear a chearless Defart; and all earthly Charms, intolerable Deformity.

Very excellent Things are spoken of Thee, Thou City of GoD*. Volumes have been written, and those by inspired Men, to display the Wonders of thy Perfections. All that is rich and resplendent in the visible Creation, has been called in to aid our Conceptions, and elevate our Ideas. But, indeed, no Tongue can utter; no Pen can describe; no Fancy can imagine; What God, of his unbounded Munisicence, has prepared for them that love Him,—Seeing then, that all terrestrial Things must come to a speedy End; and there remaineth a Rest, a blissful and everlasting Rest, for the People of ^{*} Pfalm lxxxvii, 2.

God; let me never be too fondly attached, to any prefent Satisfactions. We aned from whatever is temporal, may I maintain a superior Indisference, for such transitory Enjoyments; but long, long earnestly, for the Mansions that are above; the Paradise, "which the "Lord hath planted, and not Man." Thither, may I transmit the Chief of my Conversation; and from thence expect the Whole of my Happiness. Be that the sacred, powerful Magnet, which ever influences my Heart; ever attracts my Affections. There, are such transcendent Glories, as Eye has not seen: There, are such transporting Pleasures, as Ear has not heard: There, is such a Fulness of Joys, as the Thought of Man cannot conceive.

INTO that confummate Felicity; those eternal Fruitions; permit me, Madam, to wish You, in due Time, an abundant Entrance: and to assure You, that this Wish is breathed, with the same Sincerity and Ardor, for my honoured Correspondent, as it is, MADAM, for

Your most Obedient, &c.

J. HERVEY.

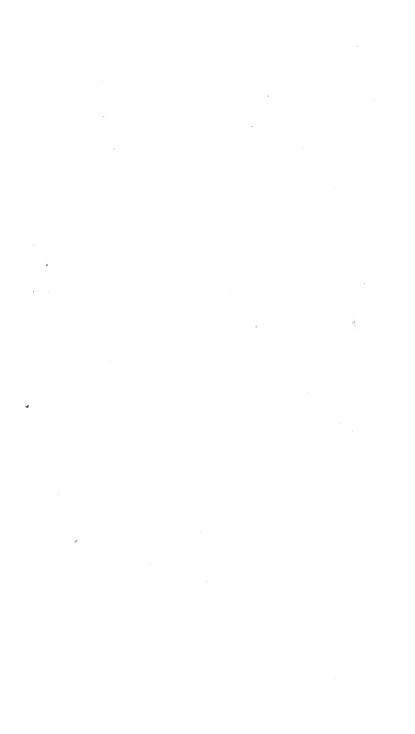

A

D E S C A N T

UPON

CREATION.

With Joy, with Grief, that Healing Hand I see; The Skies it form'd, and yet it bled for me. Night-Thoughts, N° IV.

A

D E S C A N T

UPON

CREATION.

If the Reader pleases to look back on Page 132; He will find me engaged by a promissory Note, to subjoin a DESCANT upon CREATION.

To know the Love of Christ; to have such a deep Apprehension of his unspeakable Kindness, as may produce in our Hearts an adoring Gratitude, and an unseigned Faith; this, according to St. Paul's Estimate, is the highest and happiest Attainment in the facred Science of Christianity. What follows, is an Attempt to assist the attentive Mind, in learning a Line or two of that best and greatest Lesson. It introduces the most conspicuous Parts of the visible System, as so many Prompters to our dull Affections; each suggesting a Hint, adapted to the important Occasion, and suitable to its respective Character.

CAN there be a more powerful Incentive to devout Gratitude; than to confider the magnificent and delicate

* Eph. iii. 19.

Scenes

174 A DESCANT UPON CREATION.

Scenes of the Universe, with a particular Reference to Christ, as the Creator?—Every Object, viewed in this Light, will surely administer incessant Recruits, to the languishing Lamp of Divine Love. Every Production in Nature, will strike a Spark into the Soul; and the whole Creation concur, to raise the smoaking Flax into a Flame.

CAN any thing impart a stronger Joy to the Believer; or more effectually confirm his Faith in the crucified Jesus; than to behold the Heavens declaring his Glory, and the Firmament shewing his Handy-work? Surely, it must be Matter of inexpressible Consolation to the poor Sinner; to observe the Honours of his Redeemer, written with Sun-beams, over all the Face of the World.

We delight to read an Account of our incarnate Jehovah; as He is revealed in the Books of Moses and the Prophets, as He is displayed in the Writings of the Evangelists and Apostles. Let us also endeavour to see a Sketch of his Persections; as they stand delineated in that stately Volume, where every Leaf, is a spacious Plain—every Line, a slowing Brook—every Period, a losty Mountain.

Should any of my Readers be unexercised in such Speculations, I beg Leave (in pursuance of my Promise) to present them with a Specimen: or to offer a Clue, which may possibly lead their Minds, into this most improving and delightful Train of Thinking.

Should any be inclined to suspect the Solidity of the following Observations; or to condemn them, as the Voice of Rant, and the lawless Flight of Fancy; I must entreat such Persons to recollect, That the grand Doctrine, the Hinge on which they all turn, is warranted and established by the unanimous Testimony of the inspired Penmen. Who frequently celebrate IMMANUEL, or CHRIST JESUS, as the great Almighty mighty Cause of all; assuring Us, that All Things were created by Him, and for Him; and that in Him all Things consists.

On fuch a Subject, what is wonderful, is far from being extravagant. To be wonderful, is the inseparable Characteristic of God and his Works; especially, of that most diffinguished and glorious Event of the Divine Works, REDEMPTION. So glorious, that " all the Miracles in Egypt, and the marvellous Acts in " the Field of Zoan;" all that the Jewish Annals have recorded, or the human Ear has heard; all dwindle into trivial Events, are scarce worthy to be remembered +, in comparison of this infinitely grand and infinitely gracious Transaction.-Kindled, therefore, into pleasing Astonishment, by such a Survey, let me give full Scope to my Meditations. Let me pour out my whole Soul on the boundless Subject; not much regarding the Limits, which cold Criticism, or colder Unbelief, might prefcribe.

O VE Angels, that furround the Throne; ye Princes of Heaven, "that excel in Strength," and are cloathed with transcendant Brightness; He, who placed You in those Stations of exalted Honour, and dignified your Nature with such illustrious Endowments; He, whom You all obey, and all adore: HE took not on Him the Angelic Form, but was made Flesh, and found in Fashion as a Man. Like us wretched Mortals, He was subject to Weariness, Pain, and every Instrmity, Sin only excepted.—That we might, one Day, be raised to your sublime Abodes; be adopted into your blissful Society; and join with your transported Choir, in giving Glory to HIM that fitteth upon the Throne, and to the LAMB for ever and ever *.

^{*} Col. i. 16, 17. Before my Reader enters upon the following Descant, he is desired to peruse the Note, pag. 102, 103.

⁺ Ifa. xlüi. 18.

O YE Heavens; whose azure Arches rise immensely high, and stretch unmeasurably wide. Stupendous Amphitheatre! amidst whose vast expansive Circuit, Orbs of the most dreadful Grandeur are perpetually running their amazing Races. Unfathomable Depths of Æther! where Worlds unnumbered float; and, to our limited Sight, Worlds unnumbered are loft.—He, who adjusted your Dimensions with his Span, and formed the magnificent Structure with his Word; HE was once wrapt in Swaddling-cloaths, and laid in a Manger.—That the Benefits accruing to his People, through his most meritorious Humiliation, might have no other Measure of their Value than Immensity; might run parallel, in their Duration, with Eternity.

YE Stars; that beam with inextinguishable Brilliancy. through the Midnight Sky. Oceans of Flame, and Centres of Worlds, though feemingly little Points of Light!-He, who shone, with effential Effulgence, innumerable Ages, before your twinkling Tapers were kindled; and will shine with everlasting Majesty and Beauty, when your Places in the Firmament shall be known no more. HE was involved, for many Years, in the deepest Obscurity; lay concealed in the contemptible City Nazareth; lay diiguised, under the mean Habit of a Carpenter's Son.—That he might plant the Heavens †, as it were, with new Constellations; and array these Clods of Earth, these Houses of Clay, with a Radiancy, far fuperior to yours. A Radiancy which will adorn the very Heaven of Heavens, when you shall vanish away like Smoke *; or expire, as momentary Sparks from the smitten Steel.

^{*} Rev. v. 13.

COMETS: that formetimes shoot into the illimitable Tracts of Æther, farther than the discernment of our Eye is able to follow; fometimes, return from the long, long Excursion, and sweep our affrighted Hemitphere with your enormous fiery Train. That fometimes make near Approaches to the Sun, and burn almost in his immediate Beams; fometimes, retire to the remotest Diftance, and freeze, for Ages, in the excessive Rigours of Winter.-He, who at his fovereign Pleafure, withdraws the blazing Wonder: or leads forth the portentous Stranger, to shake Terror over guilty Kingdoms. was overwhelmed with the most shocking Amazement, and plunged into the deepest Anxiety; was chilled with Apprehensions of Fear, and scorched by the Flames of avenging Wrath.-That I, and other depraved rebellious Creatures, might not be eternally agitated, with the Extremes of jarring Passions; opposite, yet, on either Side, tormenting. Far more tormenting to the Soul, than the feverest Degrees of your Heat and Cold to the human Sense.

YE Planets; that, winged with unimaginable Speed, traverse the Regions of the Sky. Sometimes climbing Millions and Millions of Miles above, sometimes descend-^{*} Alluding to a Passage in Isaiah, which is, I think, grand and elevated beyond all Comparison.—List up your Eyes to the Heavens, and look upon the Earth beneath: for the Heavens shall wanish away like Smoke, and the Earth shall wax old like a Garment, and they that dwell therein shall die like the feeble Insect: but thy Righteousness shall be for ever, and my Salvation shall not be abolished, Isa. It. 6.—With the great Vitringa, I translate the Words of the one in like manner; but, like the sable Insec. Which renders the Period more complete; the Sense more emphatical; and is more agreeable to the Genius of the facred Original.

ing as far below, the great Axle of your Motions. Ye, that are so minutely faithful, to the Vicisfitudes of Day and Night; so exactly punctual, in bringing on the Changes of your respective Seasons.—He, who launched You, at first, from his mighty Arm; who continually impels you, with such wonderful Rapidity; and guides you, with such perfect Regularity. Who fixes "the "Habitation of his Holiness and his Glory," infinite Heights above your scanty Rounds. HE once became a helpless Infant; sojourned in our inferior World; sled from the Persecutor's Sword; and wandered as a Vagabond in a foreign Land.—That He might lead our Feet into the Way of Peace; that He might bring us Aliens near to God, bring Us Exiles home to Heaven.

THOU Sun; inexhausted Source of Light, and Heat, and Comfort! Who, without the Affiftance of any other Fire, sheddest Day through a thousand Realms; and, not confining thy Munificence to Realms only, extendeft thy enlightening Influences to furrounding Worlds. Prime Chearer of the Animal, and great Enlivener of the Vegetable Tribes! So beautiful in thyfelf, so beneficial in thy Effects, that erring Heatheus addressed thee with Adorations, and miftook thee for their Maker!-He, who filled thy Orb with a Profusion of Lustre! before whom thy meridian Splendors are but a Shade.-HE divested Himself of his all-transcending Distinctions, and drew a Veil over the Effulgence of his Divinity; that, by speaking to Us, Face to Face, as a Man speaketh unto his Friend, he might dispel our intellectual Darkness. His "Visage was marred "," and He became the Scorn of Men, the Outcast of the People; that, by this Manifestation of his unutterably tender Regard for our Welfare, He might diffuse many a Gleam of Joy through our dejected Minds. That, in another State of Things, He might clothe even our fallen Nature, with the Honours of that magnificent Luminaty; and give all the Righteous to shine forth as the Sun, in the Kingdom of their Father.

Thou Moon; that walkest among the Host of Stars, and, in thy lucid Appearance, art fuperior to them all. Fair Ruler of the Night! Sometimes, half-restoring the Day, with thy waxing Brightness; sometimes, waning into Dimness, and scarcely scattering the nocturnal Gloom; fometimes, covered with Sackcloth, and alarming the gazing Nations.—He, who dreffes thy opake Globe, in beaming, but borrowed Silver; He, whose Dignity is unchangeable, underived, and all his own: He vouchfafed to wear a Body of Clay. HE was content to appear as in a bloody Eclipse, shorn of his resplendent Beams, and surrounded with a Night of Horror, which knew not one reviving Ray.—Thus, has He impowered his Church, and all Believers, to tread the Moon under their Feet*. Hence, inspired with the Hope of brighter Glory, and of more enduring Blifs, are they enabled to triumph over all the vain Anxieties, and vainer Amusements, of this sublunary, precarious, mutable World.

YE Thunders; that, awfully grumbling in the distant Clouds, seem to meditate Indignation, and form the first Essays of a far more frightful Peal; or, suddenly bursting over our Heads, rend the Vault above, and shake the Ground below, with the hideous, horrid Crack. Ye, that send your tremendous Vollies from Pole to Pole, startling the savage Herds †, and assonishing the human Race.—He, who permits Terror to sound her Trumper, in your deep, prolonged, inlarging, aggravated Roar:

^{*} Rev. xii. 1.

[†] Pfal. xxix. 8.

HE uttered a feeble infantile Cry in the Stable, and strong expiring Groans on the accursed Tree.—That He might, in the gentlest Accents, whisper Peace to our Souls; and, at length, tune our Voices to the Melody of Heaven.

O YE Lightnings; that brood, and lie couchant, in the fulphureous Vapours; that glance, with forked Fury, from the angry Gloom, fwifter and fiercer than the Lion rushes from his Den; or open into vast expansive Sheets of Flame, fublimely waved over the proftrate World, and fearfully lingering in the frighted Skies. Ye, that formerly laid in Ashes the licentious Abodes of Lust and Violence; that will, ere long, fet on fire the Elements, and co-operate in the Conflagration of the Globe.—He, who kindles your Flash, and directs You when to fally, and where to ftrike: He, who commissions your whirling Bolts, whom to kill, and whom to spare: HE refigned his facred Person to the most barbarous Indignities; fubmitted his beneficent Hands to the ponderous-Hammer, and the piercing Nail; yea, with-held not his Heart, his very Heart, from the Stab of the Executioner's Spear. And, instead of flashing Confusion on his outrageous Tormentors; instead of plunging them to the Depths of Hell with his Frown; He cried -in his last Moments, and with his agonizing Lips, He cried; Father, forgive them; for they know not WHAT THEY DO!—O! what a Pattern of Patience for his Saints! What an Object of Admiration for Angels! What a Constellation of every mild, amiable, and benign Virtue; shining, in this Hour of Darkness, with ineffable Splendor and Beauty*!-Hence, hence it is, that,

^{*} One can hardly forbear animadverting upon the difingenuous Temper, and perverte Tatte of Celfus; who attempts to turn; this most diftinguishing.

that We are not trembling under the Lightnings of Mount Sinai; that we are not blafted by the Flames of tinguishing and ornamental Part of our Lord's Life, into Ridicule and Reproach.—Having spoken of CHRIST, as despitefully used, and arrayed in a purple Robe; crowned with Thorns; and holding, by Way of mock Majesty, a Reed instead of a Sceptre (for he enters into all these Circumstances, which is a Testimony to their Truth even from the Mouth of an Enemy) He adds—Tiex, is un soooder, adda ion you θειον τι επιθεικνύθαι; και της αισχυνής ταυθής εαυθον ευεθαί, και της υθριζονθας EIS Eaulou TE RAL TOV Walepa dirain; Orig. contra CELS. p. 81. i.e. Wby. in the Name of Wonder, does He not, on this Occasion, at least, ast the Gon? Why does He not deliver himself from this shocking Ignominy; or execute some fignal Vengeauce, on the Authors of fuch injurious and abusive Infults, both of Himself and his Father? - Why, Celsus? Because, HE was Meekness and Gentleness itself: Whereas your Deities were Slaves to their own turbulent and refentful Passions. Because, they were little better than Savages in human Shape; who too often made a Merit of Slaughter, and took a horrid Pride in spilling Blood. While CHRIST was the Prince of Peace, and came not to destroy Mens Lives, but to fave. Because, any Madman on Earth, or Fury from Hell, is capable of venting his Rage. But Who, amidst such unsufferable Provocations and Barbarities; Who, having in his own Hand, the Power to rescue himself, the Power to avenge himself; could submit to all, with an unruffled Serenity of Patience; and not only not be exasperated, but overcome, in fo triumphant a Manner, Evil with Good? None but CHRIST! None but CHRIST! This was Compassion worthy of a God; Clemency and Charity truly divine.

Therefore, the Calumny raised by the same virulent Objector, in another Place, carries its own Consutation: or rather, falls with a Weight of Infamy on his dunghill Deities; while it bears a most bonourable Testimony, to the majestic and invincible Meekness of our Saviour.—Συ μεν, says he to the Christian, τα αγαλμαία τοθων λοιδορων καθαγελας, ος αυδον γε τον Διονυσον ε τον Ηρακλεα παροία ει ελοιδορησας, εκ αυ τους χαιρων απηλλαξας τον γε σον Θεον παροία καθαξιενοντες και κολαζοδίες, εδεν οι ταυθα δρασαίδες πεπουθασιν, ibid. p. 404. i. e. You, indeed, take upon You, to deride the Images of our Deities; but if Bacchus himself, or Hercules had been present, You would not have dared to effer such an Affront; or if you had been so presumptuous, would kave severely smarted for your Inselence. Whereas, they were townested the very Person of your God, and even extended him with mortal Agony on the Cross, suffered no Effests of his Diffleafure.

Divine Vengeance; or doomed to dwell with everlafting Burnings.

YE frowning wintry Clouds; Oceans pendent in the Air, and burdening the Winds. He, in whose Hand, You are an overflowing Scourge; or, by whose Appointment, an Arfenal * of warlike Stores. He, who opens your Sluices, and a Flood gushes forth; to destroy the Fruits of the Earth, and drown the Husbandman's Hopes: Who moulds you into frozen Balls, and You are shot, linked with Death †, on the Troops of his Enemies. HE, instead of discharging the Furiousness of his Wrath upon this guilty Head; poured out his Prayers; poured out his Sighs; poured out his very Soul; for me and my Fellow-transgressors.—That, by virtue of his inestimable Propitiation, the Overflowings of Divine Goodwill might be extended to finful Men; that the Skies might pour down Righteousness; and Peace on her downy Wings, Peace with her balmy Bleffings, descend to dwell on Earth.

YE vernal Clouds, Furls of finer Air, Folds of fofter Moisture. He, who draws you in copious Exhalations, from

^{*} Juvenal seems to consider the Clouds, under this same Character, in that beautiful Line, Quicquid habent Telorum Armamentaria Cali.

⁺ Job has informed Us, for what Purpose the Magazines of the Firmament are stocked with Hail. That they may be ready, against the Day of Battle and War. Job xxxviii. 23.—Josua has recorded, what terrible Slaughter has been made, by those missive Weapons of the Altrighty. Jest. x. 11.—Modern Hiltorians relate, that, when Edward III. invaded France, a Shower of Hail-stones descended, of such a prodigious Size; that six thousand Horses, and one thousand Men, were struck dead instantaneously.—But, the most dreadful Description of this great Ordinance of the Heavens, is given us in Rew. xvi. 21. There fell upon Men a great Hail out of Heaven, every Stone about the Weight of a Talest.

from the briny Deep; bids you leave every distasteful Quality behind; and become floating Fountains of sweetest Waters. He, who distolves You into gentle Rain, and dismisses You in fruitful Showers; who kindly commissions You, to drop down Fatness, as You fall, and to scatter Flowers over the Field.—HE, in the unutterable Bitterness of his Spirit, was without any comforting Sense of his Almighty Father's Presence. He, when his Bones were burnt up like a Firebrand, had not one Drop of that sacred Consolation, which, on many of his afflicted Servants, has been distilled as the Evening Dews, and has "given Songs in the Night" of Distress.—That, from this unallayed and inconsolable Anguish of our all-gracious Master, We, as from a Well of Salvation, might derive large Draughts of spiritual Refreshment.

Thou grand etherial Bow; whose Beauties slush the Firmament, and charm every Spectator. He, who paints thee on the sluid Skirts of the Sky; who decks thee with all the Pride of Colours; and bends thee into that graceful and majestic Figure. At whose Command, thy vivid Streaks sweetly rise, or swiftly fade.—HE, through all his Life, was arrayed in the humble Garb of Poverty; and, at his Exit, wore the gorgeous Garment of Contempt. Insomuch, that even his own familiar Friends, as a shamed or a fraid to own Him, "hid as it were their "Faces from Him ."—To teach us a becoming Disdain, for the unsubstantial and transitory Glitter of all worldly Vanities. To introduce Us, in Robes brighter than the Tinges of thy resplendent Arch; even in the ^{} Isa. liii. 3. Tand Charles Fuit tanquam aliquis, a quo quisque faciem occultorat. He was as some flagitious and abandoned Wretch, from whom every One, disdaining such a Character, and disclaiming such an Acquaintance, studiously bid his Face.

Robes of his own immaculate Righteousness, to introduce Us before that august and venerable Throne, which the peaceful Rainbow furrounds. Surrounds, as a Pledge of inviolable Fidelity, and infinite Mercy.

YE Storms and Tempests, which vex the Continent, and tofs the Seas; which dash Navies on the Rocks, and drive Forests from their Roots. He, whose Breath rouses You into fuch refiftless Fury, and whose Nod controuls You in your wildest Career. He, who holds the rapid and raging Hurricane in streightened Reins; and walks, dreadfully ferene, on the very Wings of the Wind. HE went, all meek and gentle, like a Lamb to the Slaughter for Us; and, as a Sheep before her Shearers is dumb, fo he opened not his Mouth.-Thus, are we instructed to bear, with decent Magnanimity, the various Affaults of Adverfity; and to pass, with a becoming Tranquillity of Temper, through all the rude Blafts of injurious Treatment. Thus, are we delivered from the unutterably fiercer Storms, of incenfed and inexorable Justice; from the "Fire, the Brimstone, and the " horrible Tempest, which will be the final Portion of " the Ungodly."

Thou Pestilence, that scatterest ten Thousand Poisons from thy baleful Wings; tainting the Air, and infecting the Nations. Under whose malignant Influence, Joy is blafted, and Nature fickens; mighty Regions are depopulated, and once crowded Cities are left without Inhabitants. He, who arms thee with inevitable Destruction, and bids thee march before * his angry Countenance; to spread Desolation among the Tents of the Wicked, and be the Forerunner of far more fearful Indignation. HE, in his holy Humanity, was arraigned as a Criminal; and, though Innocence itself, yea, the very Pattern of Perfection, was condemned to die, like the most execrable Miscreant. As a Nuisance to Society, and the very Bane of the public Happiness, He was hurried away to Execution, and hammered to the Gibbet.—That by his Blood, He might prepare a sovereign Medicine, to cure Us of a more fatal Distemper, than the Pestilence which walketh in Darkness, or the Sickness which destroyeth at Noon-day. That he might himself say to our last Enemy, "O Death, I will be thy Plague!" O Grave, I will be thy Destruction *."

^{*} Before him went the Peffilence, Hab. iii. 15.

HEAT; whose burning Influence parches the Libyan Wilds; tans into Soot, the Ethicpian's Complexion; and makes every Species of Life pant, and droop, and languish. Cold, whose icy Breath glazes yearly the Ruffian Seas; often glues the frozen Sailor to the Cordage; and stiffens the Traveller into a Statue of rigid Flesh.-HE, who sometimes blends You both, and produces the most agreeable Temperature; fometimes, fuffers You to act separately, and rage with intolerable Severity. That King of Heaven, and Controuler of univerfal Nature, when dwelling in a Tabernacle of Clay, was exposed to chilling Damps, and smitten by fultry Beams. The Stars, in their Midnight Watches, heard him pray; and the Sun, in his meridian Ferveurs, faw him toil. Hence are our frozen Hearts diffolived, into a mingled Flow of Wonder, Love, and Joy: being conscious of a Deliverance from those insufferable Flames, which, kindled by divine Indignation, burn to the lowest Hell.

THOU Ocean, vast World of Waters! He, who sunk that capacious Bed for thy Reception, and poured the liquid Element into unfathomable Channels; before Whom, all thy foaming Billows, and floating Mountains, are as the small Drop of a Bucket. Who, by the least Intimation of his Will, swells thy fluid Kingdoms, in wild Confusion, to mingle with the Clouds; or reduces them, in calm Composure, to slumber on the Shores. He, who once gave thee a Warrant to overwhelm the whole Earth, and bury all its degenerate Inhabitants in a watry Grave; but has, now, laid an everlasting Embargo on thy boisterous Waves; and bound thee, all fierce and madding as thou art, in Chains stronger than Adamant, yet formed of despicable Sand. —All the Waves of Vengeance and Wrath, of Tribulation and Anguish, passed over HIS crucified Body, and HIS agonizing Soul. That We might emerge from those Depths of Misery, from that Abysis of Guilt, into which we were plunged by Adam's Fall, and more irretrievably funk by our own Transgressions. That, at the last, we might be restored to that happy World, which is represented, in the Vision of God, as having no Sea ;" to denote its perpetual Stability, and undiffurbed Serenity.

YE Mountains; that overlook the Clouds, and project a Shade into distant Provinces. Everlasting Pyramids of Nature, not to be shaken by conslicting Elements; not to be shattered by the Bolts of Thunder; nor impaired even by the Ravages of Time.—He, who bid your Ridges rise so high, and your Foundations stand so fast. He, in whose Scale, You are lighter than Dust; in whose Eye, You are less than nothing.—HE sunk, beneath a Load of Woes; Woes insupportable, but not his own; when He took our Iniquities upon Himself, and heaved the more than mountainous Burden from a guilty World.

YE verdant Woods, that crown our Hills, and are crowned yourselves with leafy Honours. Ye humble Sbrubs, adorned, in Spring, with opening Blossoms; and fanned, in Summer, by gentle Gales. Ye, that in distant Climes, or in cultivated Gardens, breathe out spicy Odours, and embalm the Air with delightful Persumes.—Your all-glorious and ever-blessed Creator's Head, was incircled with the thorny Wreath; his Face was defiled with contumelious Spitting; and his Bedy bathed in a bloody Sweat. That we might wear the Crown, the Crown of Glory, which fadeth not away; and live for evermore, surrounded with Delights, as much surpassing yours, as yours exceed the rugged Desolations of Winter.

Thou mantling Vine; He who hangs on thy slender Shoots, the rich, transparent, weighty Cluster. Who, under thy unornamented Foliage, and amidst the pores of thy otherwise worthless Boug's, prepares the Liquor the refined and exalted Liquor, which chears the Nations, and fills the Cup of Joy. Trees, whose Branches are elevated and waving in Air; or diffused, in easy Confinement, along a funny Wall. He, who bends You with a lovely Burden of delicious Fruits; whose genial Warmth beautifies their Rind, and meilows their Tafte. -HE, when voluntary subject to our Wants, instead of being refreshed with your generous Juices, or regaled with your luscious Pulp; had a locthsome Potion of Vinegar, mingled with Gall, addressed to his Lips.-That we might fit under the Shadow of his Merits, with great Tranquility and the utmost Complacency. That, ere long, being admitted into the Paradise of Gop, We might might eat of the Tree of Life*; and drink new Wine with Him, in his Father's Kingdom.

YE luxuriant Meadows; He who, without the Seedsman's Industry, replenishes your irriguous Lap, with never-failing Crops of Herbage; and enamels their chearful Green, with Flowers of every Hue.-Ye fertile Fields; He, who bleffes the Labours of the Husbandman; enriches your well-tilled Plains with waving Harvests, and calls forth the Staff of Life from your Furrows. He, who causes both Meadows and Fields to laugh and fing, for the Abundance of Plenty.-HE was no Stranger to corroding Hunger, and parching Thirst. He, alas! eat the bitter Bread of Woe, and had "Plenteousness of Tears to drink."-That we might partake of richer Dainties, than those which are produced by the Dew of Heaven, and proceed from the Fatness of the Earth. That we might feed on "the " hidden Manna," and eat the Bread which giveth Life, cternal Life, unto the World.

YE Mines, rich in yellow Ore, or bright with Veins of Silver; that distribute your shining Treasures, as far as Winds can wast the Vessel of Commerce; that bestow your Alms on Monarchs, and have Princes for your Pensioners.—Ye Beds of Gems, Toy-shops of Nature! Which form, in dark Retirement, the glittering Stone. Diamonds, that sparkle with a brilliant Water; Rubies, that glow with a crimson Flame; Emeralds, dipped in the freshest Verdure of Spring; Sapphires, decked with the fairest Drapery of the Sky; Topaz, emblazed with a golden Gleam; Amethyst, impurpled with the Blushes of the Morning.—He, who tinctures the metallic Dust, and consolidates the lucid Drop; HE, when sojourning on Earth, had no Riches, but the Riches of difinterested Benevolence; had no Ornament, but the Ornament of unspotted Purity. Poor he was in his Circumstances, and mean in all his Accommodations; that WE might be rich in Grace, and "obtain Salvation" with eternal Glory." That We might inhabit the new ferusalem: that splendid City! Whose Streets are paved with Gold; whose Gates are formed of Pearl; and the Walls garnished with all manner of precious Stones.

YE gushing Fountains, that trickle potable Silver through the matted Grass. Ye fine transparent Streams, that glide, in crystal Waves along your fringed Banks. Ye deep and stately Rivers, that wind and wander in your Course, to spread your Favours wider; that gladden Kingdoms in your Progress, and augment the Sea with your Tribute.—He, who supplies all your Currents, from his own ever-flowing and inexhaustible Liberality: HE, when his Nerves were racked with exquisite Pain, and his Blood inflamed by a raging Fever, cried, I THIRST; and was denied (unparalleled Hardship!) in this his great Extremity, was denied the poor Refreshment of a fingle Drop of Water.—That We, having all Sufficiency in all Things, might abound to every good Work; might be filled with the Fulness of spiritual Bleffings Here, and Hereafter be fatisfied with that Fulness of Joy, which is at Gop's right Hand for evermore.

YE Birds, chearful Tenants of the Bough, gaily dreffed in glofly Plumage; who wake the Morn, and folace the Groves, with your artless Lays. Inimitable Architects! Who, without Rule or Line, build your pensile Structures, with all the Nicety of Proportion. You have each his commodious Nest, roosed with Shades, and lined with Warmth, to protect and cherish the callow Brood.—But He, who tuned your Throats to Harmony, and taught You that curious Skill; HE was a Man of Sorrows, and had not where to lay his Head. Had not where to lay his Head, till he felt the Pangs of Dissolution, and was laid in the filent Grave.—That We, dwelling under the Wings of Omnipotence, and resting in the Bosom of infinite Love, might spend an harmonious Eternity, in "finging the Song of Moses, and of the LAMB."

^{*} Rev. xxi. 19, 21.

·BEES, industrious Workmen! That sweep, with busy Wing, the flowery Garden; and search the blooming Heath; and fip the mellifluous Dews. Strangers to Idleness! That ply, with incessant Assiduity, your pleasing Tafk; and suffer no opening Blossom to pass unexplored, no funny Gleam to flip away unimproved. Most ingenious Artificers! That cling to the fragrant Buds; drain them of their treasured Sweets; and extract (if I may so speak) even the odoriferous Souls of Herbs, and Plants, and Flowers.—You, when you have compleated your Work; have collected, refined, and fecurely lodged the ambrofial Stores: when you might reasonably expect the peaceful Fruition of your Acquifitions; You alas! are barbaroufly destroyed, and leave your hoarded Delicacies to others: leave them to be enjoyed by your very Murderers. I cannot but pity your hard Deftiny! -How then should my Bowels melt with Sympathy, and my Eyes flow with Tears *; when I remember, that thus, thus it fared with your and our incarnate Maker!

^{*} Can'ft Thou, ungrateful Man, his Torments fee,
Nor drop a Tear for H1M, who four'd his Blood for Thee!

PITT's Poems.

After a Life of the most exemplary and exalted Piety; a Life, filled with Offices of Beneficence, and Labours of Love; HE was, by wicked Hands, crucified and slain. He lest the Honey of his Toil, the Balm of his Blood, and the Riches of his Obedience, to be shared among others: to be shared even among Those, who too often crucify Him asresh, and put him to open Shame.

Shall I mention the Animal *, which fpins her foft, her shining, her exquisitely fine filken Thread; Whose matchless Manusactures lend an Ornament to Grandeur, and make Royalty itself more magnificent.—Shall I take Notice of the Cell, in which, when the Gaiety and Business of Life are over, the little Recluse immures herself, and spends the Remainder of her Days in Retirement?—Shall I rather observe the Sepulchre, which, when cloyed with Pleasure, and weary of the World, she prepares for her own Interment? Or how, when a stated Period is elapsed, She wakes from a death-like Inactivity; breaks the Inclosure of her Tomb; throws off the dusky Shroud; assumes a new Form; puts on a

* No One, I hope, will be offended at my introducing, on fuch an Occasion, Creatures of so low a Rank. Since, even the Volumes of Inspiration seem to lend me the Sanction of their sacred Authority. As they disdain not to compare the biessed Jesus to a Deor, a Highway, &c. And, perhaps, all Comparisons, which respect a Being of infinite Dignity, are not only mean, but equally mean and unworthy.

I am fensible, likewise, that in this Paragraph, and some others, all the Circumstances are not completely correspondent. But if, in some grand Particulars, the Reddition answers to the Description; this, I trust, will be sufficient for my Purpose, and satisfactory to my Readers.—Perhaps, it would be no mistaken Caution, to apply the same Observation to many of the beautiful Similitudes, Parables, and Allegories, used by our Lord; such as the brazen Scrpent, the unjust Steward, the Thief in the Night, &c. Which, if scrupulously sisted, or rigorously strained, for an intire Coincidence in every Circumstance, must appear to great Disadvantage, and lead into palpable Inconveniences.

more fumptuous Array; and, from an Infect creeping on the Ground, becomes a winged Inhabitant of the Air?—No: this is a poor Reptile; and therefore unworthy to ferve as an Illustration, when any Character of the Son of God comes under Confideration. But let me correct myself. Was not Christ (to use the Language of his own blessed Spirit) a Worm and no Man *? In Appearance such, and treated as such.—Did he not also bequeath the sine Linen of his own most perfect Righteousness, to compose the Marriage-Garment † for our disarrayed

* Pfalm xxii. 6.

+ This, and feveral other Hints, interspersed in this Work, refer to the active and passive Righteousness of Christ, imputed to Believers, for their Justification. Which, in the Opinion of many great Expositors, is the mystical and the most sublime Meaning of the Wedding-Garment, so emphatically and forcibly recommended by the Teacher sent from God, Mast. xxii. 11. A Doctrine, which some of Those who honour my Meditations with a Perusal, probably may not receive with much, if any, Approbation. I hope, the aukole Performance will not be cashiered, for one Difference in Sentiment. And I beg, that the Sentiment itself may not hastily be rejected, without a serious Hearing. For, I have the Picasure of being intimately acquainted with a Gentleman of good Learning, and distinguished Sense, who had since as strong Prepostessions against this Tenet, as can well be imagined. Yet now, He not only admits it, as a Truth; but embraces it, as the Joy of his Heart; and cleaves to it, as the Rock of his Hopes.

A clear and cogent Treatife, intitled Submission to the Righteousness of God, was the Instrument of removing his Prejudices, and reducing him to a better Judgment.—In which he has been happily confirmed, by the Authority of the most illustricus Names, and the Works of the most eminent Pens, that have ever adorned our Church and Nation. In this Number are—Bishop Jewel, one of our great Reformers; and the other venerable Compilers of our Homilies—Archbishop User, that Oracle of Universal Learning—Bishop Hall, the devout and sprightly Orator of his Age—the copious and fervent Bishop Hopkins—the singularly good and unassected Bishop Beveridge—that everlasting Honour of the Bench of Judicature, Lord Chief Justice Hales—the servous, florid, and persuasive Dean Stanbope—the practical and persuasive Dean Stanbope — the practical and persuasive Dean Stan difarrayed and defiled Souls? Did He not, before his Flesh saw Corruption, emerge triumphant from the Grave: and not only mount the lower Firmament, but ascend the Heaven of Heavens; taking Possession of those sublime Abodes, in our Name, and as our Forerunner?

fpicuous

YE Cattle, that rest in your inclosed Pastures; Ye Beasts, that range the unlimited Forest; Ye Fish, that rove through trackless Paths of the Sea. Sheep, clad in Garments, which, when lest by You, are wore by Kings. Kine, who seed on Verdure, which, transmuted in your Bodies, and strained from your Udders, surnishes a Repast for Queens. Lions, roaring after your Prey; Leviathan, taking your Pastime in the great Deep; with all that wing fpicuous Mr. Burkit—and, to summon no other Evidence, that matchless Genius Milton; who, in various Parts of his divine Poem, inculcates this comfortable Truth; and, in one Passage, represents it under the very same Image, which is made use of above, Book X. line 222.

I had almost forgot to mention that the Treatise intitled Submission, &c. was written by Mr. Benjamin Jenks .- Whose Book of Devotions has deservedly passed through Eleven Editions; is truly admirable for the Sublimity, Spirituality, and Propriety of the Sentiments; as well as for the concife Form, and pathetic Turn of the Expression .- Whose Book of Meditations, though no less worthy of general Acceptance, has, for a confiderable Time, been almost unknown and extinct. But was revived, and republished, in Two Octavo Volumes, by Mr. Fames Rivington. For which Service, He has my Thanks: I flatter myfelf, He will have the Thanks of the Public: as I am perfuaded, could Religion and Virtue speak, He would have their Acknowledgments also, Since few Treatifes are more happily calculated, to reprefent Religion in its native Beauty, and to promote the Interests of genuine Virtue. On which Account, I trust, the Candid will excuse me, and the Judicious will not condemn me, even though the Recommendation of those Devotions and of these Meditations, may appear to be a Digression from my Subject.

N. B. Should the Reader be inclined to examine the aforementioned Tenet, He will find it stated, discussed, and applied to its due Improvement, in a Piece insided Theror and Aspasso.

the

the Firmament, or tread the Soil, or swim the Wave.—He, who spreads his ever-hospitable Board; who admits You all to be his continual Guests; and suffers You to want no manner of Thing that is good.—HE was destitute, afflicted, tormented: He endured all that was miserable and reproachful; in order to exalt a degenerate Race, who had debased themselves to a Level with the Beasts that perish, unto Seats of distinguished and immortal Honour; in order to introduce the Slaves of Sin, and Heirs of Hell, into Mansions of consummate and everlasting Bliss.

Surely, the Contemplation of such a Subject, and the distant Anticipation of such a Hope, may almost turn Earth into Heaven, and make even inanimate Nature vocal with Praise. Let it, then, break forth from every Creature. Let the meanest feel the inspiring Impulse; let the greatest acknowledge themselves unable, worthily to express the stupendous Goodness.

Praise HIM, ye Infects that crawl on the Ground; who, though high above all Height, humbled himself to dwell in Dust. Birds of the Air, wast on your Wings, and warble in your Notes, HIS Praise; who, though Lord of the celestial Abodes, while sojourning on Earth, wanted a Shelter commodious as your Nests.—Ye rougher World of Brutes, join with the gentle Songsters of the Shade, and how to HIM your hoarse Applause; who breaks the Jaw-Bones of the infernal Lion; who softens into Mildness the savage Disposition; and bids the Wolf lie down, in amicable Agreement, with the Lamb. Bleat out, ye Hills; let broader Lows be responsive from the Vales; ye Forests catch, and ye Rocks retain, the inarticulate Hymn: because Messiah the Prince seeds bis Flock, like a Shepherd. He gathers the Lambs with his Arm; He carries them into his Bosom; and gently leads those that are with Young * .- Wave, ye stately Cedars, in Sign of Worship, wave your branching Heads to HIM; who meekly bowed his own, on the accurfed Tree. Pleafing Prospects, Scenes of Beauty, where nicest Art conspires with lavish Nature, to form a Paradise below; lay forth all your Charms, and in all your Charms confess Yourfelves a mere Blank; compared with his Amiableness, who is "fairest among ten Thousand, and altogether " lovely."-Drop down, ye Showers; and teftify, as you fall; teftify of HIS Grace, which defcends more copiously than the Rain, distils more sweetly than the Dew. Let fighing Gales breathe, and murmuring Rivulets flow; breathe and flow, in harmonious Confonance to HIM; whose Spirit is far more reviving, than the cooling Breeze; who is Himfelf the Fountain of living Waters.

carries

YE Lightnings, blaze to HIS Honour; ye Thunders, found HIS Praise; while reverberating Clouds return the Roar, and bellowing Oceans propagate the tremendous Anthem.—Mutest of Creatures, add your filent Oratory, and display the Triumphs of HIS Meekness; who, though He maketh the Clouds his Chariot, and treadeth upon the Waves of the Sea; though the Thunder is his Voice, and the Lightning his Sword of Justice; yet, amidst the most abusive and cruel Injuries, was submissive and listed not his Hand, was "dumb" and opened not his Mouth."—Great Source of Day, address thy radiant Homage to a far sublimer Sun. Write, in all thy ample Round, with every lucid Beam, O! write a Testimony to HIM, who is the Brightness of his Father's Glory. Who is the Sun of Righteousness to a sinful World; and is risen, never to go down; is rifen, to be our everlasting Light.-Shine clear, ye Shies; look gay, thou Earth; let the Floods clap their Hands; and let every Creature wear a Smile: for He cometh, the CREATOR Himself cometh, to be manifested in the Flesh; and with Him comes Pardon, Peace, and Joy; every Virtue and all Felicity comes in his Train.—Angels and Archangels, let your Songs be of JESUS, and teach the very Heavens to echo with his adored and majestic Name. Ye beheld Him, with greater Transports of Admiration, when you attended his Agony in the Garden, and faw Him proftrate on the Ground; than when You beheld universal Nature rifing at his Call, and faw the Wonders of his creating Might. Tune to loftieft Notes your golden Harps, and waken Raptures, unknown before even in heavenly Breafts: while all that has Breath, fwells the Concert of Harmony; and all that has Being, unites in the Tribute of Praife.

CHIEFLY, let Man exalt his Voice; let Man, with distinguished Hosannas, hail the Redeemer. For Man, He was stretched on the racking Cross; for Man, He was consigned to the gloomy Sepulchre; for Man, He procured Grace unmeasurable, and Bliss inconceivable.—However different, therefore, in your Age, or more different in your Circustances, be unanimous, O Men, in magnifying a Saviour, who is no Respecter of Perfons; who gave Himself a Ransom for all.—Bend, ye Kings, from your Thrones of Ivory and Gold; in your Robes of imperial Purple, fall prostrate at HIS Feet; who forsook a nobler Throne, and laid aside more illustrious Ensigns of Majesty; that You might reign with God for ever and ever.—Children of Poverty, meanest of Mortals (if any can be called poor, who are thus enriched; if any can be accounted mean, who are thus ennobled); rejoice, greatly rejoice, in God your Saviour. Who chose to be indigent, was willing to be contemned; that you might be intitled to the Treafures, and be numbered with the Princes, of Heaven. —Sons of Affliction, though haraffed with Pain, and inured to Anguish! O! change your Groans into Songs of Gratitude. Let no complaining Voice, no jarring String be heard, in the universal Symphony; but glerify the LAMB even in the Fires *. Who Himself bore greater Torment, than You feel; and has promifed You a Share in the Joy, which He inherits: who has made your Sufferings short, and will make your Rest eternal.-Men of hoary Locks, bending beneath a Weight of Years, and tottering on the Brink of the Grave; let CHRIST be your Support, under all Infirmities; lean upon Christ, as the Rock of your Salvation. Let his Name, his precious Name, form the last Accents, which quiver on your pale expiring Lips.—And let this be the first, that lisps on your Tongues, ye tender Infants. Remember your REDEEMER, in your earliest Moments. Devote the Choicest of your Hours, to the learning of his Will; and the Chief of your Strength, to the glorifying of HIS Name. Who, in the Perfection of Health, and the very Prime of Manhood, was content to become a motionless and ghastly Corpse; that You might be girt with the Vigour, and cloathed with the Bloom of erernal Youth.

YE Spirits of just Men made perfect, who are released from the Burden of the Flesh; and freed from all the vexatious Solicitations of Corruption in Yourselves; delivered from all the injurious Effects of Iniquity in others. Who fojourn no longer in the Tents of Strife, or the Territories of Disorder; but are received into that pure, harmonious, holy Society, where every one acts up to his amiable and exalted Character; where God Himself is pleased graciously and immediately to preside.—You find, not without pleasing Astonishment, your Hopes improved into actual Enjoyment, and your Faith superseded by the Beatific Vision. feel all your former Shyneis of Behaviour, happily loft in the Overflowings of unbounded Love: and all your little Differences of Opinion, intirely borne down by Tides of invariable Truth. Blefs, therefore, with all your inlarged Powers, blefs His infinitely larger Goodness; who, when He had overcome the Sharpness of Death, opened the Gates of Paradife, opened the Kingdom of Heaven, to all Generations, and to every Denomination, of the Faithful.

YE Men of holy Conversation, and humble Tempers, think of HIM, who loved You, and washed You from your Sins in his own Blood. Think of Him, on your filent Couch; talk of Him, in every focial Interview. Glory in his Excellencies; make your Boast of his Obedience; and add, still continue to add, the Incense of a dutiful Life, to all the Oblations of a grateful Tongue.-Weakest of Believers, who go mourning under a Sense of Guilt, and conflicting with the ceaseless Affaults of Temptation; put off your Sack-cloth, and be girded with Gladness. Because Jesus, is as mercitul to hear, as He is mighty to help. Because, He is touched with the tenderest sympathizing Concern, for all your Distresses; and He lives, ever lives, to be your Advocate with the FATHER. Why then should uneasy Doubts fadden your Countenances? Why should defponding Fears opprefs your Souls? Turn, turn those difconsolate Sighs into chearful Hymns; fince you have his powerful Intercession and his inestimable Merits, to be your Anchor in all Tribulations, to be your Passport into eternal Blessedness.

his

Most of all, Ye Ministers of the Sanctuary; Heralds commissioned from above; lift, every One, his Voice like a Trumpet, and loudly proclaim the Redeemer. Get Ye up, Ye Ambassadors of Peace, get Ye up into the high Mountains; and spread far and wide the Honours of the LAMB, "that was slain, but is alive for "evermore." Teach every facred Roof, to resound with his Fame; and every human Heart, to glow with his Love. Declare, as far as the Force of Words will go, declare the inexhaustible Fulness of that great Atonement; whose Merits are commensurate with the Glories of the Divinity*. Tell the sinful Wretch, what Pity yearns in Immanuel's Bowels; what Blood he has spilt, what Agonies he has endured, what Wonders He has

* If in this Place and others, I have spoken magnificently of the Blood of Christ, and its insuperable Efficacy to expiate Guilt; I think, it is no more than is expressed, in a very celebrated Hymn; written by one of the greatest Wits, who had also been one of the greatest Libertines, and afterwards commenced one of the most remarkable Penitents, in France. A Hymn, which even Mr. Bayle confesses to be a very fine one; which another great Critic calls an admirable one; and which, a Genius superior to them both, recommends as a noble one. (See Spett. Vol. VII. No 513.)

The Author, having acknowledged his Crimes to be, beyond Meafure heinous, and almost beyond Forgiveness provoking:—so provoking, as to render Tears from such Eyes offensive, and Prayers from such Lips abominable:—composes himself to submit, without the least repining Sentiment; to submit, even with Praise and Adoration, to the most dreadful Doom. Accordingly, he stands in resigned Expectation of being instantly struck by the Bolts of Vengeance; but—with a Turn of Thought equally surprising and sprightly; with a Faith properly sounded, and happily firm; He adds, wrought, for the Salvation of his Enemies. Invite the Indigent, to become rich; intreat the Guilty, to accept of Pardon; because, with the crucified Jesus is plenteous Redemption, and All-fusficiency to save.—While you, placed in conspicuous Stations, pour the joyful Sound; may I, as I steal through the Vale of human Life, catch the pleasing Accents! For me, the Author of all Blessings became a Curse: for me, his Bones were dislocated, and his Flesh was torn: He hung, with streaming Veins, and an agonizing Soul, on the Cross for me. O! may I, in my little Sphere, and amidst the scanty Circle of my Acquaintance, at least whisper these glad transporting Tidings; whisper them from my own Heart, that they may surely reach, and sweetly penetrate theirs.

Yet where! O where! can ev'n thy Thunders fall!
Christ's Blood o'erspreads and shields me from them all.

But, when Men and Angels raise the grand Hymn; when all Worlds, and all Beings, add their collective Acclamations; this full, servent, and universal Chorus, will be so inserior to the Riches of the Redeemer's Grace; so dispreportionate to the Magnificence of his Glory; that it will seem but to debase the unutterable Subject, it attempts to exalt. The loud Hallelujah will die away, in the solemn mental Eloquence of prostrate, rapturous, filent Adoration.

O Goodness infinite! Goodness immense!

And Love that passeth Knowledge!—Words are vain;

Language is lost in Wonders so divine.

"Come then, expressive Siernes, muse his Praise."

CON-

CONTEMPLATIONS

ON THE

N I G H T.

Night is fair Virtue's immemorial Friend: The conscious Moon, through ev'ry distant Age, Has held a Lamp to Wisdom.

Night-Thoughts, No V.

PAULORCHARD;

OF

STOKE-ABBEY, in DEVONSHIRE, Efq.

DEAR SIR,

A S your honoured Father was pleased to make choice of me, to answer in your Name at the Font, and to exercise a Sort of Guardianship over your spiritual Interests; permit me, by putting these little Treatises into your Hand, to sulfil some Part of that solemn Obligation.

GRATITUDE for your many fignal Favours, and a confcientious Regard to my facred Engagement, have long ago inspired my Breast with the warmest Wishes, both for your true Dignity, and real Happiness. Nor can I think of a more endearing, or a more effectual Way, of advancing either the one or the other, than to set before you a Sketch of your excellent Father's Character.— Illustrious Examples are the most winning Incitements to Virtue. And none can come attended with such particular Recommendations to You, Sir, as the Pattern of that worthy Person, from whom you derive your very Being.

A MOST

A MOST cordial, and reverential Esteem for the Divine Word, was one of his remarkable Qualities. Those Oracles of Heaven were his principal Delight, and his inseparable Companions. Your Gardens, your solitary Walks, and the Hedges of your Fields can witness *, with what an unwearied Assiduity He exercised Himself in the Law of the Lord. From hence He setched his Maxims of Wisdom, and formed his Judgment of Things. The sacred Precepts, were the Model of his Temper, and the Guide of his Life; while the precious Premises, were the Joy of his Heart, and his Portion for ever.

IMPROVING Company was another of his most relishing Pleasures. Few Gentlemen were better furnished, either with Richness of Fancy, or Copiousness of Expression, to bear a shining Part in Conversation. With these Talents, He always endeavoured to give some useful, generally some religious, Turn to the Discourse. Nor did he ever reslect, with greater Complacency, on his social Hours, than when they tended to glorify the Eternal Majesty; and to awaken, in Himself and others, a more lively Spirit of Devotion.

To project for the Good of Others, was his frequent Study, and to carry those benevolent Contrivances into Execution, his favourite Employ. When visited by the young Persons of the ^{*} Josh. xxiv. 27.

Neighbourhood, far from taking an ungraceful Pride to initiate them in a Debauchery, or confirm them in a riotous Habit; it was his inceffant Aim, by finely-adapted Perfuafives, to encourage them in Industry, and establish them in a Course of Sobriety; to guard them against the Allurements of Vice, and animate them with the Principles of Piety. A noble Kind of Hospitality this! Which will probably transmit its beneficial Instruction, to their earthly Possessions; to their future Families; and even to their everlasting State.

A Conviction of human Indigence, and a thorough Persuasion of the Divine All-sufficiency, induced him to be frequent in Prayer. To prostrate himself in prosound Adoration, before that infinitely exalted Being, who dwells in Light inaccessible, was his Glory; to implore the Continuance of the Almighty Fayour, and the Increase of all Christian Graces, was his Gair. In those Moments, no doubt, he remembered You, Sir, with a particular Earnestness; and lodged many an ardent Petition in the Court of Heaven, for his Infant Son. Cease not to second them with your own devout Supplications, that they may descend upon your Head, "in the Fulness of the Blessings of the Gospel of Peace."

To give their genuine Lustre to all his other Endowments, he was careful to maintain an humble Mind. Though his Friends might admire his fuperior Abilities, or his Acquaintance applaud his exemplary Behaviour, he saw how far he fell short of the Mark of his high Calling: saw, and lamented his Defects: saw, and renounced Himself: relying, for final Acceptance, and endless Felicity, on a better Righteousness than his own; even on the transcendently perfect Righteousness, and inconceivably precious Death, of Jesus the Redeemer. This was the Rock of his Hope, and the very Crown of his Rejoicing.

These, Sir, are some of the distinguishing Characteristics of your deceased Parent. As you had the Missortune to lose so valuable a Relative, before you was capable of forming any Acquaintance with his Person; I flatter myself, you will the more attentively observe his Picture. This His moral Picture; designed, not to be set in Gold, or sparkle in Enamel, but to breathe in your Spirit, and to live in all your Conduct. Which, though it be intirely your own, calculated purely for yourself, may possibly (like the Family Pieces in your Parlour, that glance an Eye upon as many as enter the Room) make some pleasing and useful Impression on every Beholder.—May every one, charmed with the beautiful Image, catch its Resemblance; and Each, in his respective Sphere, "go and do likewise."

But You, Sir, are peculiarly concerned to copy the amiable Original. As the Order of an indulgent Providence, has made you Heir of the affluent affluent Circumstances; let not a gay and thoughtless Inadvertence, cut you off from the richer Inheritance, of these noble Qualifications.—These will be your Security, amidst all the glittering Dangers; which are inseparable from blooming Years, and an elevated Situation in Life. are your Path, your fure and only Path, to true Greatness, and solid Happiness.—Tread in these Steps, and you cannot fail to be the Darling of your Friends, and the Favourite of Heaven. Tread in these Steps, and you will give inexpressible Joy to one of the best of Mothers; you will become an extensive Bleffing to your Fellow-Creatures; and which, after fuch most engaging Motives, is fcarce worthy to be mentioned, you will be the Delight, the Honour, and the Boast of,

Dear SIR,

Your very affectionate Godfather,

And most faithful humble Servant,

Weston Favell, near Northampton, July 14, 1747.

JAMES HERVEY

.

PREFACE.

WE have already exercised our Speculations, on the Tombs and Flowers; Jurveying Nature, covered with the deepest Horrors, and arrayed in the richest Beauties. Allegory taught many of the Objects, to speak the Language of Virtue; while Imagination lent her Colouring, to give the Lessons an engaging Air.—And this with a View of imitating that Divine Instructor; who commissioned the Lily*, in her Silver Suit, to remonstrate in the Ear of unbelieving Reason: Who sent his Disciples (Men ordained to teach the Universe) to learn Maxims of the last Importance, from the most insignificant Birds*, that wander through the Paths of the Air; from the very meanest Herbs*, that are scattered over the Face of the † Ground.

Embold-

* Matt. vi. 26, 28, 29, 30.

Celebrated Writers, as Demostheres and Cicero, Thucydides and Livy, are observed to have a Stile peculiar to themselves.—Now, whoever considers the Discourses of Christ, will find Him distinguishing Himself by a Stile, which may properly be called HIS OWN. Majestic, yet familiar; happily uniting Dignity with Condescension; it consists, in teaching his Followers the sublimest Truths, by spiritualizing on the most common Occurrences. Which, besides its being level to the lowest Apprehensions; and admirably adapted to steal into the most inattentive Heart; is accompanied with this very singular Advantage, That it turns even the Sphere of Business into a School of Instruction; and renders the most ordinary Objects a Set of Monitors, ever soliciting our Regard, because ever present to our Senses.—So that, I believe, it may be said of this amiable Method, in which our Lord conveyed; as well as of that powerful Energy, which attended his Doctrines, That never Man spake like this Man.

Emboldened by the kind Acceptance of the preceding Sketches, I beg Leave to confide in the same Benevolence of Taste, for the Protestion and Support of the two remaining Essays; which exhibit a Prospect of still Life, and grand Operation: which moralize on the most composed, and most magnificent, Appearances of Things .- In which, Fancy is again suffered to introduce her Imagery; but only as the Handmaid of Truth: in order to dress her Person, and display her Charms; to engage the Attention, and win the Love, even of the Gay, and of the Fashionable. Which is more likely to be effected, by forming agreeable Pictures of Nature, and deriving instructive Observations; than by the laborious Method of long-deduced Arguments, or close connected Reasonings .-The Contemplation of the Heavens and the Earth, of their admirable Properties and beneficial Changes, has always afforded the most exalted Gratification to the human Mind. In Compliance with this prevailing Taste, I have drawn my serious Admonitions from the stupendous Theatre, —The Harvest approaching, He reminds his Disciples of a far more important Harvest, John iv. 35. Matt. xiii. 39. when immortal Beings shall be reaped from the Grave, and gathered in from all the Quarters of the Earth: when every human Creature shall sustain the Character of valuable Wheat, or despicable Tares; and accordingly be lodged in Mansions of everlasting Security, or consigned over to the Rage of unquenchable Fire.—In his Charge to Fishermen, when they are commencing Preachers, Matt. iv. 19. He exhorts them, conformably to the Nature of their late Occupation, to use the same Assistatory and Address, in winning Souls, as they were wont to exercise in catching the sinny Prey.—For the farther Illustration of this no less useful, than curious Subject, I would refer my Reader to a valuable Note, in Sir Isaac Necoton's Observations on the Prophecies; p. 148. 4to Edition.

and variegated Scenery of the Universe. That the Reader may learn his Duty, from his very Pleasures—may gather Wisdom, mingled with Virtue, from the most refined Entertainments, and noblest Delights.

The Evening, drawing her Sables over the World, and gently darkening into Night, is a Season peculiarly proper for sedate Consideration. All Circumstances concur, to hush our Passions, and sooth our Cares; to tempt our Steps abroad, and prompt our Thoughts to serious Resection.

Then is the Time,
For those, whom Wisdom, and whom Nature charm,
To steal themselves from the degen'rate Croud,
And soar above this little Scene of Things;
To tread low-thoughted Vice beneath their Feet;
To sooth the throbbing Passions into Peace;
And woo lone Quiet in her filent Walks *.

The Favour I would solicit for the first of the following Compositions, is, That it may be permitted to attend, in such retired and contemplative Excursions. To attend, if not under the Character of a Friend; at least, in the humble Capacity of a Servant, or a Page:—as a Servant, to open the Door of Meditation, and remove every Impediment to those best Exercises of the Mind; which blend Advantage with Amusement, and improve, while they delight:—as a Page, to gather up the unstable, sluttuating Train of Fancy; and collect her sickle Powers into a consistent, regular, and useful Habit of Thinking.

The other, conversant among the starry Regions, would lead the Imagination through those beautiful Trasts of unclouded Azure; and point out to the Judgment some of those astonishing Particulars, which so eminently signalize the celestial Worlds. A Prospect this, to which Curiosity attracts our Eyes, and to which Scripture itself often directs our Study. A Prospect beyond all others most excellently calculated, to inlarge the Soul, and ennoble its Conceptions;—to give the grandest Apprehensions of the Everlasting GOD, and create Sentiments of becoming Superiority, with relation to all transitory Interests;—in a Word, to surnish Faith with the surest Foundation, for a steady Assacce, and true Magnanimity of Spirit; to afford Piety the strongest Motives, both for a lively Gratitude, and prosound Veneration.

^{*} Thoms. Autumn, 1. 973. last Edit.

While Galilæo lifts his Tube, and discovers the prodigious Magnitude of those radiant Orbs;—while Newton measures their amazing Distances, and unites the whole System, in barmonious Order, by the subtle Instuences of Attraction:—I would only, like the Herald before that illustricus Hebrew*, proclaim at every Turn, "Bow the Knee, and adore the "Almighty Maker; magnify his eternal Name, and make "his Praise, like all his Works, to be glorious."

^{*} Gen. xli. 43.

CONTEMPLATIONS

ON THE

N I G H T.

THE Business of the Day dispatched, and the sultry Heats abated, invited me to the Recreation of a Walk. A Walk, in one of the finest Recesses of the Country; and in one of the most pleasant Evenings, which the Summer-Season produced.

THE Limes and Elms, uniting their Branches over rny Head, formed a verdant Canopy, and cast a most refreshing Shade. Under my Feet lay a Carpet of Nature's Velvet; Grafs intermingled with Mofs, and embroidered with Flowers. Jessamines, in Conjunction with Woodbines, twined around the Trees; displaying their artless Beauties to the Eve, and diffusing their delicious Sweets through the Air. On either Side, the Boughs, rounded into a Set of regular Arches, opened a View into the distant Fields, and presented me with a Prospect of the bending Skies. The little Birds, all joyous and grateful for the Favours of the Light, were paying their Acknowledgments in a Tribute of Harmony, and foothing themselves to Rest with Songs. While a French-Horn, from a neighbouring Seat, fent its melodious lodious Accents, fostened by the Length of their Passage, to complete the Concert of the Grove.

Roving in this agreeable Manner, my Thoughts were exercised on a Subject, still more agreeable than the Season, or the Scene. I mean, our late signal Victory, over the united Forces of intestine Treason, and foreign Invasion. A Victory, which pours Joy through the present Age, and will transmit its Insluence to Generations yet unborn.—Are not all the Blessings, which can endear Society, or render Life itself desirable, centered in our present happy Constitution, and auspicious Government? Were they not all struck at, by that impious and horrid Blow, meditated at Rome; levelled by France; and seconded by sactious Spirits at Home? Who then can be sufficiently thankful, for the gracious Interposition of Providence; which has not only averted the impending Ruin, but turned it with aggravated Consusion, on the Authors of our Troubles?

METHINKS, every Thing valuable, which I posses; every Thing charming which I behold; conspire to enhance this ever-memorable Event. To this it is owing, that I can ramble unmolested along the Vale of private Life, and taste all the innocent Satisfactions of a contemplative Retirement.—Had Rebellion * succeeded in her detestable Designs; instead of walking with Security and Complacence in these flowery Paths, I might have met the Assassing with his Dagger; or have been obliged to abandon my Habitation, and "embrace" the Rock for Shelter."—Farewel then, ye fragrant Shades; Seats of Meditation, and calm Repose! I should have been driven from your loved Retreats, to make Way for some barbarous, some infulting Victor.—Farewel then, ye pleasing Toils, and wholesome Amusements of my rural Hours! I should no more have reared the tender Flower to the Sun; no more have taught the Espalier to expand her Boughs; nor have setched, any longer, from my Kitchen-Garden, the purest Supplies of Health.

^{*} Referring to the Rebellion, fet on Foot in the Year 1745.— Which, for feveral Months, made a very alarming Progress in the North—but was happily extinguished by the glorious and decisive Victory at Calleden.

Had Rebellion succeeded in her detestable Designs; instead of being regaled with the Music of the Woods, I might have been alarmed with the Sound of the Trumpet, and all the Thunder of War. Instead of being entertained with this beautiful Landscape, I might have beheld our Houses ransacked, and our Villages plundered; I might have beheld our fenced Cities encompassed with Armies, and our fruitful Fields "cloathed with "Desolation;" or have been shocked with the more frightful Images, of "Garments rolled in Blood," and of a Russian's Blade reeking from a Brother's Heart, Instead of Peace, with her chearing Olives, sheltering our Abodes; instead of Justice, with her impartial Scale, securing our Goods; Persecution had brandished her Sword, and Slavery clanked her Chains.

Nor are these Miseries imaginary only, or the Creatures of a groundless Panic. There are, in a neighbouring Kingdom, who very lately experienced them in all their Rigour*. And, if the malignant Spirit of Popery, had forced itself into our Church; if an abjured Pretender, had cut his Way to our Throne; We could have no Reason to expect a Mitigation of their Severity, on our Behalf.—But, supposing the tender Mercies of a bigotted Usurper, to have been somewhat less cruel. Where, alas! would have been the Encouragement to cultivate our little Portion; or what Pleasure could arise, from an improved Spot; if both the one and the other lay, every Moment, at the Mercy of lawless Power? This imbittering Circumstance would spoil their Relish; and by rendering them a precarious, would render them a joyless Acquisition.—In vain, might the Vine spread her purple Clusters; in vain, be lavish of her generous Juices; if Tyramy, like a ravenous Harpy, should be always hovering over the Bowl, and ready to snatch it from the Lip of Industry, or to wrest it from the Hand of Liberty.

^{*} See a Pamphlet intitled, Popery always the same.—Which contains a Narrative of the Persecutions, and severe Hardships lately suffered by the Protestants, in the Southern Parts of France; and closes with a most seasonable, alarming, and spirited Address to the Inhabitants of Great-Britain, Printed 1746. Price 8d.

LIBERTY, that dearest of Names! and Property, that best of Charters; give an additional, an inexpressible Charm, to every delightful Object.-See, how the declining Sun has beautified the western Clouds; has arraved them in Crimfon, and skirted them with Gold. Such a Refinement of our domestic Blis, is Property; fuch an Improvement of our public Privileges, is Liberty.—When the Lamp of Day shall withdraw his Beams, there will still remain the same Collection of floating Vapours; but O! how changed, how gloomy! The Carnation-Streaks are faded; the golden Edgings are wore away; and all the lovely Tinges are lost, in a leaden-coloured louring Sadness. Such would be the Aspect, of all these Scenes of Beauty, and all these Abodes of Pleasure; if exposed continually to the Caprice of arbitrary Sway, or held in a State of abject and cringing Dependence.

THE Sun has almost finished his daily Race, and hastens to the Goal. He descends lower and lower; till his Chariot-Wheels seem to hover on the utmost Verge of the Sky. What is somewhat remarkable, the Orb of Light, upon the Point of fetting, grows confiderably broader. The Shadows of Objects, just before they become blended in undiffinguishable Darkness, are exceedingly lengthened*.—Like Blessings, little prized, while possessed: but highly esteemed, the very Instant they are preparing for their Flight: bitterly regretted, when once they are gone, and to be seen no more.

THE radiant Globe is, now, half-immerfed beneath the dufky Earth. Or, as the antient Poets speak, is shooting into the Ocean, and finks in the western Sea. -And could I view the Sea, at this Juncture, it would yield a most amusing and curious Spectacle. The Rays, striking horizontally on the liquid Element, give it the Appearance of floating Glass; or, reflected in many a different Direction, form a beautiful Multiplicity of Colours.—A Stranger, as he walks along the fandy Beach; and, lost in pensive Attention, listens to the Murmurings of the reftless Flood; is agreeably alarmed by the gay Decorations of the Surface. With Entertainment, and with Wonder, he fees the curling Waves, here glistening with White, there glowing with Purple; in one Place, wearing an Azure Tincture; in another, glancing a Cast of undulating Green; in the Whole, exhibiting a Piece of fluid Scenery, that may vie with yonder Pencil Tapestries, though wrought in the Loom, and tinged with the Dyes of Heaven.

While I am transported by Fancy to the Shores of the Ocean, the great Luminary is funk beneath the Horizon, and totally disappears. The whole Face of the Ground is overspread with Shades; or with, what one of the finest Painters of Nature calls, a dun Obfarity. Only a few very superior Eminences are tipt with streaming Silver. The Tops of Groves, and losty Towers, catch the last Smiles of Day*; are still irradiated by the departing Beams.—But, O! how transsent is the distinction! how momentary the Gift! Like all the Blessings, which Mortals enjoy below, it is gone, almost as soon as granted. See! how languishingly it trembles on the leasty Spire; and glimmers, with a dying Faintness, on the Mountain's Brow. The little Vivacity, that remains, decays every Moment. It can no longer hold its Station. While I speak, it expires; and resigns the World to the gradual Approaches of Night.

^{*} Majoresque cadunt altis de Montibus Umbra.

——— Now Twilight grey
Has in her fober Liv'ry all Things clad †.

Every Object, a little while ago, glared with Light; but now, all appears under a more qualified Lustre. The Animals harmonize with the insensible Creation; and what was gay in those, as well as glittering in this, gives Place to an universal Gravity. In the Meadows, all was jocund and sportive: but now the gamesome Lambs are grown weary of their Frolicks; and the tired Shepherd, has imposed Silence on his Pipe. In the Branches, all was Sprightliness and Song: but now the lively Green, is wrapt in the descending Glooms; and no tuneful Airs are heard, only the plaintive Stockdove, cooing mournfully through the Grove.—Should I now be vain and trisling, the Heavens and the Earth would rebuke my unseasonable Levity.—Therefore, be these Moments devoted to Thoughts, season seasons.

^{*} See this remarkable Appearance delicately described, and wrought into a Comparison, which, in my Opinion, is one of the most just, beautiful, and noble Pieces of Imagery, to be found in modern Poetry; Night Thoughts, No II. p. 42. 4to Edit.

⁺ MILT. Par. Loft, B. IV. 1. 598.

Day; folemn, as the Face of Things. And, indeed, however my focial Hours are enlivened with imnocent Pleasantry; let every Evening, in her sable Habit, toll the Bell to serious Consideration. Nothing can be more proper, for a Person who walks on the Borders of Eternity, and is hasting continually to his final Audit; nothing more proper, than daily to slip away from the Circle of Amusements, and frequently to relinquish the Hurry of Business, in order to consider and adjust "the "Things that belong to his Peace."

Since the Sun is departed, from whence can it proceed, that I am not involved in pitchy Darkness? Whence these Remainders of diminished Brightness? Which, though scarcely forming a Refulgence, soften and footh the Horrors of Night. I fee not the shining Ruler, yet am cheared with a real, though faint Communication of his Splendor.—Does he remember Us, in his Progress through other Climes? Does He fend a Detachment of his Rays, to efcort Us during his personal Absence; or to cover (if I may use the military Term) our Retreat from the Scene of Action? Has he bequeathed Us a Dividend of his Beams, sufficient to render our Circumstances easy, and our Situation agreeable? Till Sleep pours its foft Oppression on the Organs of Sense; till Sleep suspends all the Operations of our Hands; and intirely supersedes any farther Occasion for the Light.

No: it is ill-judged and unreasonable, to ascribe this beneficent Conduct to the Sun. Not unto Him; not unto Him; but unto his Almighty Maker We are obliged, for this pleasing Attendant, this valuable Legacy. The gracious Author of our Being, has so disposed the Collection of circumambient Air, as to make it productive of this fine and wonderful Essect. The Sun-beams, falling on the higher Parts of the aërial Fluid, inflead of paifing on in strait Lines, are bent inwards and conducted to our Sight. Their natural Course is over-ruled, and they are bidden to wheel about; on purpose to savour Us with a welcome and salutary Visit.—By which means, the Blessing of Light, and the Season of Business, are considerably prolonged. And, what is a very endearing Circumstance, prolonged most considerably; when the vehement Heats of Summer, incline the Student to postpone his Walk, till the temperate Evening prevails; when the important Labours of the Harvest, call the Husbandman abroad, before the Day is fully risen.

AFTER all the Ardors of the fultry Day, how reviving is this Coclness!-This gives new Verdure to the fading Plants; new Vivacity to the withering Flowers; and a more exquifite Fragrance to their mingled Scents.—By this, the Air also receives a new Force, and is qualified. to exert itself with greater Activity. Qualified to brace our Limbs; to heave our Lungs; and co-operate, with a brifker Impulse, in perpetuating the Circulation of our Blood.—This I might call the grand Alembic of Nature; which diffils her most fovereign Cordial, the refreshing Dews. Incessant Heat, would rob Us of their beneficial Agency; and oblige them to evaporate, in imperceptible Exhalations. Turbulent Winds, or even the gentler Motions of Aurora's Fan, would diffipate the rifing Vapours, and not fuffer them to form a Coalition. But, favoured by the Stilness, and condensed by the Coolness of the Night; they unite in pearly Drops, and create that finely tempered Humidity, which chears the vegetable World, as Sleep exhilarates the animal.

Nor unlike to these, are the Advantages of Solitude. The World is a troubled Ocean; and who can erect stable Purposes, on its sluctuating Waves? The World is a School of Wrong; and who does not feel Himfelf warping, to its pernicious Influences *? On this Sea of Glass +, how infensibly we slide from our own Stedfastnefs! fome facred Truth, which was struck in lively Characters on our Souls, is obscured, if not obliterated. Some worthy Resolution, which Heaven had wrought in our Breafts, is shaken, if not overthrown. ticing Vanity, which we had folemnly renounced, again practifes its Wiles, and again captivates our Affections. How often has an unwary Glance, kindled a Fever of irregular Defire in our Hearts? How often has a Word of Applause, dropt luscious Poison into our Ears; or fome disrespectful Expression, raised a Gust of Passion in our Bosoms? Our Innocence is of so tender a Constitution, that it fuffers in the promifcuous Croud. Our Purity is of fo delicate a Complexion, that it fcarce touches on the World, without contracting a Stain. We fee, we hear, with Peril.

But here Safety dwells. Every meddling and intrufive Avocation is feeluded. Silence holds the Door against the Strife of Tongues, and all the Impertinencies of idle Conversation. The busy Swarm of vain Images, and cajoling Temptations; which beset Us, with a buzzing Importunity, amidst the Gaieties of Life; are chased by these thickening Shades. Here I may, without Disturbance, commune with my own Heart; and learn that best of Sciences, to know myself. Here, the Soul may rally her dissipated Powers, and Grace recover its native Energy.—This is the Opportunity, to rectify every evil Impression; to expel the Poison, and guard against the Contagion, of corrupting Examples.

^{*} Nunquam a turba mores, quos extuli, refero. Aliquid, ex eo quod composui, turbatur: aliquid, ex his quæ sugavi, redit. Inimica est multorum conversatio.

Senec.

This is the Place, where I may, with Advantage, apply myself to subdue the Rebel within; and be Master, not of a Sceptre, but of myself.—Throng then, ye Ambitious, the Levees of the Powerful; I will be punctual in my Assignations with Solitude. To a Mind intent upon its own Improvement, Solitude has Charms incomparably more engaging, than the Entertainments prefented in the Theatre; or the Honours conferred in the Drawing-Room.

I said, Solitude.—Am I then alone?—'Tis true, my Acquaintance are at a Distance. I have stole away from Company, and am remote from all buman Observation.—But that is an alarming Thought, Millions of spiritual Creatures walk the Earth, Unseen, both when we wake, and when we sleep *.

Perhaps, there may be Numbers of those invisible Beings, patroling this same Retreat; and joining with me, in contemplating the Creator's Works. Perhaps, those ministring Spirits, who rejoice at the Conversion of a Sinner, and hold up the Goings of the Righteous, may follow us to the lonely Recess; and, even in our most solitary Moments, be our constant Attendants.—What a pleasing Awe is awakened, by such a Reslection! How venerable it renders my retired Walks! I am struck with Reverence, as under the Roof of some facred Edifice; or in the Presence-Chamber of some mighty Monarch.—O! may I never bring any Pride of Imagination, nor indulge the least dissolute Affection; where such refined and exalted Intelligencies exercise their Watch!

'Tis possible, that I am encompassed with such a Cloud of Witnesses; but it is certain, that God, the infinite eternal God, is now and ever with me. The great Jfhovah, before whom all the Angelic Armies bow their Heads, and veil their Faces, furrounds me; fupports me; pervades me. "In Him I live, move, "and have my Being."—The whole World is his august Temple; and, in the most sequestered Corner, I appear before his adorable Majesty, no less than when I worship in his House, or kneel at his Altar. In every Place, therefore, let me pay him the Homage of a Heart, cleansed from Idols, and devoted to his Service. In every Circumstance, let me feel no Ambition, but to please Him; nor covet any Happiness, but to enjoy Him.

^{*} MILT. Par. Loft, B. IV. 1. 677.

How sublime is the Description, and how striking the Sentiment, in that noble Passage of the Psalms! Whither shall I go from thy Spirit, or whither shall I flee from thy Presence? If I climb up into the Heights of Heaven, Thou art there inthroned in Light. If I go down to the Depths of the Grave, Thou art there also in thy Pavilion of Darkness. If I retire to the remotest Eastern Climes, where the Morning first takes Wing: if, swifter than the darting Ray, I pass to the opposite Regions of the West, and remain in the uttermost Parts of the Sea*: shall I, in that distant Situation, be bevond thy Reach; or, by this fudden Transition, escape thy Notice! So far from it; that could I, with one Glance of Thought, transport myself beyond all the Bounds of Creation; I should still be incircled with the Immensity of thy Essence; or rather, still be inclosed in the Hollow of thy Hand .- Awful yet delightful Truth!

^{*} Pfal. exxxix. 7, 8, 9. There is, I think, an additional Strength and Beauty in the Thought; if, with the learned Mr. Mudge, we suppose an Antithesis between the two Clauses of the last Verse, as there evidently is between those of the preceding; and that they express, in a poetical Stile, the Extremities of the East and the West.

Let it be interwoven with every Thought! and become one with the very Consciousness of my Existence! That I may continually walk with GOD; and conduct mystelf, in every Step of my Behaviour, "as feeing HIM" that is invisible."

THEY are the happy Persons; Felicity, true Felicity, is all their own; who live under an habitual Sense of Gop's Omnipresence, and a sweet Persuasion of his special Love. If Dangers threaten, that impregnable Defence is at hand. Nothing can be so near to terrify, as their Almighty Guardian to secure them .- To These, the Hours can never be tedious; and it is impossible, for them, to be alone. Do they step aside from the Occupations of animal Life? A more exalted Set of Employments engage their Attention. They address themfelves, in all the various Acts of Devotion, to their heavenly Father; who now fees in fecret, and will hereafter reward them openly. They spread ail their Wants, before his indulgent Eye; and disburden all their Sorrows, into his compassionate Bosom.-Do they withdraw from human Society? They find themselves under the more immediate Regards of their Maker. If they refign the Satisfactions of focial Intercourse; it is to cultivate a Correspondence with the condescending DEITY, and taste the Pleasures of Divine Friendship. What is fuch a State, but the very Suburbs of Heaven? What is fuch a Conduct, but an Antepast of eternal Bieffedness?

Now, my Soul, the Day is ended. The Hours are all fied. They are fled to the fupreme Judge, and have given in their Evidence. An Evidence, registered in Heaven! and to be produced, at the great Audit.—Happy They! whose Improvement has kept Pace with the fleeting Minutes. Who have seized the important Fugitives;

Fugitives; and engaged them in the Pursuit of Wisdom, or devoted them to the Service of Virtue.

Fugitives indeed they are. Our Moments flip away filently and infenfibly. The Thief steals not more unperceived from the pillaged House.—And will the Runagates never stop? No: Where-ever we are, however employed, Time pursues his incessant Course. Though we are liftless and dilatory; the great Measurer of our Days presses on; still presses on, in his unwearied Career *; and whirls our Weeks, and Months, and Years away.-Is it not then furprifingly strange, to hear People complain of the Tedicusness of their Time, and how heavy it hangs upon their Hands? To fee them contrive a Variety of amufing Artifices, to accelerate its Flight, and get rid of its Burden ?-Ah! thoughtless Mortals! Why need you urge the headlong Torrent? Your Days are fwifter than a Post; which, carrying Dispatches of the last Importance, with unremitted Speed scours the Road. They pass away like the nimble Ships; which have the Wind in their Wings, and skim along the watry Plain. They hasten to their destined Period, with the Rapidity of an Eagle; which leaves the stormy Blast behind her, while She cleaves the Air, and darts upon her Prey +.

Now the Day is gone, how short it appears! When my fond Eye beheld it in Perspective, it seemed a very ^{*} Sed fugit interea, fugit irreparabile Tempus. VIRG.

[†] Job ix. 25, 26. By these Three very expressive Images, the infpired Poet represents the unintermitted and rapid Flight of Time. The Passage is illustrated with great Judgment, and equal Delicacy, in Dr. Grey's most ingenious Abridgment of Schultens.—Quatribus in elementis velocissima, bic admirabili cum emphasi congerunter. In terris, nil pernicius cursore, & quidem lati quid ferente. Rapidius tamen adhuc undas, non secant, sed supervolant, navigiola papyro contexta. Omnium rapidissime aërem grandibus alis permetitur aquila, pracipiti lapsu ruens in pradam.

confiderable Space. Minutes, crowded upon Minutes; and Hours, ranged behind Hours; exhibited an exten-five Draught, and flattered me with a long Progression of Pleasures. But, upon a retrospective View, how wonderfully is the Scene altered! The Landscape, large and spacious, which a warm Fancy drew; brought to the Test of cool Experience, shrinks into a Span. Just as the Shores vanish, and Mountains dwindle to a Spot; when the Sailor, surrounded by Skies and Ocean, throws his last Look on his native Land.—How clearly do I now discover the Cheat! May it never impose upon my unwary Imagination, again! I find, there is nothing abiding on this Side Eternity. A long Duration, in a State of finite Existence, is mere Illusion.

PERHAPS, the Healthy, and the Gay, may not readily credit the ferious Truth; especially from a young Pen, and new to its Employ. Let us then refer ourselves to the Decision of the Antient. Ask some venerable old Person, who is just marching off the mortal Stage; How many have been the Days of the Years of thy Life *? It was a Monarch's Question; and therefore can want no Recommendation, to the fashionable World.—Observe, how he shakes his hoary Locks, and from a deep-felt Conviction replies: " Fourfcore Years have finished their "Rounds, to furrow these Cheeks, and cloath this Head " in Snow. Such a Term may feem long and large, to "inconfiderate Youth. But O! how fhort, how fcanty, " to One that has made the Experiment! Short, as a "Gleam of transient Sunshine; fcanty, as the Shadow "that departeth. Methinks, it was but Yesterday, that "I exchanged my childish Sports, for manly Exercises; " and now, I am refigning them both, for the Sleep of "Death. As foon as we are born, we begin to draw to our End; and how small is the Interval, between the [.] Gen. xlvii. 8, Heb. Bib.

"Cradle and the Tomb!"—O! may we believe this Testimony of mature Age! May every Evening bring it, with clearer Evidence to our Minds! And may we form such an Estimate of the little Pittance, while it is upon the advancing Hand, as we shall certainly make, when the Sands are all run down!

LET me add one Reflection on the Work to be done, while this Shuttle is flying through the Loom *. A Work of no small Difficulty, yet of the utmost Consequence!—Hast Thou not seen, hast Thou not known, the Excellent of the Earth; who were living Images of their Maker? His Divine Likeness was transsused into their Hearts, and beamed forth in all their Conduct. Beamed forth in Meekness of Wisdom, and Purity of Affection; in all the tender Offices of Love, and all the noble Efforts of Zeal. To be stampt with the same beautiful Signature, and to be Followers of them, as they were of Christ; this, this is thy Business. On the Accomplishment of this, thy eternal All depends. And, will an Affair of such unspeakable Weight, admit of a Moment's Delay, or confift with the least Remissiness? -Especially, fince much of thy appointed Time is already elapsed; and the Remainder is all Uncertainty, fave only that it is in the very Act to fly.-Or suppose, thou hadft made a Covenant with the Grave, and wast assured of reaching the Age of Methuselab; how foon would even such a Lease expire!—Extend it, if you please, still farther; and let it be co-existent with Nature itself. How inconsiderable is the Addition! For, yet a very little while, and the commissioned Archangel lifts up his Hand to Heaven, and swears by the Almighty Name, Job vii. 6.

^{*} My Days are swifter than a Weaver's Shuttle.

That Time shall be no longer *. Then, abused Opportunities, will never return; and new Opportunities, will never more be offered. Then, should negligent Mortals wish—wish ever so passionately—for a few Hours—

* This alludes to the Beginning of Revelations the xth; which, abstracted from its spiritual Meaning, and considered only as a stately Piece of Machinery, well deserves our Attention; and, I will venture to fay, has not its Superior, perhaps not its Equal, in any of the most celebrated Masters of Greece and Rome .- All that is gloomy or beautiful in the Atmosphere, all that is striking or magnificent in every Element, is taken to heighten the Idea. Yet nothing is disproportionate; but an uniform Air of ineffable Majesly greatens, exalts, ennobles the Whole.—Be pleased to observe the Aspect of this august Personage. All the Brightness of the Sun, shines in his Countenance; and all the Rage of the Fire, burns in his Feet.—See his Apparel. The Clouds compose his Robe, and the Drapery of the Sky floats upon his Shoulders. The Rainbow forms his Diadem; and that which "compasseth the " Heavens with a glorious Circle," is the Ornament of his Head .-Behold his Attitude. One Foot stands on the Ocean, the other rests on the Land. The wide extended Earth, and the World of Waters, ferve as Pedestals for those mighty Columns .- Consider the Action. Hand is lifted up to the Height of the Stars. He speaks; and the Regions of the Firmament echo with the mighty Accents, as the midnight Defart resounds with the Lion's Roar. The Artillery of the Skies is discharged at the Signal; a Peal of sevenfold Thunder spreads the Alarm; and prepares the Universe to receive his Orders.-To finish all; and give the highest Grandeur, as well as the utmost Solemnity, to the Representation; hear the Decree that issues from his Mouth. fwears by HIM that liveth for ever and ever. In whatever Manner, fo majestic a Person had expressed Himself; He could not fail of commanding universal Attention. But when he confirms his Speech, by a most facred and inviolable Oath; we are not only wrapt in filent Sufpenie, but overwhelmed with the profoundest Awe. He swears, That Time shall be no longer. Was ever Voice so full of Terror; so big with Wonder? It proclaims, not the Fall of Empires, but the final Period of Things. It strikes off the Wheels of Nature; bids Ages and Generations cease to roll: and with one potent Word, configns a whole World over to Diffolution.—This is one among a Multitude of very fublime and masterly Strokes, to be found in that too much neglected Book-the BIBLE.

a few Moments only—to be thrown back from the opening Eternity; Thousands of Worlds would not be able to procure the Grant.

SHALL I, now, be industrious to shorten, what is no longer than a Span; or to quicken the Pace of what is ever on the Wing? Shall I fquander away what is unutterably important, while it lasts; and, when once departed, is altogether irrevocable! O! my Soul, forbear the Folly; forbear the desperate Extravagance. Wilt thou chide as a Loiterer, the Arrow that boundeth from the String; or fweeps away Diamonds, as the Refuse of thy House ?-Throw Time away! Astonishing, ruinous, irreparable Profuseness! Throw Empires away, and be blameless. But O! be parsimonious of thy Days; husband thy precious Hours. They go connected, indiffolubly connected, with Heaven or Hell *. Improved, they are a fure Pledge of everlafting Glory; wasted, they are a fad Preface to never-ending Confusion and Anguish.

What a profound Silence has composed the World! So prosound is the Silence, that my very Breath seems a Noise; the Ticking of my Watch is distinctly heard; if I do but stir, it creates a Disturbance.—There is, now, none of that confused Din, from the tumultuous City: No Voice of jovial Rustics, from the neighbouring Mea-

* I remember to have seen upon a Sun-dial in a Physician's Garden at Northampton, the following Inscription; which, I think, is the most proper Motto for the Instrument, that Measures our Time; and the most striking Admonition, that can possibly be presented to every Eye.

AB HOC MOMENTO PENDET ÆTERNITAS.

The weighty Sense of which, I know not how to express in English, more happily than in those Words of Dr. Watts;

Good God! on what a flender Thread
[Or, on what a Moment of Time]
Hang everlafting Things!

dow:

clow: No chirping Melody from the shady Thicket.— Every Lip is sealed. Not the least Whisper, invades the Air; not the least Motion, rustles among the Boughs. Echo, herself, sleeps unmolested. The expanded Ear, though all Attention, catches no Sound, but the liquid Lapse of a distant murmuring Stream.

All Things are hush'd, as Nature's Self lay dead.

IF, in the midst of this deep and universal Compofure, Ten Thousand bellowing Thunders should burst over my Head; and rend the Skies, with their united Vollies; how should I bear so unexpected a Shock? It would frun my Senses, and confound my Thoughts. I should shudder in every Limb; perhaps, fink to the Earth with Terror.—Confider then, O Mortals! confider the much more prodigious and amazing Call, which will, ere long, alarm your fleeping Bones. When the Tenants of the Tomb have slumbered, in the most undisturbed Repose, for a Multitude of Ages; what an inconceivable Consternation must the Shout of the Archangel, and the Trump of God, occasion! Will it not wound the Ear of the Ungodly; and affright, even to Diffraction, the impenitent Sinner? The stupendous Peal will found through the Vast of Heaven; will shake the Foundations of Nature; and pierce even the deepest Recesses of the Grave. And how—O! how will the Prisoners of Divine Justice, be able to endure that tremendous Summons, to a far more tremendous Tribunal? -Do Thou, my Soul, listen to the still Voice of the Gospel. Attend, in this thy Day, to the gracious Invitations of thy Saviour. Then, shall that great midnight Cry lofe its Horror, and be Music in thy Ears. It shall be welcome to thy reviving Clay, as the Tidings of Liberty, to the Dungeon Captive; as the Year of Jubilee to the harraffed Slave. This, this shall be its charming Import; "Awake, and fing, ye that dwell in Dust*.

WHAT a general Ceffation of Affairs, has this dufky Hour introduced! A little while ago, all was Hurry, Hurry. Life and Activity exerted themselves in a thoufand bufy Forms. The City fwarmed, with passing and repassing Multitudes. All the Country was Sweat and Duft. The Air floated in perpetual Agitation, by the flitting Birds, and humming Bees. Art fat prying with her piercing Eyes; while Industry plied her restless Hands,—But see; how all this fervent, and impetuous Bustle, is fled with the setting Sun. The Beasts are flunk, to their graffy Couch; and the winged People are retired, to their downy Nests. The Hammer has refigned its founding Task, and the File ceases to repeat its flying Touches. Shut is the well-frequented Shop, and its Threshold no longer worn by the Feet of numerous Customers. The Village-Swain lies drowned in Slumbers; and even his trufty Dog, who, for a confiderable Time flood Centry at the Door, is extended at his Ease, and snores with his Master.—In every Place Toil reclines her Head, and Application folds her Arms. All Interests seem to be forgot; all Pursuits are suspended; all Employment is funk away; funk away with those fluttering Myriads, which lately fported in the Sun's departing Rays.—'Tis like the Sabbath of univerfal Nature; or as though the Pulse of Life stood still.

Thus will it be, with our infinitely momentous Concerns; when once the Shadows of the Evening, (that long Evening, which follows the Footsteps of Death!) are stretched over Us. The Dead cannot seek unto God; the Living, the Living alone, are possessed of this inestimable Opportunity *. "There is no Work or De"vice, no Repentance or Amendment, in the Grave †,

^{*} Ifa. xxvi. 19.

"whither We are All hasting." When once that closing Scene is advanced, We shall have no other Part to act on this earthly Theatre. Then, the Sluggard, who has slumbered away Life in a criminal Inactivity, must lie down in hopeless Distress, and everlasting Sorrow. Then, that awful Doom will take place, "He that is holy, let "Him be holy still; and he that is filthy, let Him be "filthy for ever."

Is it fo, my Soul? Is this the only, only Time allotted, for obtaining the great Reward, and making thy Salvation fure? And art Thou lulled in a vain Security; or dreaming in a fupine Inadvertency? Start, O! ftart from thy Trance. Gird up the Loins of thy Mind, and

* Behold! Now is the accepted Time. Behold! Now, is the Day of Salvation. 2 Cor. vi. 2.

Hafte, hafte, He lies in wait, He's at the Door, Infidious Death! Shou'd his strong Hand arrest, No Composition sets the Pris'ner free.

+ They who are gone down to the Grave, are represented (1/a. xxxviii. (1.) by the Phrase, חדל יושבי—rendered by Vitringa, Those that inhabit the Land of Intermission or Cessation .- Which prevents all Appearance of Tautology in the Sentence; and is, I think, a valuable Improvement of the Translation: as it conveys an Idea, not only diftinct from the preceding, but of a very poetical and very afflicting Nature; fuch as was perfectly natural for the Royal Singer, and Royal Sufferer to dwell upon, in his desponding Moments.—Thus interpreted the Sense will run; " I shall see Man no more; I shall be cut off from " the chearful Ways of Men, and all the Sweets of human Society. "And, what is a farther Aggravation of the threatened Stroke, I " shall, by its taking Place, be numbered with Those, that inherit the " Land of Coffation and Inactivity. Where there will be no more Pos-" fibility of contributing to the Happiness of my Kingdom; no more " Opportunity of advancing my Creator's Glory; or of making my own final Salvation fure."-A Sentiment like this, is grand, important, and full of Benevolence; removes all Suspicion of unbecoming Pufillanimity, and does the highest Honour to the Monarch's Character.

work

work while it is Day. Improve the present Seed-time, that Eternity may yield a joyful Harvest.—We especially, who are Watchmen in Ifrael, and Ministers of the glorious Gospel; may We be awakened, by this Consideration, to all Assiduity in our holy Ossice. Some or other of our People, are ever and anon departing into the invisible State; all our Friends, are making incesfant Approaches to their long Home; and we ourselves, shall very shortly be transmitted to the Confinement of the Tomb. This is the favourite Juncture, wherein alone we can contribute to their endless Welfare. This is the Crisis, the all-important Crisis, of their final Felicity. Infantly, therefore, let us pour in our wholefome Instructions; instantly, let Us ply them with our earnest Exhortations. A Moment's Delay, may be an irreparable Lofs; may be irretrievable Ruin. While we procrastinate, a fatal Stroke may intervene; and place Us, beyond the Power of administering; or place Them, beyond all Possibility of receiving, any spiritual Good *.

How frequently is the Face of Nature changed! and, by changing, made more agreeable!—The long-continued Glitter of the Day, renders the foothing Shades of the Evening doubly welcome. Nor does the Morn ever purple the East with so engaging a Lustre, as after the Gloom of a dark and dismal Night.—At present, a Calm of Tranquillity is spread through the Universe. The weary Winds have forgot to blow. The gentle Gales have fanned themselves asleep. Not so much as a single Leaf nods. Even the quivering Aspin rests. And not one Breath curls o'er the Stream.—Sometimes, on the contrary, the Tempest summons all the Forces of the Air; and pours itself, with resistless Fury, from the angry North. The whole Atmosphere is tossed into tumultuous Consussion, and the watry World is heaved to the Clouds. The astonished Mariner, and his straining Vessel, now scale the rolling Mountain, and hang dreadfully visible on the broken Surge: now shoot, with headlong Impetuosity, into the yawning Gulf; and neither Hulk, nor Mast, is seen. The Storm sweeps over the Continent: raves along the City-streets: struggles through the Forest-boughs; and terrifies the savage Nations with a Howl, more wildly horrid than their own. The knotty Oaks bend before the Blast; their Iron Trunks groan; and their stubborn Limbs are dashed to the Ground. The losty Dome rocks; and even the solid Tower totters on its Basis.

^{*} The Case, represented by the Prophet (1 Kings xx. 40.) seems persectly applicable on the Occasion. As thy Servant was busy here and there, He was gone. So, while we are either remiss in our Function, or laying ourselves out upon inserior Cares, the People of our Charge may be gone:—gone beyond the Insluence of our Counsels; beyond the Reach of our Prayers:—gone into the unchangeable and eternal State.

Such Variations are kindly contrived, and with an evident Condescension to the Fickleness of our Taste. Because, a perpetual Repetition of the same Objects, would create Satiety, and Disgust; therefore, the indulgent Father of our Race has diversified the universal Scene, and bid every Appearance bring with it the Charm of Novelty.—This Circumstance is beneficial as well as entertaining. Providence, ever gracious to Mortals; ever intent upon promoting our Felicity; has taken Care to mingle, in the Constitution of Things, what is pleasing to our Imagination, with what is ferviceable to our Interests. The piercing Winds, and rugged Aspect of Winter, render the balmy Gales, and flowery Scenes of Spring, peculiarly delightful. At the same Time, the keen Frosts mellow the Soil, and prepare it for the Hand of Industry. The rushing Rains impreg-impregnate the Glebe, and fit it to become a Magazine of Plenty. The Earth is a great Laboratory; and December's Cold collects the gross Materials, which are fublimated by the refining Warmth of May. The Air is a pure elastic Fluid; and were it always to remain in this motionless Serenity, it would lose much of its active Spring; was it never agitated by those wholesome Concussions, it would contract a noisome, perhaps, a peftilential Taint. In which Cases, our Respiration, instead of purifying, would corrupt the vital Juices; instead of supplying Us with Refreshment, would be a Source of Difeases; or every Gasp We draw, might be unavoidable Death *.-How then should we admire, how should we adore, that happy Union of Benignity and Wisdom; which, from a Variety of Dispensations, produces an Uniformity of Good! Produces a perpetual Succession of Delights, and an uninterrupted Series of Advantages!

THE Darkness is now at its Height; and I cannot but admire the obliging Manner of its taking place. It comes not with a blunt and abrupt Incivility, but makes

* Confidering the immense Quantity of Coals, and other combustible Materials, which are daily confumed, and evaporate into the Air. Confidering the numberless Steams, and Clouds of Smoke, which almost continually overwhelm populous Cities; -- the noisome Exhalations. which arise from thronged Infirmaries, and loathsome Jayls; from stagnating Lakes, and putrid Fens;—the Variety of offensive and unwholesome Effluvia, which proceed from other Causes; -it is a very remarkable Instance of a Providence, at once tenderly kind, and infinitely powerful, that Mankind is not sufficiated with Stench; that the Air is not choaked with Filth .- The Air is the common Server, into which ten Thousand Times ten Thousand Nuisances are incessantly discharged; yet it is preferved fo thoroughly clear, as to afford the most transparent Medium for Vision; so delicately undulatory, as to transmit, with all imaginable Distinctness, every Diversity of Sound; so perfectly pure, as to be the constant Refiner of the Fluids, in every Animal that breathes.

gentle and respectful Advances. A precipitate Transition, from the Splendors of Day, to all the Horrors of Midnight, would be inconvenient and frightful. It would bewilder the Traveller in his Journey; it would strike the Creation with Amazement; and, perhaps, be pernicious to the Organs of Sight. Therefore the Gloom rushes not upon us instantaneously, but increases by flow. Degrees; and, sending Twilight before as its Harbinger, decently advertises us of its Approach. By this means, we are neither alarmed, nor incommodated, by the Change; but are able to take all suitable and timely Measures, for its Reception.—Thus graciously has Providence regulated, not only the grand Vicissitudes of the Seasons, but also the common Interchanges of Light and Darkness, with an apparent Reserence to our Comfort.

Now, the fierce Inhabitants of the Forest forsake their Dens. A thousand grim Forms, a thousand growling Monsters, pace the Desart. Death is in their Jaws, while stung with Hunger, and athirst for Blood, they roam their nightly rounds,—Unfortunate the Traveller, who is overtaken by the Night, in those dismal Wilds! How must be stand aghast, at the mingled Yell of ravenous Throats, and Lions roaring after their Prey! Desend Him, propitious Heaven! or else He must see his endearing Spouse, and hail his native Home, no more!—Now, the prowling Wolf, like a murderous Russian, dogs the Shepherd's Footsteps, and besets his bleating Charge. The Fox, like a crafty Felon, steals to the thatched Cottage, and carries off the seathered Booty.

HAPPY for the World, were these the only Destroyers that walk in Darkness. But, alas! there are Savages in human Shape; who, mussled in Shades, insest the Abodes of civilized Life. The Sons of Violence make Choice of this Season *, to perpetrate the most outrageous Acts of Wrong and Robbery. The Adulterer waiteth for the Twilight; and, baser than the Villain on the Highway, betrays the Honour of his Bosom-friend. Now, Faction forms her close Cabals, and whispers her traiterous Instinuations. Now, Rebellion plans her accursed Plots, and prepares the Train to blow a Nation into Ruin. Now Crimes, which hide their odious Heads in the Day, haunt the Seats of Society, and stalk through the Gloom with audacious Front. Now, the Vermin of the Stews crawl from their lurking Holes, to wallow in Sin, and spread Contagion through the Night. Each soothing himself with the fond Notion, That all is safe; That no Eye sees.

this

Are They then concealed? Preposterous Madmen! To draw the Curtain between their infamous Practices, and a little Set of Mortals; but lay them open, to all these chaste and wakeful Eyes of Heaven †! As though the Moon and Stars were made, to light Men to their Revels, and not to GOD.—Are they then concealed? No, truly. Was every one of these vigilant Luminaries closed; an Eye keener than the Lightning's Flash, an Eye brighter than Ten thousand Suns, beholds their every Motion. Their thickest Shades are beaming Day ‡, to the jealous Inspector, and supreme Judge of human Actions.—Deluded Creatures! have ye not heard, have

^{* —} When Night
Darkens the Streets, then wander forth the Sons
Of Belial, flown with Infolence and Wine.

MILT.

^{† —} Sed Luna videt, fed Sidera Tesles
Intendunt Oculos.

[†] This is finely, and very forcibly, expressed by the Psalmist: If I say, Peradventure the Darkness shall cover me; then shall my Night be turned to Day. Or, as it may be rendered somewhat more emphatically, Fron the Night shall be broad Day-light all around me. Ps. cxxxix. 10.

ye not read, "That Clouds and Darkness are HIS "majestic Residence *?" In that very Gloom, to which you sly for Covert, he erects his Throne. What you reckon your Screen, is the Bar of his Tribunal. O! remember this! Stand in Awe, and sin not. Remember, that the great and terrible God is about your Path; when you take your midnight Range; is about your Bed, when you indulge the loose Desire; and spies out all your Ways, be they ever so secretly conducted, or artfully disguised.

Some Minutes ago, a Passenger crossed along the Road. His Horse's Foot struck the Ground, and setched Fire from a Flint. My Eye, though at a Distance, catched the View; and saw, with great Clearness, the transient Sparkles: Of which, had I been ever so near, I should not have discerned the least Glimpse, under the Blaze of Day.—So ‡, when Sickness has drawn a Veil over the Gaiety of our Hearts; when Missortunes have eclipsed the Splendor of our outward Circumstances; how many important Convictions present themselves, with

* Pfal. xcvii. 2.

† The original Words are much stronger than the Translation המכנחה signify, Thou fiftest my Path, and art intimately acquainted with all my ways. The former, I apprehend, denoting the exact Cognizance, which the Almighty taketh; the latter implying the constant Inspection, which he exerciseth; over all the Circumstances of our Conduct. Pfal. exxxix. 2.

† I beg Leave to inform the young gentleman, whose Name dignifies my Dedication: That this was a Remark of his honoured Father, when we rode together, and conversed in a dusky Evening. I mention this Circumstance, partly, to secure the Paragraph from Contempt; partly, to give Him, and the World, an Idea of that eminently serious Taste, which distinguished my deceased Friend.—The less obvious the Reslection, the more clearly it discovers a Turn of Mind, remarkably spiritual; which would suffer nothing to escape, without yielding some religious Improvement. The meaner the Incident, the more admirable was that Fertility of Imagination; which could deduce the sublimest Truths, from the most trivial Occurrences.

the

the brightest Evidence! Under the Sun-shine of Profperity, they lay undifcovered; but, when fome intervening Cloud has darkened the Scene, they emerge from their Obscurity, and even glitter upon our Minds. Then, the World, that delusive Cheat, confesses her Emptiness: but Jesus, the bright and Morning Star, beams forth with inimitable Lustre. Then, Vice loses all her fallacious Allurements; that painted Strumpet is horrible, as the Hags of Hell: but Virtue, despised Virtue, gains Loveliness from a louring Providence, and treads the Shades with more than mortal Charms.-May this reconcile me, and all the Sons of Sorrow, to our appointed Share of Sufferings! If Tribulation tend to diffipate the inward Darkness, and pour heavenly Dew upon our Minds; welcome Distress; welcome Disappointment; welcome whatever our froward Flesh, or peevish Passions, would miscal Calamities. These light Afflictions, which are but for a Moment, shall sit easy upon our Spirits; fince they befriend our Knowledge; promote our Faith; and so "work out for us, a far more " exceeding and eternal Weight of Glory *."

How has this Darkness snatched every splendid and graceful Object from my Sight! It has dashed the Sponge over the Pictures of Spring, and destroyed all the delicate Distinctions of Things. Where are now the fine Tinges, which so lately charmed me from the glowing Parterre? The Blush is struck out, from the Cheeks of the Rose; and the snowy Hue, is dropt from the Lily. I cast my Eyes toward a magnificent Seat; but the aspiring Columns, and sair expanded Front, are mingled in rude Consusion. Without the Sun, all the Elegance of the blooming World, is a mere blank; all the Symmetry of Architecture, is a shapeless Heap.

^{* 2} Cor. iv. 17. The great Stephens, that Oracle of Grecian Learning, translates xall varifolding, Quo nibil majus dici aut fingi potest. But now does the Sense rise! How is the Idea enlarged, under Tavo such forcible Expressions! xall varifolding the lively Description, and the nervous Diction. It is one of those exquisite Passages in the inspired Writings, which, like some rich aromatic Plants, cannot be transferred from their own generous and native Soil, without being impaired in their Vivacity, and losing much of their Delicacy. Perhaps, the sollowing Version may be somewhat less injurious to the facred Original, than the common Translation.—Our very light Afsiction, which is but just for the present Moment, worketh out a far more exceeding, an incomparably great, and eternal Weight of Glory.

Is not this an expressive Emblem of the Loveliness. which the Sun of Righteousness transfuses into all that is amiable? Was it not for Jesus, and his Merits, I should figh with Anguish of Spirit; even while I rove through Ranks of the most beautiful Flowers, or breathe amidst a Wilderness of Sweets. Was it not for Jesus, and his Merits; I should roam like some disconsolate Spectre, even through the Smiles of Creation, and the Caresses of Fortune. My Conversation in this World, though dressed in the most engaging Forms of external Pleasure, would be like the Passage of a condemned Malefactor, through enamelled Meadows, and Bowers of Bliss, to be broke upon the Wheel, or to expire on the Rack. But a daily Reflection, on the LAMB's atoning Blood; a comfortable Trust, that my Soul is reconciled through this divine Expiation; this is the Ray, the golden Ray, which irradiates the Face of the Universe. This is the Oil of Beauty, which makes all Things wear a chearful Afpect; and the Oil of Gladness, which disposes the Spectator to behold them with Delight *. This, this is the fecret Charm,

*Thus applied, that fine Piece of Flattery, addressed to the Heathen Emperor, is strictly and literally true.

— Vulțus ubi tuus Affulsit populo, gratior it dies, Et soles melius nitent.

HORAT.

Charm, which teaches Nature, in all her Prospects and all her Productions, so exquisitely to please.

"Man goeth forth to his Work, and to his Labour, "till the Evening." But then his Strength fails; his Spirits flag; and he stands in need, not only of some Respite from Toil, but of some kindly and sovereign Refreshments.—What an admirable Provision for this Purpose, is Sleep! Sleep introduces a most welcome Vacation, both for the Soul and Body. The Exercises of the Brain, and the Labours of the Hand, are at once difcontinued. So that the weary Limbs repair their exhaufted Vigour; while the penfive Thoughts drop their Load of Sorrows, and the busy ones rest from the Fatigue of Application.—Most reviving Cordial! Equally beneficial to our animal and intellectual Powers. It supplies the fleshly Machine, and keeps all its nice Movements in a proper Posture for easy Play. It animates the thinking Faculties with fresh Alacrity, and rekindles their Ardor for the Studies of the Dawn. Without thefe enlivening Recruits, how foon would the most robust Conflitution, be wasted into a walking Skeleten: and the most learned Sage, degenerate into a hoary Idiot!—Some Time ago, I beheld, with Surprize, poor Florio. His Air was wild; his Countenance meagre; his Thoughts roving, and Speech difconcerted. Inquiring the Caufe of this strange Alteration, I was informed, That, for se-

Which I would cast in a Christian Mould, and thus translate:

When Faith prefents the Saviour's Death, And whifpers, "This is thine;" Sweetly my rifing Hours advance, And peacefully decline.

While such my Views, the radiant Sun Sheds a more sprightly Ray; Each Object smiles; all Nature charms: I and my Cares away.

R

veral

veral Nights, he had not closed his Eyes in Sleep. For want of which noble Restorative, that sprightly Youth, (who was once the Life of the Discourse, and the Darling of the Company) is become a Spectacle of Misery and Horror.

How many of my Fellow-creatures are, at this very Instant, confined to the Bed of Languishing; and complaining, with that illustrious Sufferer of old, Wearisome Nights are appointed to me *! Instead of indulging soft Repose, they are counting the tedious Hours; telling every striking Clock; or measuring the very Moments, by their throbbing Pulse. How many, harraffed with Pain, most passionately long to make some little Truce with their Agonies, in peaceful Slumbers! How many, fick with Disquietude, and restless even on their downy Pillows, would purchase this transient Oblivion of their Woes, almost at any Rate!-That, which Wealth cannot procure; which Multitudes figh for in vain; thy Gop has bestowed on Thee, Times out of Number. The welcome Vifitant, punctual at the needed Hour, has entered thy Chamber, and poured his Poppies round thy Couch. Has gently closed thy Eye-lids, and shed his flumberous Dews over all thy Senses.

SINCE Sleep is so absolutely necessary; so inestimably valuable: observe, what a fine Apparatus Almighty Goodness has made, to accommodate us with the balmy Blessing. With how kind a Precaution He removes whatever might obstruct its Access, or impede its Influence! He draws around us the Curtain of Darkness; which inclines us to a drowfy Indolence, and conceals every Object, that might too strongly agitate the Sense. He conveys Peace into our Apartments; and imposes Silence, on the whole Creation. Every Animal is bidden to tread foftly, or rather to cease from its Motion, when Man is retiring to his Repose.—May we not discern, in this gracious Disposition of Things, the tender Cares of a Nursing-Mother; who hushes every Noise, and secludes every Disturbance, when She has laid the Child of her Love to Rest? So, by such soothing Circumstances, and gently-working Opiates, HE giveth to his Beloved Sleep*.

ANOTHER fignal Instance of a Providence intent upon our Welfare, is, that we are preserved fase in the Hours of Slumber. How are we then lost to all Apprehension of Danger; even though the Murderer be at our Bedside, or his naked Sword at our Breast! Destitute of all Concern for ourselves, we are unable to think of, much more to provide for, our own Security. At these Moments, therefore, we lie open to innumerable Perils: Perils, from the resistless Rage of Flames: Perils, from the insiduous Artifices of Thieves, or the outrageous Violence of Robbers: Perils, from the irregular Workings † of our own Thoughts, and especially from the Incursions of our spiritual Enemy.

Wнат

* Pfal. cxxvii. 2.

† I think, it is referable only to a superintending, and watchful Providence, that We are not hurried into the most pernicious Actions, when our Imagination is heated, and our Reason supsified by Dreams.—We have sometimes heard of unfortunate Persons, who, walking in their Sleep, have thrown themselves headlong from a Window, and been dashed to Death on the Pebbles. And whence is it, that such disastrous Accidents are only related as Pieces of News, not experienced by Ourselves, or our Families? Were our Minds more sober in their Operations, or more circumspect in their Regards? No, verily: Nothing could be more wild, than their Excursions; and None could be more inattentive to their own Welfare. Therefore, if We have laid Us dowin, and slept in Peace; it was, because the LORD vouchsafed Us the sweet Refreshment: if We rose again in Safety; it was, because the LORD suspained Us with his unremitted Protection.

Will the candid Reader excuse me, if I add a short Story; or rather a Matter of Fast, suitable to the preceding Remark?—Two Persons,

WHAT dreadful Mischief might that restless, that implacable Adversary of Mankind work, was there not an invisible Hand to controul his Rage, and protect poor Mortals! What Scenes of Horror might he represent to our Imaginations, and "fcare us with Dreams, or "terrify us with Visions *!" But the Keeper of Israel, who never flumbers nor fleeps, interpofes in our Behalf; at once to cherish us under his Wings, and to defend us with a Shield .- It is faid of Solomon, "That Threefcore " valiant Men were about his Bed; all expert in War; " every one with his Sword upon his Thigh, because of " Fear in the Night †." But One greater than Solomon: One mightier than Myriads of armed Hosts; even the great Jehovah, in whom is everlasting Strength: He vouchsafes to encamp about our Houses; to watch over our fleeping Minutes, and to flop all the Avenues of Ill.-O! the unwearied and condescending Goodness of our Creator! Who lulls us to our Rest, by bringing on the who had been hunting together in the Day, slept together the following Night. One of them was renewing the Pursuit in his Dream; and, having run the whole Circle of the Chace, came, at last, to the Fall of the Stag. Upon this, He cries out with a determined Ardor: Pll kill kim: Pll kill kim: and immediately feels for the Knife, which he carried in his Pocket. His Companion happening to be awake, and observing what passed, leaped from the Bed. Being secure from Danger, and the Moon shining into the Room, He stood to view the Event. When, to his inexpressible Surprize, the infatuated Sportsman gave several deadly Stabs, in the very Place, where, a Moment before, the Throat and the Life of his Friend lay.—This I mention, as a Proof, that nothing hinders Us, even from being Assassins of Others, or Murderers of Ourselves, amidst the mad Sallies of Sleep; only the preventing Care of our Heavenly Father.

* What a complete Master that malignant Spirit is, in exhibiting crificnary Representations, appears from his Conduct towards Christ, on the high Mountain; and that he is too ready, if not restrained by an over-railing Power, to employ his Dexterity in afflicting Mankind, is, evident from his Treatment of Job. See Luke is. 5. Job vii. 14.

filent Shades; and plants his own ever-watchful Eye as our Centinel, while we enjoy the needful Repole.

REASON, now, refigns her fedate Office; and Fancy, extravagant Fancy, leads the Mind through a Maze of Vanity. The Head is crouded with false Images, and tantalized with the most ridiculous Misapprehensions of Things. Some, are expatiating amidst Fairy Fields, and gathering Garlands of visionary Blifs; while their Bodies are stretched on a Whisp of Straw, and sheltered by the Cobwebs of a Barn. Others, quite infensible of their Rooms of State, are mourning in a doleful Dungeon, or ftruggling with the raging Billows. Perhaps, with hasty Steps, they climb the craggy Cliff; and, with real Anxiety, fly from the imaginary Danger. Or elfe, benumbed with sudden Fear, and finding themselves unable to escape, they give up at once their Hopes, and their Efforts; and, though reclined on a Couch of Ivory, are finking, all helpless and distressed, in the furious Whirlpool. So unaccountable are the Vagaries of the Brain, while Sleep maintains its Dominion over the Limbs!

But is This the only Seafon, when abfurd incoherent Irregularities play their Magic on our Minds? Are there not those who dream, even in their waking Moments!—Some pride themselves in a Notion of superior Excellency, because the Royal Favour has annexed a few splendid Titles to their Names; or because the dying Silkworm has bequeathed her finest Threads, to cover their Nakedness.—Others congratulate their own signal Happiness, because Loads of golden Lumber are amassed together in their Cossers; or promise themselves a most superlative Felicity indeed, when some Thousands more are added to the useless Heap.—Nor are there wanting Others, who gape after substantial Satisfer faction from airy Applause; and flatter themselves with, I know not what, Immortality in the momentary Buz of Renown.—Are any of These a whit more reasonable in their Opinions, than the poor ragged Wretch in his Reveries; who, while fnoring under a Hedge, exults in the Poffession of his stately Palace, and sumptuous Furniture?—If Persons, who are very Vassals to their own domineering Passions, and led captive by numberless Temptations: if these Persons pique themselves with a Conceit of their Liberty, and fancy themselves the generous and gallant Spirits of the Age: where is the Difference between Theirs, and the Madman's Frenzy; who, though chained to the Floor, is throned in Thought, and wielding an imaginary Sceptre?-In a Word; as many as borrow their Dignity from a Plume of Feathers, or the gaudy Trappings of Fortune; as many as fend their Souls to feek for Bliss in the Blandishments of Sense, or in any Thing short of the divine Favour, and a wellgrounded Hope of the incorruptible Inheritance *: what are they, but Dreamers with their Eyes open; delirious, though in Health!

Would you see their Picture, drawn to the very Lite; and the Success of their Schemes, calculated with the utmost Exactness; cast your Eye upon that fine Representation, exhibited by the Prophet: It shall be even as when a hungry Man dreameth, and behold, he eateth; but he awaketh, and his Soul is empty: Or as when a thirsty Man dreameth, and behold, he drinketh; but he awaketh, and behold, he is faint, and his Soul hath Appetite †. Such is the Race, and such the Prize, of all those Candidates for Honour and Joy; who run wide from the Mark of the high Calling of God, in Christ Jesus. They live in Vanity, and die in Woe.—Awaken us, merciful Lord, from these noon-tide Trances! Awaken us, while Conviction may turn to our Advantage, and not serve only to increase our Torment. O! let our "Eyes be enlightened, to discern the Things that are "excellent;" and no longer be imposed upon by fantastic Appearances, which, however pompous they may seem, will prove more empty than the Visions of the Night, more transfent than the Dream that is forgotten.

MILT. Comus.

^{*} These give a facred, and home-felt Delight, A folior Certainty of waking Blis,

HAVING mentioned Sleep and Dreams, let me once again confider those remarkable Incidents of our Frame; fo very remarkable, that I may venture to call them, a kind of experimental Mystery, and little less than a standing Miracle.—Behold the most vigorous Constitution, when stretched on the Bed of Ease, and totally resigned to the Slumbers of the Night. Its Activity is oppressed with Fetters of Indolence; its Strength is configned over to a temporary Annihilation; the Nerves are like a Bow unstrung, and the whole animal System is like a motionless Log.—Behold a Person of the most delicate Sensations, and amiable Dispositions. His Eyes, though thrown wide open, admit not the visual Ray; at least, distinguish not Objects. His Ears, with the Organs unimpaired, and articulate Accents beating upon the Drum, perceive not the Sound; at least, apprehend not the Meaning. The Senfes, and their exquisitely fine Feelings, are overwhelmed with an unaccountable Stupefaction. You call him a focial Creature; but where are his focial Affections? He knows not the Father, that begat him; and takes no Notice of the Friend, that is as his own Soul. The Wife of his Boson may expire by his Side, and He lie more unconcerned than a Barbarian. The Children of his Body, may be tortured with the feverest Pangs; and He, even in the fame Chamber, remain untouched with the leaft Commisferation.—Behold the most ingenious Scholar: whose Judgment is piercing, and able to trace the most intricate Difficulties of Science; his Taite refined, and quick to relish all the Beauties of Sentiment and Composition. Yet, at this Juncture, the thinking Faculties are unhinged, and the intellectual Oeconomy quite difconcerted. Instead of close-connected Reasonings, nothing but a disjointed Huddle of abfurd Ideas: instead of well-digested Principles, nothing but a disorderly Jumble of crude Conceptions. The most palpable Delufions, impose upon his Imagination. The whole Night passes, and he frequently mistakes it for a fingle Minute: is not fenfible of the Transition, hardly fenfible of any Duration.

YET, no fooner does the Morning dawn, and Daylight enter the Room; but this strange Inchantment vanishes. The Man awakes, and finds himself possessed of all the valuable Endowments; which, for feveral Hours, were fuspended, or loft. His Sinews are braced, and fit for Action. His Senses are alert and keen. The romantic visionary brightens into the Master of Reason. The frozen or benumbed Affections, melt with Tenderness, and glow with Benevolence. And, what is beyond Measure surprizing, the intoxicated Mind works itself sober, not by flow Degrees, but, in the Twinkling of an Eye, recovers from its Perturbation.-Why does not the Stupor, which deadens all the nice Operations of the animal Powers, hold fast its Possession? When the Thoughts are once disadjusted, why are they not always in Confusion? How is it, that they are rallied in a Moment; and, from the wildest Irregularity, reduced to the most orderly Array?-From From an Inactivity, refembling Death; how is the Body fo fuddenly reftored, to Vigour and Agility? From Extravagancies, bordering upon Madness; how is the Understanding instantaneously re-established, in Sedateness and Harmony?—Surely, "this is the Lord's Doing," and it should be marvellous in our Eyes:" should awaken our Gratitude, and inspirit our Praise.

This is the Time, in which Ghosts are supposed to make their Appearance. Now, the timerous Imagination teems with Phantoms, and creates numberless Terrors to itself. Now dreary Forms, in sullen State, stalk along the Gloom; or, fwifter than Lightning, glide across the Shades. Now, Voices more than mortal * are heard from the echoing Vaults, and Groans iffue from the hollow Tombs. Now melancholy Spectres visit the Ruins of ancient Monastries, and frequent the so-litary Dwellings of the Dead. They pass and repass, in unsubstantial Images, along the forsaken Galleries; or take their determined Stand, over fome lamented Grave.—How often has the School-boy fetched a long-Circuit, and trudged many a needless Step, in order to avoid the haunted Church-yard? Or, if Necessity, fad Necessity, has obliged him to cross the Spot; where human Skulls are lodged below, and the baleful Yews shed fupernumerary Horrors above; a thousand hideous Stories rush into his Memory. Fear adds Wings to his Feet; he scarce touches the Ground; dares not once look behind him; and bleffes his good Fortune, if no frightful Sound purred at his Heels, if no ghaftly Shape bolted upon his Sight.

VIRG.

^{*} Vox quoque per lucos vulgo exaudita silentes Ingens, & simulacra modis pallentia miris Visa sub obscurum nossis—

'Tis strange, to observe the excessive Timidity, which possesses many People's Minds on this fanciful Occasion; while they are void of all Concern, on others of the most tremendous Import. Those, who are startled, in any dark and lonely Walk, at the very Apprehension of a fingle Spectre; are nevertheless unimpressed at the sure Profest, of entering into a whole World of difembodied Beings. Nay, are without any Emotions of Awe, though they know themselves to be hastening into the Presence of the Great, Infinite, and Eternal Spirit.-Should some pale Messenger from the Regions of the Dead, draw back our Curtains at the Hour of Midnight; and, appointing some particular Place, say, as the horrid Apparition to Brutus, I'll meet thee there *: I believe, the boldest Heart would feel something like a Panic; would seriously think upon the Adventure, and be in Pain for the Event. But, when a Voice from Heaven cries, in the awakening Language of the Prophet, Prepare to meet thy God, O Israel +; how little is the Warning regarded! How foon is it forgotten! Preposterous Stupidity! To be utterly unconcerned, where it is the truest Wisdom to take the Alarm; and to be all Trepidation, where there is nothing really terrible !- Do Thou, my Soul, remember thy Saviour's Admonition; "I will " forewarn you whom you shall fear. Fear not these " imaginary Horrors of the Night. But fear that awful "Being; whose Revelation of Himself, though with " Expressions of peculiar Mercy, made Meses, his fa-" vourite Servant, tremble exceedingly. Whose Mani-

^{*} The Story of Brutus, and his evil Genius, is well known. Nor must it be denied, that the precise Words of the Spectre to the Hero, were, Pll meet thee at Philippi. But, as this would not answer my Purpose, I was obliged to make an Alteration, in the Circumstance of Phice.

[†] Amos iv. 12.

"festation, when He appears with Purposes of inexorable Vengeance, will make mighty Conquerors; who were familiar with Dangers, and estranged to Disinay;
call upon the Mountains to fall on them, and the Rocks to cover them. The Menace of whose majestic Eye,

" when he comes attended with thousand Thousands of " his immortal Hofts, will make the very Heavens cleave

" afunder, and the Earth flee away.—O! dread HIS Difpleafure; fecure HIS Favour; and then Thou may'ft

" commit all thy other Anxieties to the Wind. Thou

" may'ft laugh at every other Fear."

This brings to my Mind a memorable and amazing Occurrence, recorded in the Book of Job*. Which is, I think, no inconfiderable Proof of the real Existence of Apparitions †, on some very extraordinary Emergen-

* Job iv. 12, 14, &c.

+ Is a Proof of the real Existence of Apparitions.—If the Sense, in which I have always understood this Passage, be true-Eliphaz, I apprehend, was neither in a Trance, nor in a Dream, but perfectly awake .- Though He speaks of Sleep; He speaks of it, as fallen not upon bimself, but upon other Men. He does not mention Dreams, though הלומות Somnia, would have fuited the Verse (if the Book be in Metre) altogether as well as חויונות Viscones.—It could not, furely, be a Wind, as some translate the Word nin. Because, the Circumstance of flanding fill, is not fo compatible with the Nature of a Wind; and a Wind would have passed above Him, all around Him, as well as before Him. Not to add, how low a Remark it is, and how unworthy of a Place in so august a Description, that He could not discern the Form of a Wind .- It feems, therefore, to have been a real Spirit; either Angelical as were those, which presented themselves to Abraham resling at the Door of his Tent, and to Lot fitting in the Gate of Sodom; or elfe, the Spirit of some departed Saint, as in the Case of Samuel's Apparition, or the famous Appearance of Mofes and Elijah on the Mount of Transfiguration.—A Spirit, assuming some Vehicle, in order to become visible to the human Eye. Which, accordingly, Eliphaz faw, exhibiting itself as an Object of Sight. But faw so obscurely and indidinctly, that He was not able, either to describe its Aspect, or to differn whem it refembled.

cies; while it discountenances those Legions of idle Tales, which Superstition has raised, and Credulity received. Since it teaches us, that if, at any Time, those Visitants from the unknown World, render themselves perceivable by Mortals, it is not upon any Errand of frivolous Consequence; but, to convey Intelligences of the utmost Moment, or to work Impressions of the highest Advantage.

Twas in the Dead of Night. All Nature lay shrouded in Darkness. Every Creature was buried in Sleep. The most profound Silence reigned through the Universe. In these solemn Moments, Eliphaz alone, all wakeful and folitary, was musing upon sublime and heavenly Subjects .- When, lo! an awful Being, from the invisible Realms, burst into his Apartment *. A Spirit passed before his Face. Astonishment seized the Beholder. His Bones shivered within Him; his Flesh trembled all over him; and the Hair of his Head flood erect with Horror.—Sudden and unexpected, was the Appearance of the Phantom; not such its Departure. It stood still, to present itself more fully to his View. It made a folemn Paufe, to prepare his Mind for fome momentous Message.—After which, a Voice was heard. A Voice, for the Importance of its Meaning, worthy to be had in

* I have given this folemn Picture a modern Drefs, rather for the Sake of Variety and Illustration, than from any Apprehension of improving the admirable Original. Such an Attempt, I am sensible, would be more absurdly vain, than to lacquer Gold, or paint the Diamond. The Description, in Eliphaz's own Language, is awful and affecting to the last Degree. A Night-Piece, dressed in all the Circumstances of the deepest Horror. I question, whether Shakspeare himself, though so peculiarly happy for his great Command of terrifying Images, has any Thing superior or comparable to this. The Judges of sine Composition see the masterly Strokes; and, I believe, the most ordinary Reader seels them, chilling his Blood, and awakening Emotions of Dread in his Mind.

everlasting

everlatting Remembrance; for the Solemnity of its Delivery, enough to alarm a Heart of Stone. It spoke; and this was the Purport of its Words ;-" Shall Man, " frail Man, be just before the mighty GOD? shall even " the most accomplished of Mortals be pure in the Sight of his " Maker *? Behold, and confider it attentively. He put " no fuch Trust in bis most exalted Servants, as should " bespeak them incapable of Desect. And his very An-" gels he charged with Folly; as finking, even in the " highest Persection of their Holiness, infinitely beneath " his transcendent Glories; as falling, even in all the " Fidelity of their Obedience, inexpressibly short of the " Homage due to his adorable Majesty. If angelic Na-" tures must not presume to justify, either Themselves, " or their Services, before uncreated Purity; how much " more abfurd is fuch a Notion, how much more impi-" ous such an Attempt, in Them that dwell in Houses of " Clay; whose Original is from the Dust, and whose " State is all Imperfection!"

I would observe from hence, the very singular Necessity of that Poverty of Spirit, which intirely renounces its own Attainments; and most thankfully submits to the Righteousness of the incarnate God.—To inculcate this Lesson, the Son of the Blessed came down from Heaven; and pressed no other Principle, with so re-

^{*} There feems to be a fignificant and beautiful Gradation in the Hebrew Words with and day, which I have endeavoured to preferve by a Sort of paraphrafic Version.—The Reader will observe a new Turn given to the Sentiment; preferable, I think, to that which our English Translation exhibits. Not, shall Man be more just than GOD? But, shall Man be just before, or in the Sight of GOD? The Passage, thus rendered, speaks a Truth incomparably more weighty, and needful to be inculcated. A Truth, exactly parallel to that humbling Confession of the Prophet, We are all as an unclean Thing; and to that solemn Declaration of the Psalmist, In thy Sight, shall no Man Eveny be justified.

peated * an Importunity, on his Hearers. To inftil the fame Doctrine, the Holy Ghost touched the Lips of the Apostles with facred Eloquence; and made it an eminent Part of their Commission, "to demolish every "high Imagination." That no Expedient might be wanting, to give it a deep and lasting Esticacy on the human Mind; a Phantom arises from the Valley of the Shadow of Death, or a Teacher descends from the Habitation of Spirits.—Whatever then we neglect; let us not neglect to cultivate this Grace, which has been so variously taught, so powerfully enforced.

HARK! a doleful Voice—With fudden Starts, and hideous Screams, it disturbs the Silence of the peaceful Night. 'Tis the Screech-owl, sometimes in frantic, sometimes in disconsolate Accents, uttering her Woes †. She slies the vocal Grove, and shuns the Society of all the feathered Choir. The blooming Gardens, and slowery Meads, have no Charms for her. Obscene Shades, ragged Ruins, and Walls overgrown with Ivy, are her favourite Haunts. Above, the mouldering Precipice nods, and threatens a Fall: below, the Toad crawls, or Thus sung that charming Genius, that Prince of the ancient Poets, that most consummate Master of Elegance and Accuracy; all whose Sentiments are Nature, whose every Description is a Picture, whose whole Language is Music—VIEGIL.

^{*} It is well worthy of our Observation, says an excellent Commentator, "That no one Sentence uttered by our Lord, is so "frequently repeated as this; Whosever shall exalt himself, shall be "abased; and he that shall humble himself, shall be exalted." Which often occurs in the Evangelists; but is never duly accomplished in Us, till We disclaim all Pretension to Merit and Righteousness of our own, and seek them only in the Atonement and Obedience of Jesus Christ.

[†] Solaque culminibus ferali carmine bubo Sæpe queri, longasque in stetum ducere voces.

the poisonous Adder hisses. The sprightly Morning, which awakens other Animals into Joy, administers no Pleasure to this gloomy Recluse. Even the smiling Face of Day, is her Aversion; and all its lovely Scenes create nothing but Uneasiness.

So, just fo, would it fare with the Ungodly; were it possible to suppose their Admission, into the chaste and bright Abodes of endless Felicity. They would find nothing but Difappointment and Shame, even at the Fountain-Head of Happiness and Honour.-For how could the Tongue, habituated to Profaneness, taste any Delight in the harmonious Adorations of Heaven? How could the Lips, cankered with Slander, relish the Raptures of everlafting Praise? Where would be the Satisfaction of the vain Beauty, or the supercilious Grandee? Since, in the Temple of the Skies, no Incense of Flattery would be addressed to the former; nor any obsequious Homage paid to the latter.—The spotless and inconceivable Purity of the bleffed God, would flash Confusion on the lascivious Eye. The envious Mind, must be on a Rack of self-tormenting Passions; to obferve Millions of happy Beings, shining in all the Perfections of Glory, and foliacing themselves in the Fulness of Joy.-In short; the unsanctified Soul, amidst holy and triumphant Spirits; even in the refined Regions of Bliss and Immortality; would be like this melancholy Bird, diflodged from her darksome Retirement, and imprisoned under the Beams of Day *.

THE

^{*} I would beg of the Reader to observe, with what Emphasis and Propriety our Lord touches this important Point, in his memorable Reply to Nicodemus. Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a Man be born again, He CANNOT enter into the Kingdom of Heaven; q.d. "I wave the Authority of the Supreme Judge, and speak with the Condescension of a Teacher in Israel. Though I might, without being liable to the least Controul, passit into a sovereign Decree: That unrenewed Mortals.

THE Voice of this Creature screaming at our Windows, or of the Raven croaking over our Houses, is, they fay, a Token of approaching Death. There are Persons, who would regard such an Incident, with no small Degree of Solicitude. Trivial as it is; it would damp their Spirits, perhaps, break their Reft.-One cannot but wonder, that People should suffer themselves to be affrighted at fuch fantastical, and yet be quite unaffected with real, Prefages of their Diffolution. Real Prefages of this awful Event, address us from every Quarter. What are these incumbent Glooms, which overwhelm the World, but a kind of Pall provided for Nature; and an Image of that long Night, which will quickly cover the Inhabitants of the whole Earth? What an Affinity has the Sleep †, which will very foon weigh down my drowfy Eye-lids, with that State of intire Ceffation, in which all my Senses must be laid aside! The filent Chamber, and the Bed of Slumber, are a very fignificant Representation of the Land, where all Things are hushed; all Things are forgotten .- What meant that deep Death-Bell Note, which, the other Evening, faddened the Air? Laden with heaviest Accents, it struck our Ears, and feemed to knock at the Door of our Hearts. Surely, it brought a Message to surviving Mortals, and thus the Tidings ran: " Mortals, the De-" flrover of your Race is on his Way. The last Enemy

VIRG.

Mortals, who are Slaves to corrupt Appetite, SHALL NOT enter the Habitations of the Just; I rather choose to represent it, as a Case attenty impessible; and charge the Calamity, not upon Divine Severity, but upon human Folly. Such Persons, from the very Nature of Things, proclude themselves; they incapacitate their own Minds; and Contrarieties must be reconciled, before They, in their upregenerate Condition, can be Partakers of those spiritual and sublime Delights." Youn iii. 3.

Et Cominguaneus Letei Soper.

" has begun the Pursuit; and is gaining Ground upon you, every Moment. His Paths are strewed with Heaps of Slain. Even now, his Javelin has laid one of your Neighbours in the Dust; and will soon, very soon, aim the inevitable Blow at each of your Lives."

WE need not go down to the Charnel-House, nor carry our Search into the Repositories of the Dead; in order to find Memorials of our impending Doom. A Multitude of these Remembrancers are planted in all our Paths, and point the heedless Passengers to their long Home. I can hardly enter a confiderable Town, but I meet the funeral Procession, or the Mourners going about the Streets. The Hatchment suspended on the Wall, or the Crape streaming in the Air, are filent Intimations; that both Rich and Poor have been emptying their Houses, and replenishing their Sepulchres. I can fcarce join in any Conversation, but mention is made of fome that are given over by the Physician, and hovering on the Confines of Eternity; of others, that have just dropt their Clay amidst weeping Friends, and are gone to appear before the Judge of all the Earth. There's not a News-Paper comes to my Hand; but amidst all its entertaining Narrations, reads several serious Lectures of Mortality. What else are the repeated Accounts—of Age, worn out by flow-confuming Sicknesses—of Youth, dashed to Pieces by some sudden Stroke of Cafualty-of Patriots, exchanging their Seats in the Senate, for a Lodging in the Tomb-of Misers, refigning their Breath, and (O relentless Destiny!) leaving their very Riches for others? Even the Vehicles of our Amusement, are Registers of the Deceased; and the Voice of Fame feldom founds, but in Concert with a Knell.

THESE Monitors croud every Place; not fo much as the Scenes of our Diversion excepted. What are the Decorations of our public Buildings, and the most elegant Furniture of our Parlours; but the Imagery of Death, and Trophies of the Tomb? That marble But; and those gilded Pictures; how solemnly they recognize the Fate of others, and speakingly remind us of our own!—I see, I hear, and O! I feel this great Truth. It is interwoven with my Constitution. The frequent Decays of the Structure foretel its final Ruin. What are all the Pains, that have been darted through my Limbs; what every Disease, that has assaulted my Health; but the advanced Guards of the Foe? What are the Languors and Weariness, that attend the Labours of each revolving Day; but the more secret Practices of the Adversary, slowly undermining the earthly Tabernacle?

Amidst fo many Notices, shall we go on thoughtless and unconcerned? Can none of the Prognoftics, which are fure as Oracles, awaken our Attention, and engage our Circumspection? Noah, 'tis written, being warned of GOD, prepared an Ark. Imitate, my Soul, imitate this excellent Example. Admonished by such a Cloud of Witnesses, be continually putting thyself in a Readiness for the last Change. Let not that Day, of which thou hast so many infallible Signs, come upon thee unawares .- Get the Ivy untwined, and thy Affections difentangled from this inchanting World; that thou may'ft be able to quit it, without Reluctance. Get the dreadful Hand-writing cancelled, and all thy Sins blotted out; that thou may'ft depart in Peace, and have nothing to fear at the decifive Tribunal. Get, O! get thyfelf interested in the Redeemer's Merits, and transformed into his facred Image; then, shalt Thou be meet for the Inheritance of Saints in Light, and may'ft even defire to be diffolved, and to be with CHRIST.

Sometimes, in my Evening Walk, I have heard

———The wakeful Bird
Sing darkling, and, in shadiest Covert bid,
Tune her notturnal Note*.

How different the Airs of this charming Songster, from those harsh and boding Outeries! The little Creature ran through all the Variations of Music; and shewed herself Mistress of every Grace, which constitutes or embellishes Harmony.—Sometimes, she swells a manly Throat, and her Song kindles into Ardor. The Tone is so bold, and strikes with such Energy, you would imagine the sprightly Serenader in the very next Thicket. Anon, the Strain languishes, and the mournful Warbler melts into Tenderness. The melancholy Notes just steal upon the Shades, and faintly touch your Ear; or in soft and sadly-pleasing Accents, they seem to die along the distant Vale. Silence is pleased, and Night listens to the trilling Tale.

What an Invitation is this, to slip away from the thronged City! This coy and modest Minstrel, entertains only the Lovers of Retirement. Those, who are carousing over their Bowls, or ranting at the riotous Club, lose this Feast of Harmony.—In like manner, the Pleasures of Religion, and the Joy of Reconciliation with God; the Satisfactions arising, from an established Interest in Christ, and from the Prospect of a blissful Immortality; these are all lost to the Mind, that is ever in the Croud; and dares not, or delights not, to retire into itself.—Are we charmed with the Nightingale's Song! Do we wish to have it nearer, and hear it oftener? Let us seek a renewed Heart, and a resigned Will; a Conscience that whispers Peace, and Passions that are tuned by Grace. Then, shall we never want a Melody in our own Breasts, far more musically pleasing, than sweet Philomela's sweetest Strains.

^{*} MILT. Par. Loft, B. III. 1. 33.

As different as the Voices of these Birds, are the Circumstances of those few Persons, who continue awake.— Some are fquandering, Pearls shall I say, or Kingdoms? No; but what is unspeakably more precious, Time. Squandering this ineftimable Talent, with the most fenseless and wanton Prodigality. Not content with allowing a few spare Minutes, for the Purpose of necessary Recreation; they lavish many Hours, devote whole Nights, to that idle Diversion of shuffling, ranging, and detaching a Set of painted Pasteboards.—Others, instead of this bufy Trifling, act the Part of their own Tormentors. They even piquet themselves *, and call it Amusement; they are torn by wild Horses, yet term it a Sport. What elle is the Gamester's Practice? His Mind is stretched on the Tenter-Hooks of anxious Suspence, and agitated by the fiercest Extremes of Hope and Fear! While the Dice are rattling, his Heart is throbbing; his Fortune is tottering; and, possibly, at the very next Throw, the one finks in the Gulph of Ruin, the other is hurried into the Rage of Distraction.

Some, finatched from the Bloom of Health, and the Lap of Plenty, are confined to the Chamber of Sicknefs. Where they are conftrained, either to plunge into the everlafting World, in an unprepared Condition; or elfe (fad Alternative!) to think over all the Follies of a heedlefs Life, and all the Bitternefs of approaching Death. The Difease rages; it baffles the Force of Medicine; and urges the reluctant Wretch, to the Brink of the Precipice. While Furies rouse the Conscience, and point at the bottomless Pit below.—Perhaps, his drooping Mother, deprived long ago of the Husband of her Bosom, and berest of all her other Offspring; is, even now, receiving the Blow which consummates her Calamities*. In vain, she tries to asswage the Sorrows of a beloved Son; in vain, she attempts, with her tender Offices, to prolong a Life, dearer than her own. He faints in her Arms; he bows his Head; he sinks in Death. Fatal, doubly satal, that last expiring Pang! While it dislodges the unwilling Soul, it rends an only Child, from the yearning Embraces of a Parent; and tears away the Support of her Age, from a disconsolate Widow.

^{*} Alluding to a very painful Punishment, inflicted on Delinquents among the Soldiery.

WHILE Those long for a Reprieve; Others invite the Stroke. Quite weary of the World, with a restless Impatience, they sigh for Dissolution. Some, pining away under the tedious Decays of an incurable Consumption; or gasping for Breath, and almost suffocated, by an Inundation of dropsical Waters. On some a relentless Cancer has sastened its envenomed Teeth; and is gnawing

* This brings to my Mind one of the deepest Mourning-Pieces, extant in the Productions of the Pen. The facred Historian paints it, in all the Simplicity of Stile, yet with all the Strength of colouring .-When JESUS came nigh to the Gate of the City, behold! there was a dead Man carried cut, the only Son of his Mother, and she was a Widow. -What a Gradation is here! How pathetically beautiful! every fresh Circumstance, widens the Wound; aggravates the Calamity; till the Description is worked up into the most finished Picture of exquisite and inconfolable Diffress .- He was a young Man: cut off in the Flower of Life, amidst a Thousand gay Expectations, and smiling Hopes. A Son, an only Son; the afflicted Mother's All. So that none remained to preserve the Name, or perpetuate the Family. What rendered the Case still more deplorable, She was a Widow : left intirely desolate; abandoned to her Woes; without any to share her Sorrows, or to comfort her under the irreparable Loss.—Is not this a fine Sketch of the Impassioned and Pissuresque? Who can consider the Narrative, with any Attention; and not feel his Heart penetrated, with a tender Commiseration? Luke vii. 12.

them, though in the midst of bodily Vigour, in the midst of pitying Friends, gradually to Death. Others are on a Rack of Agonies, by convulsive Fits of the Stone. O! how the Pain writhes their Limbs; how the Sweat bedews their Flesh; and their Eye-balls wildly roll! Methinks, the Night condoles with these her distressed Children; and sheds dewy Tears, over their forrowful Abodes.—But of all Mortals, They are the most exquisitely miterable, who groan beneath the Pressure of a melancholy Mind; or smart under the Lashes of a refentful Conscience. Though robed in Ermine; or covered with Jewels; the State of a Slave chained to the Gallies, or of an Exile condemned to the Mines, is a persect Paradise compared with theirs.

O! that the Votaries of Mirth; whose Life is a continued Round of Merriment and Whim; would bestow one serious Reslection, on this Variety of human Woes! It might teach them to be less enamoured, with the sew languid Sweets; that are thinly scattered through this Vale of Tears, and environed with such a Multitude of rugged Thorns. It might teach them, no longer to dance away their Years, with a giddy rambling Impulse; but to aspire, with a determined Aim, after those happy Regions, where Delights, abundant and unembittered, slow.

Can there be Circumstances, which a Man of Wisdom would more earnestly deprecate, than these several Instances of grievous Tribulation? There are; and, what is very astonishing, they are frequently the Desire and the Choice of Those, who fancy themselves the sole Heirs of Happiness. Those I mean, who are launching out into the Depths of Extravagance, and running excessive Lengths of Riet: who are prostituting their Reputation, and facrificing their Peace, to the Gratistation cation of their Lusts; sapping the Foundation of their Health, in Debaucheries; or shipwrecking the Interests of their Families, in their Bowls. And, what is worfe, are forfeiting the Joys of an eternal Heaven, for the fordid Satisfactions of the Beaft; for the transitory Sensations of an Hour.-Ye Slaves of Appetite, how far am I from envying your gross Sensualities, and voluptuous Revels! Little, ah! little are you fenfible; that, while Indulgence thowers her Rofes, and Luxury diffuses her Odours; they featter Poisons also, and shed unheeded Bane *. Evils, incomparably more malignant, than the Wormwood and Gall of the sharpest Affliction.-Since Death is in the Drunkard's Cup; and worse than Poinards in the Harlot's Embrace; may it ever be the Privilege of the Man whom I love, to go without his Share of these pestilent Sweets +!

ABUNDANCE of living Sparks glitter in the Lanes, and twinkle under the Hedges. I suppose, they are the Glow-worms; which have lighted their little Lamps, and obtained Leave, through the Absence of the Sun, to play a feeble Beam. A faint Glimmer, just serves to render them perceivable; without tending at all to dissipate the Shades, or making any Amends for the departed Day.—Should some weather-beaten Traveller, dropping with Wet, and shivering with Cold, hover round this Miniery of Fire; in order to dry his Garments, and warm his benumbed Limbs. Should some bewildered Traveller; groping for his Way, in a starless Night and trackless Defart; take one of these languid Tapers. as a Light to his Feet, and a Lantern to his Paths. How certainly would both the one, and the other, be fruftrated of their Expectation !- And are They more likely to fucceed, who, neglecting that fovereign Balm, which distilled from the Cross; apply any carnal Diversion, to heal the Anxiety of the Mind? Who, deaf to the infallible Decisions of Revelation; resign themselves over to the erroneous Conjectures of Reason, in order to find the Way that leadeth unto Life? Or lastly, who have Recourse to the Froth of this vain World, for a satisfactory Portion, and a fubstantial Happiness? Their Conduct is in no Degree wifer; their Disappointment equally fure; and their Miscarriage infinitely more disastrous. To speak in the delicate Language of a facred Writer, "they fow the Wind, and will reap the Whirlwind *."

^{*} Yes; in the Flow'rs that wreathe the sparkling Bowl, Fell Adders his, and pois'nous Serpents roll.

⁺ Quam fuave of fuavitatibus iftis carere! was St. Augustine's pious Exclamation. The Substance of which Mr. Pope has expressed, with more Simplicity, and with no less Dignity.

Count all th' Advantage prosp'rous Vice attains, 'Fis but what Virtue slies from, and distains.

To speak more plainly; the Pleasures of the World, which we are All so prone to dote upon; and the Powers, of fallen Reason, which Some are apt to idolize; are

* Hof. viii. 7.

† I hope, it will be observed, That I am far from decrying that noble Faculty of Reason, when exerted in her proper Sphere; when acting in a deferential Subordination to the revealed Will of Heaven. While She exercises her Powers within these appointed Limits, She is unspeakably serviceable; and cannot be too industriously cultivated.—But, when she sets up herself in preud Contra-distinction to the sacred Oracles; when, all arrogant and self-sufficient, She says to the Word of Scripture, I have no Need of Thee: She is then, I must be bold to maintain, not only a Glow-worm, but an Ignis setums; not only a Bubble, but a Snare.

May not this Remark, with the strictest Propriety; and without the least Limitation; be applied to the Generality of our Modern Romances, Novels, and theatrical Entertainments? These are commonly calculated, to instame a wanton Fancy. Or, if conducted with so much Modesty, as not to debauch the Affections; they pervert the Judgment, and bewilder the Tasse. By their incredible Adventures; their extra-not only vain, but treacherous. Not only a painted Flame, like these sparkling Animals; but much like those unctuous Exhalations, which arise from the marshy Ground, and often dance before the Eyes of the benighted Wayfaring Man. Kindled into a Sort of Fire, they personate a Guide, and seem to offer their Service: but, blazing with delusive Light, mislead their Follower into hidden Pits, headlong Precipices, and unfathomable Gulfs. Where, far from his beloved Friends, far from all Hopes of Succour, the unhappy Wanderer is swallowed up, and lost.

Not long ago, we observed a very surprising Appearance in the Western Sky. A prodigicus Star took its slaming Route through those Coasts; and trailed, as it passed, a tremendous Length of Fire, almost over half the Heavens. Some, I imagine, viewed the portentous Stranger with much the same anxious Amazement; a Belshazzar beheld the Hand-writing upon the Wall. Some looked upon it as a bloody * Flag; hung out by Divine Resentment, over a guilty World. Some read, in its glaring Visage, the Fate of Nations, and the Fall of Kingdoms †. To others, it shook, or seemed to shake, Pestilence and War from its horrid Hair.—For my Part; I am not so superstitious as to regard, what every Astrologer has to prognosticate; upon the Accession of a Comet, or the Projection of its hugh vapoury vagant Parade of Gallantry; and their Characters, widely different from Truth and Nature; they inspire foolish Conceits: beget idle Expectations: introduce a Difgust of genuine History: and indispose their Admirers, to acquiesce in the decent Civilities, or to relish the sober Satisfactions, of common Life.

Virg.

† — Crinemque timendi Sideris, & terris mutantem regna cometem. Lucan.

^{* —} Liquida si quando nocte cometæ Sanguinei lugubre rubent.—

Train. Nothing can be more precarious, and unjustifiable, than to draw such Conclusions from such Events: Since they neither are preternatural Effects, nor do they throw the Frame of Things into any Disorder. I would rather adore that omnipotent Being, who rolled those stupendous Orbs from his creating Hand; and leads them, by his providential Eye, through unmeasurable Tracts of Æther. Who bids them, now, approach the Sun, and glow with unsufferable Ardors*; now, retreat to the utmost Bounds of our Planetary System, and make their Entry among other Worlds.

THEY are harmless Visitants. I acquit them from the Charge of causing, or being accessary to, desolating Plagues. Would to God, there were no other more formidable Indications, of approaching Judgments, or impending Ruin! But, alas! when Vice becomes predominant, and Irreligion almost epidemical; when the Sabbaths of a jealous God, are notoriously profaned; and that "Name, which is great, wonderful, and holy," is proflituted to the meaneft, or abused to the most execrable Purpofes: when the Worship of our great Creator and Preserver is banished, from many of the most eonspicuous Families; and it is deemed a Piece of rude Impertinence, fo much as to mention the gracious Redeemer, in our genteel Interviews: when it passes for an elegant Freedom of Behaviour, to ridicule the Mytteries of Christianity; and a Species of refined Conversation, to taint the Air with lascivious Hints: when those, who fit in the Scorner's Chair, fin with a high Hand: and ^{* &}quot;The Comet in the Year 1680, according to Sir Isaac Newton's "Computation, was, in its nearest Approach, above 166 Times nearer the Sun than the Earth is. Confequently, its Heat was then 28000 Times greater than that of Summer. So that a Ball of Iron as big as the Earth, heated by it, would hardly become cool in 50000 many of those, who wear the Professor's Garb, are destitute of the Power, and content themselves with the mere Form of Godliness: when such is the State of a Community, there is Reason, too apparent Reason, to be horribly assaid. Such Phænomena, abounding in the moral World, are not fanciful, but real Omens. Will not an injured God "be avenged on such a Nation as "this?" Will he not be provoked, to "sweep it with "the Besom of Destruction *?"

[&]quot;Years." DERH. Afte. Theol. p. 237.

O! THAT the Inhabitants of Great Britain, would lay these alarming Considerations to Heart! The Lord of Hosts has commanded the Sword of civil Discord, to return into its Sheath. But have we returned, every one from his evil Ways! Are we become a renewed People; devoted to a dying Saviour; and zealous of good Works?—What mean those Peals of Sobs, which burst from the expiring Cattle? What mean those melancholy Moans, where the lusty Droves were wont to low †? What mean those Arrows of untimely Death, discharged on our innocent and useful Animals?

No Wantonness or Sloth, has vitiated the Blood of these laborious, temperate Creatures. They have contracted no Disease, from unseasonable Indulgencies, and inordinate Revelings. The pure Stream is their Drink;

- * Ifa. xiv. 23. The eternal Sovereign, speaking of Babylon, denounces this Threatening, I will fweep it with the Beson of Destruction.

 What a noble but dreadful Image, is here! How strongly and awfully pourtrayed! How pregnant also in its Signification! Intimating the wile Nature, and expressing the total Extirpation, of this wicked People; at the same Time, suggesting the perfect Ease, with which the righteous God would execute his intended Vengeance.
- † If these Papers should be so happy as to outlive their Author; perhaps, it may be needful to inform Posterity, that the above-mentioned Hints, allude to a most terrible, contagious, and mortal Distemper, raging among the borned Cattle, in various Parts of the Kingdom.

the simple Herb their Repast. Neither Care disturbs their Sleep, nor Passion inflames their Breast. Whence then are they visited with such terrible Disorders, as no Prudence can prevent, nor any Medicines heal?—Surely, these Calamities are the Weapons of Divine Displeasure, and manifest Chastisements of an evil Generation *. Surely God, the "God to whom Vengeance belongeth," has still a Controversy with our sinful Land. And who can tell, where the Visitation will end? What a Storm may follow these prelusive Drops?-O! that we may "hear the Rod, and who hath appointed it!" Taught by these penal Effects of our Disobedience, may we remove the accursed Thing +, from our Tents; our Practices; our Hearts! May we turn from all Ungodlinefs, before Wrath come upon us to the uttermost; before Iniquity prove our Ruin!

Sometimes, at this Hour, another most remarkable Sight amuses the Curious, and alarms the Vulgar. A Blaze of lambent Meteors is kindled, or some very extraordinary Lights are refracted, in the Quarters of the North.—The Streams of Radiance, like Legions rushing to the Engagement, meet and mingle; insomuch, that the Air seems to be all conflicting Fire. Within a while they start from one another; and, like Legions in precipitate Flight, sweep, each a separate Way, through the Firmament. Now they are quiescent; anon, they are thrown into a quivering Motion; presently, the whole Horizon is illuminated with the glancing Flames. Sometimes, with an Aspect awfully ludicrous, they represent

^{*} Hinc lætis vituli vulgo moriuntur in herbis,

Et dulces animas plena ad præsepia reddunt.

Balatu hinc pecorum, & crebris mugitibus amnes,

Arentesque senant ripæ, collesque sapini.

Virg.

[†] Josh, vi. 18.

extravagant and antic Vagaries. At other Times, you would suspect, that some invisible Hand was playing off the dumb Artillery of the Skies; and, by a strange Expedient, giving us the Flash, without the Roar.

THE Villagers gaze at the Spectacle, first with Wonder, then with Horror. A general Panic seizes the Country. Every Heart throbs, and every Face is pale. The Crouds that flock together, instead of diminishing, increase the Dread. They catch Contagion, from each other's Looks and Words; while Fear is in every Eye, and every Tongue speaks the Language of Terror. Some fee bideous Shapes; Armies mixing in fierce Encounter, or Fields fwimming with Blood. Some forefee direful Events; States overthrown, or mighty Monarchs tottering on their Thrones. Others, scared with still more frightful Apprehensions, think of nothing but the Day of Doom. "Sure, fays one, the unalterable "Hour is struck, and the End of all Things come.-"See, replies another, how the blafted Stars look wan! " Are not these the Signs of the Son of Man, coming " in the Clouds of Heaven?—Jesus prepare us (cries "a Third, and lifts his Eyes in Devotion) for the Arch-"angel's Trump, and the great Tribunal!"

Is this waving Brightness, which plays innocently over our Heads, be so amazing to Multitudes; what inexpressible Consternation must overwhelm unthinking Mortals, when the general Constagration commences! The Day, the dreadful Day, is approaching; "In the which "the Heavens shall pass away with a great Noise*, and "the

^{* 2} Pet. iii. 10. I have often thought this Verse an eminent Instance of that Kind of beautiful Writing, in which the very Sound bears a Sort of Significancy; at least, carries an exact Correspondence with the Sense. The original Expression—goignous—is one of the hoarsest and deepest

" the Elements shall melt with fervent Heat; the Earth " also, and all the Works that are therein, shall be burnt "up." That mighty Hand, which once opened the Windows from on High, and broke up the Fountains of the great Deep, will then unlock all the Magazines of Fire, and pour a Second Deluge upon the Earth. The vengeful Flames, kindled by the Breath of the Almighty, foread themselves from the Centre to the Circumference. Nothing can withstand their Impetuosity; nothing can escape their Rage. Universal Desolation attends their Progress. Magnificent Palaces, and solemn Temples, are laid in Ashes. Spacious Cities, and impregnable Towers, are mingled in one smoaking Mass. Not only the Productions of buman Art, but the Works of Almighty Power, are Fuel for the devouring Element. The everlafting Mountains melt, like the Snows which cover their Summit. Even vast Oceans, serve only to augment the inconceivable Rapidity and Fury of the Blaze. -O! how shall I, or others, stand undismayed amidst the Glare of a burning World; unless the LORD JE-HOVAH be our Defence? How shall we be upheld in deepest Words in Language. Nothing could be more exquisitely adapted to affect the Ear, as well as impress the Imagination, with the Wreck of Nature, and the Crash of a falling World—I scarce ever read this Clause, but it brings to my Mind that admired Description in MILTON;

——On a fudden open fly,
With impetuous Recoil, and jarring Sound,
Th' infernal Doors, and on their Hinges grate
Harl Thunder.—Book II. 1.879.

It is a pleafing Employ, and a very laudable Office of true Criticism, to point out these inserior Recommendations of the Sacred Classics. Though, I believe, the inspired Writers themselves, amidst all the Elevation and Magnificence of their Divine Ideas, distained a scrupulous Attention to such little Niceties of Stile.

Security, when the Globe itself is finking in a fiery Ruin; unless the Rock of Ages be our Support?

Benold! a new Spectacle of Wonder! The Moon is making her Entry on the eaftern Sky. See her rifing in clouded Majesty! Opening, as it were, and afferting her original Commission, to rule over the Night. All grand and flately, but somewhat fullied is her Aspect. However, the brightens, as the advances; and grows clearer, as the climbs higher. Till, at length, her Silver loses all its Dross; she unveils her peerless Light; and becomes "the Beauty of Heaven, the Glory of the "Stars *;" delighting every Eye, and chearing the whole World, with the Brightness of her Appearance, and the Softness of her Splendors.-O! thou Queen of the Shades! may it be my Ambition, to follow this thy instructive Example! While others are fond to transcribe the Fashions of little Courts, and to mimic Personages of inferior State; be it mine, to imitate thy improving Purity! May my Conduct become more unblemished, and my Temper more refined; as I proceed farther and farther, in my probationary Courfe! May every fordid Defire wear away, and every irregular Appetite be gradually loft; as I make nearer Approaches, to the celeftial Manfions!-Will not this be a comfortable Evidence, that I too shall shine, in my adored Redeemer's Kingdom? Shine, with a richer Luftre, than that which radiates from thy resplendent Orb: Shine, with an unfading Lustre, when every Rav, that beams from thy beauteous Sphere, is totally extinguished?

THE Day afforded us a Variety of entertaining Sights. These were all withdrawn, at the Accession of Darkness.

Hor.

The Stars, kindly officious, immediately lent us their Aid. This ferved to alleviate the Frown of Night; rather than to recover the Objects from their Obscurity. A faint Ray, scarcely reflected, and not from the intire Surface of Things, gave the straining Eye a very imperfect Glimpse; such as rather mocked, than satisfied Vision.—Now the Moon is risen, and has collected all her Beams, the Veil is taken off from the Countenance of Nature. I see the recumbent Flocks; I see the green Hedge-Rows, though without the feathered Choristers, hopping from Spray to Spray. In short, I see once again the World's great Picture: not indeed in its late lively Colours, but more delicately shaded, and arrayed in softer Charms*.

What a majestic Scene is here! Incomparably grand, and exquisitely fine!—The Moon, like an immense crystal Lamp, pendent in the magnificent Cieling of the Heavens. The Stars, like so many Thousands of golden Tapers, fixed in their azure Sockets. All pouring their Lustre on spacious Cities, and losty Mountains; glittering on the Ocean; gleaming on the Forest; and opening a Prospect, wide as the Eye can glance, more various than Fancy can paint †.—We are forward to admire the

^{* —} Now reigns
Full orb'd the Moon, and with more pleasing Light
Shadowy fets off the Face of Things. MILT.

As when the Moon, refulgent Lamp of Night,
O'er Heav'n's clear Azure spreads her sacred Light;
W'hen not a Breath disturbs the deep Serene,
And not a Cloud o'ercissts the solemn Scene:
Avound her Throne the wivid Planess roll,
And Stars unnumber'd gild the glowing Pole;
O'er the dark Trees a yellower Verdure shed,
And tip with Silver ev'ry Meuntain's Head;

the Performances of human Art. A Landscape, elegantly defigned, and executed with a mafterly Hand; a Piece of Statuary, which feems amidst all the Recommendations of exact Proportion, and graceful Attitude, to fosten into Flesh, and almost breathe with Life; these little Imitations of Nature, we behold with a pleafing Surprise. And shall we be less affected, less delighted with the inexpressibly noble, and completely finished Original!-The ample Dimensions of Ranelagh's Dome; the gay Illuminations of Vaux-Hall Grove; I should fcorn to mention on fuch an Occasion, were they not the Objects of general Admiration. Shall we be charmed with those puny Essays of finite Ingenuity; and touched with no Transport, at this stupendous Display of Omnipotent Skill? At the august Grandeur, and shining Stateliness, of the Firmament? which forms an Alcove for ten Thousand Worlds, and is ornamented with Myriads of everlafting Luminaries .- Surely, this must betray, not only a total Want of Religion; but the most abject Littleness of Mind, and the utmost Poverty of Genius.

THE Moon, is not barely, "an Ornament in the high "Places of the LORD *;" but of fignal Service to the Inhabitants of the Earth.—How uncomfortable is deep, pitchy, total Darkness! Especially, in the long Absence

Then shine the Vales; the Rocks in Prospect rise;

A Flood of Glory bursts from all the Skies;

The conscious Swains, rejoicing in the Sight,

Eye the blue Vault, and bless the useful Light.

Iliad VIII.

I transcribe these Lines, because Mr. Pope says, they exhibit, in the Original, the finest Night-Piece in Poetry. And, if they are so beautiful in Homer's Language; who can suspect their suffering any Disadvantage, from the Pen of this admirable Translator?

^{*} Ecclus. xliii. 9.

of the Winter's Sun. Welcome, therefore, thrice welcome, this auspicious Gift of Providence; to enliven the nocturnal Gloom, and line with Silver the raven-coloured Mantle of Night!-How defirable to have our Summer-Evenings illuminated! That we may be able to tread the dewy Meads, and breathe the delicious Fragrance of our Gardens; especially, when the fultry Heats render it irksome and satiguing, to walk abroad by Day, -How chearing to the Shepherd, the Use of this univerfal Lantern; as He tends his fleecy Charge, or late configns them to their hurdled Cots! How comfortable and how advantageous to the Mariner, as he ploughs the Midnight Main; to adjust the Tackling, to explore his Way, and, under the Influence of this beaming Sconce, to avoid the fatal Rock !-- For these, and other beneficial Purposes, the Hand of the Almighty has hung the stately Branch on high; and filled it with a Splendor, not confined to a fingle Edifice, or commensurate to a particular Square, but diffusive as the whole Extent of the Hemisphere.

THE most faithful of our inferior Servants, are sometimes tardy in their Office; fometimes negligent of their Duty. But this celeftial Attendant is most exactly punctual, at all the flated Periods of her Ministration. If we choose to prolong our Journey after the Sun is gone down; the Moon, during her whole Increase, is always ready to act in the Capacity of a Guide. If we are inclined to fet out very early in the Morning; the Moon, in her Decrease, prevents the Dawn, on purpose, to offer her Affishance. And, because it is so pleasant a Thing, for the Eyes to behold the Light; the Moon, at her full, by a Course of unintermitted Waiting, gives us, as it were, a double Day.—How apparently has the Divine Wisslom interested itself, in providing even for the pleasurable Accommedation of Man! How desirous, that He He should want no Piece of commodious Furniture; no Kind of delightful Convenience! And, in Prosecution of these benevolent Intentions, has annexed so valuable an Appendage to the terrestrial Globe.—Justly, therefore, does the Psalmist celebrate that admirable Constitution, which ordained the Meon and the Stars to govern the Night, as an Instance of rich Goodness and of Mercy which endureth for ever *.

THE Moon, it is confessed, is no luminous Body. All the Brightness, which beautifies her Countenance, is originally in the Sun, and no more than transmissively in her. That glorious Orb is the Parent of Day, and the Palace of Light. From thence, the Morning Star gilds her Horn †; from thence, the Planetary Circles are crowned with Lustre; and from thence, the Moon derives all her filver Radiance.—It is pleafing to reflect, that fuch is the Case with the all-sufficient Redeemer, and his dependent People. We are replenished from his Fulnefs. What do we posses, which we have not received: and what can we defire, which we may not expect; from that never-failing Source of all Good? He is the Author of our Faith, and the Former of our Graces. his unspotted Life, we see the Path; in his meritorious Death, the Price; and in his triumphant Refurrection, the Proof of Blifs and Immortality. If we offend, and fall Seven Times a Day; He is the Lord our Peace t.

* Pfal. cxxxvi. 9.

‡ Judg. vi. 23.

[†] I might, to justify this Expression, observe, that the Planet Venus, commonly called the Morning-Star, is found, by our Telescopes, frequently to appear horned; or to have a Crescent of Light, somewhat like the Moon, a little before or after her Conjunction. But this would be a Remark, too deep and refined for my Scheme; which proceeds only upon a superficial Knowledge, and the most obvious Appearances, of Nature.

If we are depraved, and our best Deeds very unworthy; He is the Lord our Righteousness *. If we are blind, and even brutish, in heavenly Knowledge; He is the LORD our Wisdom +: his Word dispels the Shades; his Spirit scatters the intellectual Gloom; his Eye looks our Darkness into Day. In short, we are nothing, and "CHRIST is all." Worse than defective in ourselves, " we are complete in Him." So that if we shine, it is with delegated Rays, and with borrowed Light. act by a Strength, and glory in Merits, not our own.-O! may we be thoroughly fenfible of our Dependence on the Saviour! May we constantly imbibe his propitious Beams; and never, by indulging Unbelief, or backfliding into Folly, withdraw our Souls from his benign Influences! Lest we lose our Comfort, and our Holiness; as the fair Ruler of the Night loses her Splendor, when her Urn is turned from its Fountain 1, and receives no more Communications of folar Effulgence.

The Moon is inceffantly varying, either in her Aspect, or her Stages.—Sometimes, she looks full upon us, and her Visage is all Lustre. Sometimes, she appears in Profile, and shews us only half her enlightened Face. Anon, a radiant Crescent but just adorns her Brow. Soon, it dwindles into a slender Streak. Till, at length, all her Beauty vanishes, and she becomes a beamless Orb.—Sometimes, she rises with the descending Day; and begins her Procession, amidst admiring Multitudes. Ere long she desers her Progress till the mid-night Watches; and steals unobserved, upon the sleeping World.—Sometimes,

* Jer. xxiii. 6. + 1 Cor. i. 30.

¹ Alluding to those truly poetical Lines in Milton,

Hither, as to their Fountain, other Stars

Repairing, in their golden Urns draw Light.

Par. Loft, B. VII. 1, 364.

she just enters the Edges of the Western Horizon, and drops us a ceremonious Visit. Within a while, she sets out on her nightly Tour, from the opposite Regions of the East; traverses the whole Hemisphere; and never offers to withdraw, till the more resulgent Partner of her Sway renders her Presence unnecessary.—In a Word; she is, while conversant among us, still waxing or waning, and "never continueth in one Stay."

Such is the Moon; and fuch are all fublunary Things; exposed to perpetual Vicissitudes.-How often, and how foon, have the faint Echoes of Renown flept in Silence, or been converted into the Clamours of Obloquy! The fame Lips, almost with the same Breath, cry Hosanna, and Crucify. Have not Riches confessed their notorious Treachery, a Thousand and a Thousand Times? either melting away, like Snow in our Hands, by infenfible Degrees; or escaping, like a winged Prisoner from its Cage, with a precipitate Flight.—Have we not known the Bridegroom's Closet, an Ante-chamber to the Tomb; and heard the Voice, which fo lately pronounced the sparkling Pair Husband and Wife, proclaim an everlasting Divorce; and feal the Decree with that folemn Affeveration, " Ashes to Ashes, Dust to Dust?"-Our Friends, though the Medicine of Life; our Health, though the Balm of Nature; are a most precarious Pof-How foon may the first become a Corpse in our Arms; and how eafily is the last destroyed in its Vigour?—You have feen, no doubt, a Set of pretty painted Birds, perching on your Trees, or fporting in your Meadows. You was pleased with the lovely Visitants, that brought Beauty on their Wings, and Melody in their Throats. But could you infure the Continuance of this agreeable Entertainment? No, truly. At the least disturbing Noise, at the least terrifying Appearance, they start from their Seats; they mount the Skies; and are gone in an Instant, are gone for ever. Would you chuse to have a Happiness, which bears Date with their Arrival, and expires at their Departure? If you could not be content with a Portion, enjoyable only through such a fortuitous Term, not of Years, but of Moments, O! take up with nothing earthly; set your Affections on Things above; there alone is "no Va-" riableness or Shadow of turning."

70B, is not a more illustrious Pattern of Patience, than an eminent Exemplification of this Remark.— View him in his private Eftate. He heaps up Silver as the Dust; he washes his Steps in Butter, and the Rock pours him out Rivers of Oil.—View him in his public Character. Princes revere his Dignity; the Aged liften to his Wisdom; every Eye beholds him with Delight; every Tongue loads him with Bleffings.-View him in his domestic Circumstances. On one hand, he is defended by a Troop of Sons; on the other, adorned with a Train of Daughters; and on all Sides, furrounded by "a very " great Household."—Never was human Felicity fo confummate; never was difastrous Revolution so sudden. The Lightning, which confumed his Cattle, was not more terrible, and scarce more instantaneous. The joyful Parent is bereft of his Offspring, and his "Children "are buried in Death." The Man of Affluence is ftript of his Abundance; and he, who was cloathed in Scarlet, embraces the Dung-hill. The venerable Patriarch is the Derifion of Scoundrels; and the late Darling of an indulgent Providence, is become "a Brother " to Dragons, a Companion of Owls."-Nor need we go back to former Ages, for Proofs of this afflicting Truth. In our Times; in all Times; the Wheel continues the same incessant Whirl. And frequently those, who are triumphing, To-day, in the highest Elevations of Joy; To-morrow, are bemoaning the Instability of mortal mortal Affairs, in the very Depths of Misery *.—Amidst so much Fluctuation and Uncertainty; how wretched is the Condition, which has no Anchor of the Soul, sure and stedfast. May thy Loving Kindness, O God, be our present Treasure; and thy suture Glory, our reversionary Inheritance! Then shall our Happiness, not be like the sull-orbed Moon, which is "a Light that "decreaseth in its Persection;" but like the Sun, when he goeth forth in his Strength, and knoweth no other Change, but that of shining more and more unto the persect Day.

METHINKS, in this ever-varying Sphere, I fee a Representation, not only of our temporal Advantages, but also of our fpiritual Accomplishments. Such, I am sure, is what the kind Partiality of a Friend would call my Righteousness: And such, I am apt to suspect *, is the

^{*} I believe, I may venture to apply, what the Temanite fays of the Affairs of the Wicked, to all fublunary Things; as a true Defcription of their very great Inftability. Job xxii. 16. בהר יועק יסודם rendered by Schultens, Flumen fusum fundamentum corum. Their Foundation (or what they reckon their most solid and stable Possesfion) is a Flood poured out .- Which is one of the boldest Images, and most poetical Beauties, I ever met with in any Language, sacred or profane. In order to have a tolerable Conception of the Image, and a Taste of its Beauty; you must suppose a Torrent of Waters, rushing in broken Cataracts, and with impetuous Rapidity, from a steep and craggy Mountain. Then, imagine to yourfelf an Edifice, built upon the Surge of this rolling Precipice; which has no other Basis, than one of those headlong whirling Waves. Was there ever such a Representation of transitory Prosperity, tending, with inconceivable Swiftness, unto Ruin? Yet such is every Form of human Pelicity, that is not grounded on Jesus, and a Participation of his Merits, who is the Rock of Ages; on Jesus, and his Image formed in our Hearts, which is the Hope of Glory.

[†] I would not be understood, as measuring in this Respect, others by myself; but as taking my Estimate, from the unerring Standard of T 4 Scripture, the Righteousness of every Man living. Now we exercise it, in some sew Instances; in some little Degrees. Anon, Sin revives, and leads our Souls into a transient, though unwilling Captivity. Now we are meek; but soon a ruffling Accident intervenes, and turns our Composure into a fretful Disquietude. Now we are humble; soon we reflect upon some inconsiderable or imaginary Superiority over others, and a sudden Elatement swells our Minds. Now, perhaps, we possess a clean Heart, and are warm with holy Love. But O! how easily is the Purity of our Affections sullied; how soon the Fervour of our Gratitude cooled! And is there not something amiss, even in our best Moments? Something to be ashamed of, in all we are; something to be repented of in all we do?

WITH what Gladness, therefore, and adoring Thankfulness, should we "fubmit to the Righteousness of our "incarnate Goo;" and receive, as a Divine Gift, what Scripture. And indeed, proceeding on this Evidence, supported by this Authority, I might have ventured farther than a bare Sufficion. For, "there is not a just Man upon Earth, that doeth Good, and " finneth not;" fays the Spirit of Inspiration by Solomon (Eccles. vii. 20.)-Nay, fuch is the Purity, and so extensive are the Demands of the Divine Law, that an Apostle makes a still more humbling Acknowledgment; "In many Things we offend All." (Jam. iii. 2.) - And the unerring Teacher, who most thoroughly knew our Frame, directs the most advanced, most established, and most watchful Christians, to pray daily for the Forgiveness of their daily Trespasses .- To which Testimonies, I beg Leave to add an elegant Passage from the Canticles; because, it not only expresses the Sentiment of this Paragraph, but illustrates it by the very same Similitude. She (the Church) is fair as the Moon; clear as the Sun. Fair as the Moon, the leffer and changeable Light, in her Sanctification: Clear as the Sun, the greater and invariable Luminary, in her Justification. The inherent Holiness of Believers being imperfect, and subject to many Inequalities; while their imputed Righteousness is every Way complete, and constantly like itself. Cant. vi. 10.

cannot be acquired by Human Works *!—A Writer, of the first Distinction, and nicest Discernment, stiles the Obedience of our glorious Surety, an everlasting Righteousness†. Such as was subject to no Interruption, nor obscured by the least Blemish; but proceeded always in the same uniform Tenour, of the most spotless Persection.—This Righteousness, in another Sense, answers the Prophet's exalted Description; as its beneficial and sovereign Efficacy knows no End; but lasts through all our Life; lasts in the trying Hour of Death; lasts at the decisive Day of Judgment; lasts through every Generation; and will last to all Eternity.

Sometimes, I have feen that resplendent Globe stript of her Radiance; or, according to the emphatical Language of Scripture, "turned into Blood." The Earth. interposing with its opake Body, intercepted the solar Rays, and cast its own gloomy Shadow on the Moon. The malignant Influence gained upon her fickening Orb; extinguished, more and more, the feeble Remainders of Light; till at length, like one in a deep Swoon, no Comeliness was left in her Countenance; she was totally overspread with Darkness .- At this Juncture, what a Multitude of Eyes were gazing upon the rueful Spectacle! Even of those Eyes, which disregarded the Empress of the Night; or beheld her with Indifference, when, robed in Glory, and riding in her triumphal Chariot, she shed a softer Day through the Nations. But now, under these Circumstances of Disgrace, they watch her Motions with the most prying Attention. In every Place, her Misfortune is the Object of general Observation; and the prevailing Topic of Discourse, in every Company.

^{*} Rom. v. 17.—x. 3.

⁺ Dan. ix. 24

Is it not thus, with regard to Persons of Eminence, in their respective Spheres! Kings, at the Head of their Subjects; Nobles, furrounded with their Dependents; and (after Names of fo much Grandeur, may I be allowed to add?) Ministers, labouring among their People *; are each in a confpicuous Station. Their Conduct in its minutest Step, especially in any Miscarriage, will be narrowly furveyed, and critically fcanned. Can there be a louder Call, to ponder the Paths of their Feet, and to be particularly jealous over all their Ways? -Those, who move in inferior Life, may grossly offend; and little Alarm be given; perhaps, no Notice taken. But it is not to be expected, that the least Slip in their Carriage, the least Flaw in their Character, will pass undiscovered. Malice, with her Eagle-Eyes, will be fure to difcern them; while Censure, with her shrill Trumpet, will be as far from concealing them; as Calumny. with her treacherous Whispers, from extenuating them. A Planet may fink below the Horizon; or a Star, for feveral Months, withdraw its Shining; and scarce one in ten Thousand perceive the Loss. But, if the Moon fuffers a transient Eclipse, almost half the World are Spectators of her Dishonour.

VERY different was the Case, when at this late Hour, I have taken a solitary Walk on the Western Cliss. At the Foot of the steep Mountain, the Sea, all clear and smooth, spread itself into an immense Plain, and held a watery Mirror to the Skies. Infinite Heights above, the Firmament stretched its azure Expanse; bespangled with unnumbered Stars, and adorned with the Moon, "walking in Brightness †." She seemed to contemplate herfelf, with a peculiar Pleasure; while the transparent Surface, both received, and returned her filver Image. Here, instead of being covered with Sackcloth, she shone with double Lustre; or rather, with a Lustre multiplied, in Proportion to the Number of Beholders, and their various Situations.

^{*} Ye are the Light of the World. A City that is set on a Hill, cannot be hid. Marth. v. 14.

⁺ Job xxxi. 26.

Such, methinks, is the Effect of an exemplary Behaviour, in Perfons of exalted Rank. Their Course, as it is nobly distinguished, so it will be happily influential. Others will catch the disfusive Ray; and be ambitious to resemble a Pattern, so attracting; so commanding. Their amiable Qualities, will not terminate in themselves: but we shall see them restand from their Families; their Acquaintance; their Retainers. Just as we may now behold another Moon; trembling * in the Stream; glittering in the Canal; and displaying its lovely Impress, on every Collection of Waters.

The Moon, Philosophy says, is a Sort of Sovereign over the great Deep. Her Orb, like a Royal Sceptre, sways the Ocean, and actuates the fluid Realms. It swells the Tides, and perpetuates the reciprocal Returns of Ebb and Flow. By which Means, the liquid Element purges off its Filth; and is preserved, from being putressed itself, and from poisoning the World.—Is the Moon thus operative on the vast Abyss? And shall not the Faith of eternal and infinite Delights to come, be equally efficacious on this Soul of mine?—Far above her argent Fields, are Treasures of Happiness, unseen by mortal Eye; by mortal Ear unheard; and unconceived by any human Imagination. In that desirable World, the most distinguished and exalted Homours also are conferred; in Comparison with which, the ^{*} Splendet tremulo sub Lumine Pontus. VIRG.

Thrones and Diadems of earthly Monarchs, are empty Pageants, and childish Toys.—Yonder Arch of Sapphire, with all its Spangles of Gold, is but the Floor of those Divine Abodes. What then are the Apartments; what is the Palace? How bright with Glories; how rich with Blis!

O! YE Mansions of Blessedness; ye Beauties of my Father's Kingdom; which far outshine these Lamps of the visible Heaven; transimit your sweet and winning Invitations to my Heart. Attrast and refine, all my Affections. Withdraw them from stagnating, on the fordid Shores of Flesh; never suffer them to settle, upon the impure Lees of Sense: but impress them with Emotions of restless Desire, after sublime and celestial Joys.—Joys, that will proceed, still proceed in a copious and everlasting Flow, when Seas shall cease to roll;—Joys, that will charm every Faculty with unimaginable Pleasure; when the Moon, with her waxing Splendors shall chear our Sight no more.

Enough for the present Evening. My Thoughts have been fufficiently exercifed, and my Steps begin to be attended with Weariness. Let me obey the Admonition of Nature; and give Respite to my Meditations, Slumber to my Eyes .- But stay .- Shall I retire to the Bed of Sleep, with as little Ceremony, and with as much Inartention, as the Brutes to their fordid Lair? Are no Acknowledgments due to that Divine Being, who is the Support of my Life, and the Length of my Days? Have I no farther Need of his protesting Care; no more Occasion for the Bleffings of Goodness?-Lepidus, perhaps, may laugh at the bended Knee; and have a thoufand Darts of Raillery, ready to discharge on the Practice of Devotion. The Wits I know are unmercifully fevere on, what they call, the Drudgery of Prayer, and the fantastical Rant of Praise. These they leave to the illiterate Labourer, and the mean Mechanic; or treat them, with a contemptuous Sneer, as the Parson's ignoble Trade.

the

Is it then an Instance of fuperstitious Blindness, to distinguish; or of whimsical Zeal, to celebrate; the most supereminent Excellency and Merit? Is it an ungraceful Business; or does it argue a groveling Disposition; to magnify Goodness, transcendently rich and diffusive? -What can be fo truly becoming a dependent State, as to pay our adoring Homage, to the Author of all Perfection; and profess our devoted Allegiance, to the supreme almighty Governor of the Universe?—Can any Thing more fignificantly bespeak an ingenuous Temper; or administer a more real Satisfaction to its finest Feelings; than the Exercises of penitential Devotion? By which we give Vent to an honest Anguish; or melt into filial Sorrow; for our Infensibility to the best of Friends, for our Disobedience to the best of Parents?-In a Word; can there be a more fublime Pleasure, than to dwell, in fixed Contemplation, on the Beauties of the Eternal Mind; the amiable Original of all that is fair, grand, and harmonious; the beneficent Giver of all that is convenient, comfortable, and useful?—Can there be a more advantageous Employ, than to prefent our Requests to the Father of Mercies; opening our Minds to the Irradiations of his Wisdom, and all the Faculties of our Souls to the Communications of his Grace?—It is strange, unaccountably strange, that the Notion of Dignity in Sentiment, and the Pursuit of refined Enjoyment, should ever be difunited from Devotion. That Persons, who make Pretensions to an improved Tafte, and exalted Genius, should neglect this most ennobling Intercourse, with the wisest and best of Beings; the inexhaustible Source of Honour and Toy.

SHALL I be deterred, from approaching this Source of the purest Delight? Deterred, from pursuing this highest Improvement of my Nature? Deterred from all, by a formidable Banter; or confuted, by one irrefragible Smile?—No: let the Moon, in her resplendent Sphere; and yonder Pole, with all its starry Train; witness, if I be silent Even or Morn. If I refrain to kindle in my Heart and breathe from my Lips, the reafonable Incense of Praise. Praise to that great and glorious God, who formed the Earth, and built the Skies; who poured from his Hand the watery World, and shed the all-furrounding Air abroad .- "Thou also madest " the Night, Maker Omnipotent! and Thou, the Day! "Which I, though less than the least of all thy Mer-cies, have passed in Sasety, Tranquillity, and Com-"fort.—When I was loft in the Extravagance of "Dreams, or lay immersed in the Insensibility of Sleep; "thy Hand recovered me from the temporary Lethar-"gy. Thy Hand fet a new, a delicately fine Edge, "on all my blunted Senses; and stung my Sinews "with recruited Vigour. When my Thoughts were "benumbed and stupesied, thy quickening Influence "roused them into Activity; when they were discon-" certed and wild, thy regulating Influence reduced "them into Order. Refitting me at once, to relish "the innocent Entertainments of an animal, and to "enjoy the fublime Gratifications of a rational Capa-"city.-When Darkness covered the Creation, at thy "Command, the Sun arose; painted the Flowers, and "diftinguished every Object; gave Light to my Feet, " and gave Nature, with all her beautiful Scenes, to "my Eye.—To Thee, O Thou God of my Strength, "I owe the Continuance of my Being, and the Vivacity " of my Constitution. By thy facred Order, without " any Consciousness of mine, the Wheels of Life move,

"and the crimfon Fountain plays. Over-ruled by thy exquifite Skill, it transforms itself by the nicest Ope- rations of an inexplicable kind of Chemistry, into a Variety of the finest Secretions. Which glide into the Muscles, and swell them for Action; or pour themselves into the Fluids, and repair their incessant Decays. Which cause Chearfulness to sparkle in the Eye, and Health to bloom in the Cheek.

" DISASTROUS Accidents, injurious to the Peace " of my Mind; or fatal to the Welfare of my Body; " befet my Paths. But thy Faithfulness and Truth, like " an impenetrable Shield, guarded me all around. Un-" der this Divine Protection, I walked fecure, amidst " Legions of apparent Perils; and passed unhurt, through " a far greater Multiplicity of unseen Evils. Not one of "my Bones was broken; not a fingle Shaft grazed upon "my Ease; even when the Eye that watched over me, " faw, in its wide Survey, Thousands falling beside me, in " irrecoverable Ruin; and ten Thousands deeply wounded, " on my Right-hand .- If Sickness has, at any Time, sad-"dened my Chamber, or Pain harrowed my Flesh; it " was a wholesome Discipline, and a gracious Severity. The " Chastisement proved a sovereign Medicine, to cure me " of an immoderate Fondness, for this imperfect trouble-" fome State; and to quicken my Defires, after the un-" imbittered Enjoyments of my eternal Home.—Has not "thy Munificence, unwearied and unbounded, spread "my Table; and furnished it, with the finest Wheat; re-" plenished it, with Marrow and Fatness? While Tem-"perance sweetened the Bowl; Appetite scasoned the "Dish: Contentment and Gratitude crowned the Re-" past .- Has not thy Kindness, O God of the Families " of Ifrael, preserved my affectionate Relations; who "ftudy, by their tender Offices, to fosten every Care, and " heighten every Joy? Has not thy Kindness given me "valuable Friends; whose Presence is a Cordial, to chear me in a dejected Hour; and whose Conversation, mingles Improvement with Delight?

"WHEN Sin lay difguifed amidst flowery Scenes of " Pleasure; enlightened by thy Wisdom, I discerned the " latent Mischief; made resolute by thy Grace, I shunned "the luscious Bane. If, through the Impulse of Sen"fuality, or the Violence of Passion, I have been hur-"ried into the Snare, and stung by the Serpent; thy faithful Admonitions, have recalled the foolish Waner derer; while the Blood of thy Son, has bealed his "deadly Wounds.—Some, no Doubt, have been cut " off in the Midst of their Iniquities; and transmitted, "from the Thrillings of polluted Joy, to the Agonies" of eternal Despair. Whereas, I have been distinguish-"ed by long-fuffering Mercy; and, instead of lifting up " my Eyes in Torments, to behold a Heaven irrecover-" ably lost; I may lift them up under the pleasing Views " of being admitted, ere long, into those Abodes of "endless Felicity.-In the mean Time, Thou hast " vouchfafed me the Revelation of thy Will; the In-"fluences of thy Spirit; and Abundance of the most "effectual Aids, for advancing in Knowledge, and " growing in Godliness: for becoming more conform-" able to thy Image, and more meet for thy Prefence: " for tasting the Pleasures of Religion, and securing the " Riches of Eternity.

"How various is thy Beneficence, O Thou Lover of Souls! It has unfealed a thousand Sources of Good; opened a thousand Avenues of Delight; and heaped Bleffings upon me, with a ceaseless Liberality. If I should attempt to declare them; they would be more than the starry Host, which glitter in this unclouded Sky; more than the dewy Gems, which will adorn the Face of the Morning.

"And shall I forget the GOD of my Salvation, the Author of all my Mercies? Rather let my Pulse forget to beat!—Shall I render Him no Expressions of Thankfulness? Then might all Nature reproach my Ingratitude.—Shall I rest satisfied with the bare Acknowledgment of my Lips? No: let my Life be vocal, and speak his Praise, in that only genuine, that most emphatical Language—the Language of devout Obedience. Let the Bill be drawn upon my very Heart; let all my Affections acknowledge the Draught; and let the whole Tenour of my Actions, in Time and through Eternity, be continually paying the Debt—the ever-pleasing, ever-growing Debt of Duty, Veneration, and Love.

"the Debt—the ever-pleafing, ever-growing Debt of Duty, Veneration, and Love.

"And can I, O Thou Guide of my Goings, and Guardian of all my Interests—can I distrust such signal, such experienced Goodness? Thou hast been my Helper, thro' all the busy Scenes of Day: therefore, under the Shadow of thy Wings will I repose myself, during the Darkness, the Danger, and Death like Inactivity of the Night. Whatever Desilement I have contracted, wash it thoroughly away, in redeeming Blood; and let neither the sinful Stain, nor the sinful Inclination, accompany me to my Couch!—Then, fhall I lay me down in Peace, and take my Rest; chearstudy referring it to thy all-wise Determination, whether I shall open my Eyes in this World, or awake in the unknown Regions of another."

CONTEMPLATIONS

ON THE

STARRY HEAVENS.

There dwells a noble Pathos in the Skies,
Which warms our Passions, proselytes our Hearts.
How eloquently shines the glowing Pole!
With what Authority it gives its Charge,
Remonstrating great Truths in Stile sublime!
Night-Thoughts, N° IX

CONTEMPLATIONS

ON THE

STARRY HEAVENS.

THIS Evening, I exchange the nice Retreats of Art, for the noble Theatre of Nature. Instead of measuring my Steps, under the Covert of an Harbour; let me range along the Summit, of this gently rifing Hill. -There is no Need of the leafy Shade, fince the Sun has quitted the Horizon, and with-drawn his fcorching But fee, how Advantages and Inconveniences are usually linked, and chequer our Affairs below! If the annoying Heat ceases, the Landscape, and its pleasing Scenes, are also removed.—The majestic Castle, and the lowly Cottage, are vanished together. I have lost the aspiring Mountain, and its russet Brow; I look round, but to no Purpose, for the humble Vale, and its flowery Lap. The Plains whitened with Flocks, and the Heath yellow with Furze, disappear. The advancing Night has wrapt in Darkness the long extended Fotest; and drawn her Mantle, over the Windings of the filver Stream. I no longer behold that luxuriant Fertility in the Fields; that wild Magnificence of Prospect, and endless Variety of Images; which have so often touched me with Delight, $U \cdot 3$ light, and struck me with Awe, from this commanding

THE Lofs, however, is fcarcely to be regretted; fince it is amply compensated, by the opening Beauties of the Sky. Here I enjoy a free View of the whole Hemisphere; without any Obstacle from below, to confine the exploring Eye; or any Cloud from above, to overcast the spacious Concave. 'Tis true; the lively Vermillion, which so lately streaked the Chambers of the West, is all saded. But the Planets, one after another, light up their Lamps; the Stars advance in their glittering Train; a Thousand and a Thousand Luminaries shine forth in successive Splendors; and the whole Firmament is kindled into the most beautiful Glow. The Blueness of the Æther, heightened by the Season of the Year, and still more enlivened by the Absence of the Moon, gives those Gems of Heaven the strongest Lustre.

ONE Pleasure more, the invading Gloom has not been able to fnatch, from my Sense. The Night rather improves, than destroys, the Fragrance which exhales from the blooming Beams. With these, the Sides of the sloping Declivity are lined; and with thefe, the balmy Zephyrs perfume their Wings. Does Arabia, from all her spicy Groves, breathe a more liberal, or a more charming Gale of Sweets? And, what is a peculiar Recommendation of the rural Entertainments, presented in our happy Land, they are alloyed by no Apprehensions of Danger. No poisonous Serpent, lurks under the Bloffom; nor any ravenous Beaft, lies ready to start from the Thicket.—But, I wander from a far more exalted Subject. My Thoughts, like my Affections, are too eafily diverted from the Heavens, and detained by inferior Objects. Away, my Attention, from these little Blandishments of the Earth; since all the Glories of the Sky invite thy Regard.

WE have taken a Turn among the Tombs, and viewed the folemn Memorials of the Dead: in order to learn the Vanity of mortal 'Things; and to break their foft Inchantment.—We have furveyed the Ornaments of the Garden; not that the Heart might be planted in the Parterre, or take Root among the flowery Race: but that these Delicacies of a Day, might teach us to aspire after a better Paradife; where Beauty never fades, and Delight is ever in the Bloom.—A Third Time we lighted the Candle of Meditation; and fought for Wifdom, not in the crowded City, or wrangling Schools, but in the filent and lonely Walks of antient Night *. - Let us once more include the comtemplative Vein, and raife our Speculations to those fublimer Works of the great Creator; which the Regions of the Sky contain, and this dusky Hour unveils †.

If we have discerned the Touches of his Pencil, glowing in the Colours of Spring; if we have seen a Sample of his Beneficence, exhibited in the Stores of Nature; and a Ray of his Brightness, beaming in the Blaze of Day; what an infinitely richer Field for the Display of his Perfections, are the Heavens! The Heavens, in the most emphatical Manner, declare the Glory of God. The Heavens are nobly eloquent of the Deity, and the most magnificent Heralds of their Maker's Praise. They speak to the whole Universe; for there is neither Speech so barbarous, but their Language is understood; nor Nation so distant, but their Voices are heard among them ‡.—Let me then, in this solemn Season, formed

Night-Thoughts, No IX.

[‡ Pfal. xix. 3. U 4

^{*} Referring to the feveral Subjects of the Three preceding Effays.

[†] Night opes the noblest Scenes, and sheds an Awe, Which gives those venerable Scenes sull Weight, And deep Reception in th' entender'd Heart.

for Thought, and a calm Intercourse with Heaven; let me listen to their silent Lectures. Perhaps, I may receive such impressive Manisestations of "the eternal "Power and Godhead," as may shed Religion on my Soul, while I walk the solitary Shades; and may be a tutelary Friend to my Virtue, when the Call of Business, and the Return of Light, expose me again to the Inroads of Temptation.

THE Ifraelites, instigated by Frenzy rather than Devotion, worshipped the Host of Heaven. And the Pretenders to judicial Astrology talk of, I know not what, mysterious Esticacy; in the different Aspect of the Stars, or the various Conjunction and Opposition of the Planets. -Let those, who are unacquainted with the fure Word of Revelation, give ear to these Sons of Delusion, and Dealers in Deceit. For my Part, it is a Question of Indifference to me, whether the Constellations shone with Smiles, or loured in Frowns, on the Hour of my Nativity. Let Christ be my Guard; and, fecure in fuch a Protection, I would laugh at their impotent Menaces. Let Christ be my Guide; and I shall scorn to ask, as well as despair of receiving, any predictory Information from fuch fenfeless Masses.-What! shall " the Living feek to the Dead ?" Can these Bodies advertise me of future Events, which are unconscious of their own Existence? Shall I have Recourse to dull unintelligent Matter, when I may apply to that all-wife Being; who, with one comprehensive Glance, distinctly views whatever is lodged in the Bosom of Immensity, or forming in the Womb of Futurity?-Never, never will I fearch for any Imitations of my Fate; but often trace my Creator's Fcotsteps, in yonder starry Plains. In the former Case, they would be Teachers of Lyes; in the latter, they are Oracles of Truth. In this therefore, this Sense only, I profess myself the Pupil of the Stars.

The Vulgar, are apprehensive of nothing more, than a Multitude of bright Spangles, dropt over the æthereal Blue. They have no higher Notion of these sine Appearances, than that they are so many golden Studs, with which the Empyrean Arch is decorated.—But studious Minds, that carry a more accurate and strict Inquiry among the celestial Bodies, bring back Advices of a most assonishing Import. Let me just recollect the most material of those students Discoveries; in order to surnish out proper Subjects for Contemplation. And let the Unlearned remember, That the Scene I am going to display, is the Workmanship of that incomprehensible God, who is "perfect in Knowledge, and mighty in "Power." Whose Name, whose Nature, and all whose ^{* &}quot;It is most becoming (fays a great Author) such imperfect Crea-"tares as we are, to contemplate the Works of GOD, with this De-" fign, that we may difcern the Manifestations of Wildom in them; " and thereby excite in ourselves those devout Affections, and that " fuperlative Respect, which is the very Essence of Praise, as it is a " reasonable and moral Service." ABERNETHY on the Attributes .-And, indeed, if we are fincerely disposed to employ ourselves in this excellent, this delightful Duty of praising the infinite Creator; the Means, and the Metives, are both at Hand. His Works, in a wonderful and inftructive Variety, present themselves; with pregnant Manifedations of the most transcendant Excellencies of their Maker. They pour their Evidence from all Quarters, and into all the Avenues of the Mind. They invite us, especially in the magnificent System of the Universe, to contemplate—Counsel, confummately wise; and Execution, inimitably perfect: -Power, to which nothing is impossible; and Goodness, which extendeth to All, which endureth for ever .- To give, not a full Display, but only some flight Strictures, of these glorious Truths, is the principal Scope of the following Remarks.

Operations, are "great and marvellous." Who fummons into Being, with equal Ease, a single Grain, or ten thousand Worlds.—To this if we continually advert, the Assertions, though they will certainly excite our Admiration, need not transcend our Belief.

The Earth is, in Fact, a round Body; however it may be feen, in fome Parts, to be funk into Vales, and raifed into Hills*; in other Parts, to be fpread into a fpacious Plain, extending to the Confines of the Heavens, or terminated by the Waters of the Ocean.—We may fancy, that it has deep Foundations, and refts upon fome prodigiously solid Basis. But it is pendent, in the wide transpicuous Æther; without any visible Cause, to uphold it from above, or support it from beneath.—It may seem to be sedentary in its Attitude, and motionless in its Situation. But it is continually failing †, thro' the Depth of the Sky; and in the Space of Twelve Months, sinishes the mighty Voyage. Which periodical Rotation, produces the Seasons, and completes the Year.—As it proceeds in the annual Circuit, it spins

^{*} A learned Writer, I think, Dr. Derham, has somewhere an Obfervation to this Purpose—That the lostiest Summits of Hills, and the most enormous Ridges of Mountains, are no real Objection to the globular or round Form of the Earth. Because, however, they may render it, to our limited Sight, vastly uneven and protuberant; yet, they bear no more Proportion to the intire Surface of the terraqueous Ball, than a Particle of Dust, casually dropt on the Mathematician's Globe, bears to its whole Circumference. Consequently, the rotund Figure is no more destroyed in the former Case, than in the latter.—On the same Principle, I have not thought it necessary, to take any Notice of the comparatively small Difference, between the Polar and Equatorial Diameter of the Earth.

[†] With what amazing Speed, this Vessel (if I may carry on the Allusion,) filled with a Multitude of Nations, and freighted with all their Possessions, makes her Way through the ethereal Space, see Page 316, in Note.

upon its own Centre; and turns its Sides, alternately to the Fountain of Light. By which means, the Day dawns in one Hemisphere; while the Night succeeds in the other. Without this Expedient, one Part of its Regions would, during half the great Revolution, be scorched with excessive Heat, or languish under an unintermitted Glare: while the other, exposed to the contrary Extremes, would be frozen to Ice, and buried under a long Oppression of dismal and destructive Darkness.

I CANNOT forbear taking Notice; that, in this compound Motion of the Earth, the one never interferes with the other, but both are perfectly compatible. Is it not thus, with the Precepts of Religion, and the needful Affairs of the present Life; not excepting even the innocent Gratifications of our Appetites?—Some, I believe, are apt to imagine, that they must renounce Society, if they devote themselves to CHRIST; and abandon all the Satisfactions of this World, if they once become zealous Candidates for the Felicity of another.-But this is a very mistaken Notion, or else a very injurious Representation, of the Doctrine which is according to Godliness. It was never intended to drive Men into Defarts; but to lead them, through the peaceful and pleafant Paths of Wifdom, into the blifsful Regions of Life eternal. It was never intended to strike off the Wheels of Business, or cut in funder the Sinews of Industry; but rather, to make Men industrious from a Principle of Conscience, not from the Instigations of Avarice; that fo, they may promote their immortal Happiness, even while they provide for their temporal Maintenance. It has no Defign to extirpate our Passions, but only to reftrain their Irregularities; neither would it extinguish the Delights of Sense, but prevent them from evaporating into Vanity, and fübfiding into Gall .- A Perfon Person may be chearful among his Friends, and yet joyful in GOD. He may taste the Sweets of his earthly Estate; and, at the same Time, cherish his Hopes of a nobler Inheritance in Heaven. The Trader may profecute the Demands of Commerce, without neglecting to negociate the Affairs of his Salvation. The Warrior may wear his Sword; may draw, in a just Cause, that murderous Weapon; yet be a good Soldier of JESUS CHRIST, and obtain the Crown that fadeth not away. The Parent may lay up a competent Portion for his Children, and not forfeit his Title to the Treasures, either of Grace or of Glory.—So far is Christianity, from obstructing any valuable Interest, or with-holding any real Pleasure; that it improves the one, and advances the other. Just as the diurnal and annual Motions, are so far from clashing, that they intirely accord; and, instead of being destructive of each other, by mutually blending their Effects, they give Proportion and Harmony to Time, Fertility and innumerable Benefits to Nature.

To Us, who dwell on its Surface, the Earth is by far the most extensive Orb; that our Eyes can, anywhere, behold. It is also cloathed with Verdure; distinguished by Trees; and adorned with a Variety of beautiful Decorations. Whereas, to a Spectator placed on one of the Planets, it wears an uniform Aspect; looks all luminous, and no larger than a Spot. To Beings, who dwell at still greater Distances, it intirely disappears.—That which we call, alternately, the Morning and the Evening Star; as in one Part of her Orbit, she rides foremost in the Procession of Night; in the other, ushers in and anticipates the Dawn; is a planetary World. Which, with the four others, that so wonderfully vary their mystic Dance, are in themselves dark Bodies, and shine only by Reslexion: have Fields, and Seas, and Skies, of their own: are furnished with all Accommodations for animal Subfishence, and are supposed to be the Abodes of intellectual Life. All which, together with this our earthly Habitation, are dependent on that grand Dispenser of divine Munisicence, the Sun; receive their Light from the Distribution of his Rays, and derive their Comforts from his benign Agency.

own:

THE Sun, which feems to perform its daily Stages through the Sky, is, in this respect *, fixed and immove-'Tis the great Axle of Heaven, about which the Globe we inhabit, and other more spacious Orbs, wheel their flated Courses.—The Sun, though seemingly smaller than the Dial it illuminates, is abundantly larger + than this whole Earth; on which so many lofty Mountains rife, and fuch vast Oceans roll. A Line, extending from Side to Side, through the Centre of that resplendent Orb, would measure more than eight hundred thousand Miles: a Girdle, formed to go round its Circumference, would require a Length of Millions: were its folid Contents to be estimated, the Account would over-whelm our Understanding, and be almost beyond the Power of Language to express t.—Are we startled at these Reports of Philosophy? Are we ready to cry out, in a Transport

- * I fay, in this refpect; that I may not seem to forget, or exclude, the Revolution of the Sun round its own Axis.
- + A hundred thousand Times, according to the lowest Reckoning. Sir Is AAC NEWTON computes the Sun to be 900,000 Times bigger than the Earth. Religious Philosopher, p. 749.
- † Dr. Derham, after having calculated the Dimensions of the Planets, adds; "Amazing as these Masses are, they are all far out"done by that supendous Globe of Light, the Sun; which as it is "the Fountain of Light and Heat, to all the Planets about it, so doth
 "it far surpass them all in its Bulk: Its apparent Diameter being com"puted at $22,148 English Miles, its Ambit at 2,582,873 Miles, and "its solid Contents at 290,971,000,000,000,000." Aftro. Theol.
 Book I. Chap. II.

of Surprize? How mighty is the Being, who kindled fuch a prodigious Fire; and keeps alive, from Age to Age, fuch an enormous Mass of Flame!—Let us attend our philosophic Guides, and we shall be brought acquainted with Speculations, more inlarged and more amazing.

THIS Sun, with all its attendant Planets, is but a very little Part of the grand Machine of the Universe. Star, though, in Appearance, no bigger than the Diamond, that glitters upon a Lady's Ring; is really a vast Globe, like the Sun in Size, and in Glory; no less spacious, no less luminous, than the radiant Source of our Day. So that every Star, is not barely a World, but the Centre of a magnificent System; has a Retinue of Worlds, irradiated by its Beams, and revolving round its attractive Influence. All which are loft, to our Sight, in unmeasurable Wilds of Æther.—That the Stars appear like fo many diminutive, and scarce distinguishable Points, is owing to their immense and inconceivable Disrance. Immense and inconceivable indeed it is; since a Ball, shot from the loaded Cannon, and flying with unabated Rapidity, must travel, at this impetuous Rate, almost seven hundred thousand Years *, before it could reach the nearest of those twinkling Luminaries.

Can any Thing be more wonderful, than these Obfervations? Yes: There are Truths, far more stupendous; there are Scenes, far more extensive. As there is no End of the Almighty Maker's Greatness; so no Imagination can set Limits to his creating Hand.—Could you soar beyond the Moon, and pass through all the planetary Choir: could you wing your Way to the highest apparent Star, and take your Stand on one of those lostiest Pinacles of Heaven: you would, there, see sther Skies expanded; another Sun, distributing his inexhaustible Beams by Day; other Stars, that gild the Horrors of the alternate Night: and other *, perhaps nobler Systems, established; established, in unknown Profusion, through the boundless Dimensions of Space.—Nor does the Dominion of the universal Sovereign terminate there. Even at the End of this yast Tour, you would find yourself advanced no farther, than the Suburbs of Creation; arrived only at the Frontiers of the great Jehovah's Kingdom †.

^{*} See Religious Philosopher, p. 819.

AND do they tell me; That the Sun, the Moon, and all the Planets, are but a little Part of HIS Works? How great, then, are his Signs! And how mighty are his Wonders! And if so, what is the CREATOR Himself! How far exalted above all Praise! Who is so high; that He looks down on the highest of these dazling Spheres, and sees even the Summit of Creation in a Vale: so great, that this prodigious Extent of Space, is but a Point in his Presence; and all this Consuence of Worlds,

- * See Aftro. Theology, Book II. Chap. II.——Where the Author, having affigned various Reasons to support this Theory of our modern Aftronomers, adds—"Besides the fore-mentioned strong Probabilities," we have this farther Recommendation of such an Account of the "Universe, that it is far more magnificent and worthy of the insuite "Creator, than any other of the narrower Schemes."
- † Job, after a most beautiful Dissertation, on the mighty Works of GOD; as they are distributed through universal Nature, from the Heights of Heaven, to the very Depths of Hell; closes the magnissent Account with this Acknowledgment; Lo! these are Parts of his Ways. Or, as the original Word more literally signifies; and may, I think, be more elegantly rendered; These are only the Skirts, the very outermost Borders of his Works. No more than a small Presace to the immense Volume of the Creation.—From the Hebrew pape Extremitates, I cannot sorbear thinking, on the extreme and very attenuated Fibres of the Root, when compared with the whole Substance of the Trunk; or on the exquisitely small Size of the capillary Vessels, when compared with the whole Structure of the Body. Job xxvi. 14.

as the lightest Atom, that fluctuates in Air, and sports in the meridian Ray*.

Thou most sublime and incomprehensibly glorious Gop, how am I overwhelmed with Awe! How funk into the lowest Prostration of Mind! When I consider thy " excellent Greatness," and my own utter Infignificancy!-And have I, excessively mean as I am, have I entertained any conceited Apprehensions of myself? Have I felt the least Elatement of Thought, in the Presence of fo majestic and adorable a Being? How should this wound me with Sorrow, and cover me with Confusion! -O my GOD, was I possessed of all the bigh Perfections, which accomplish and adorn the Angels of Light; amidst all these noble Endowments, I would fall down in the deepest Abasement at thy Feet. Lost in the infinitely fuperior Blaze of thy uncreated Glories; I would confess myself, to be Nothing; to be less than Nothing, and Vanity.—How much more ought I to maintain the most

* This puts me in mind of a very fine Remark on a scriptural Beauty; and a folid Correction of the common Translation; made by that learned, sagacious, and devout Expositor Vitringa.-Isa. xl. 15. We find it written of the Supreme Being, That he taketh up the Isles as a very Little Thing. Which, our Critic observes, is neither answerable to the Import of the Original, nor confonant to the Structure of the Difcourse. The Prophet had no Intention to inform Mankind, what the Almighty could do, with regard to the Islands if he pleased to exert uncontroulable Power. His Defign was to shew, how infignificant, or rather what mere Nothings they are, in his Esteem, and before his Majesty.—The Islands, says he, though so spacious, as to afford Room for the Erection of Kingdoms, and the Abode of Nations; though fo frong, as to withstand, for many Thousands of Years, the raging and reiterated Asiaults of the whole watery World; are yet, before the adored Jehovah, finall as the minutest Grain, which the Eye can scarce discern; light as the feathered Mote, which the least Breath hurries away like a Tempest. איים כרק יטול Infalæ funt ut leve quid, quad avolat. The deep-rooted Islands are as the volatile Atom, which, by the gentlest Undulations of the Air, is wasted to and fro in perpetual Agitation.

unfeigned

unfeigned Humiliation, before thy Divine Majesty,; who am not only Dust and Ashes, but a Compound of Ignorance, Impersection, and Depravity!

While, beholding this vast Expanse, I learn my own extreme Meanness; I would also discover the abject Littleness of all terrestrial Things.—What is the Earth. with all her oftentatious Scenes, compared with this attonishingly grand Furniture of the Skies? What, but a dim Speck, hardly perceivable in the Map of the Universe? It is observed, by a very judicious Writer*, That if the Sun himself, which enlightens this Part of the Creation, was extinguished; and all the Host of planetary Worlds, which move about him, were annihilated; they would not be miffed, by an Eye that can take in the whole Compass of Nature, any more than a Grain of Sand upon the Sea Shore. The Bulk of which they confift, and the Space which they occupy, is fo exceedingly little in comparison of the Whole; that their Loss would scarce leave a Blank, in the Immensity of God's Works.—If then, not our Globe only, but this whole System, be so very diminutive; what is a Kingdom, or a County? What are a few Lordships, or the fo much admired Patrimonies of those, who are ftiled Wealthy †? When I measure them with my own little Pittance, they fwell into proud and bloated Dimenfions. But, when I take the Universe for my Standard, how fcanty is their Size, how contemptible their Figure! They shrink into pompous Nothings 1.

When the keen-eyed Eagle foars above all the feathered Race, and leaves their very Sight below: when ^{*} Spect. Vol. VIII. Nº 565.

⁺ Juvat inter sidera vagantem divitum pavimenta ridere, & totans cum auro suo terram. Sen.

[†] Terrellæ grandiæ inania. WATTS's Hor. Lyr.

fhe wings her Way, with direct Ascent, up the Steep of Heaven; and, steadily gazing on the meridian Sun, accounts its beaming Splendors all her own: Does she then regard, with any Solicitude, the Mote that is flying in the Air, or the Dust which she shook from her Feet? And shall this eternal Mind, which is capable of contemplating its Creator's Glory; which is intended to enjoy the Visions of his Countenance; shall this eternal Mind, endued with fuch great Capacities, and made for fuch exalted Ends, be fo ignobly ambitious, as to figh for the Tinfels of State; or fo poorly covetous, as to gasp after ample Territories on a Needle's Point ?-No: under the Influence of fuch Confiderations I feel my Sentiments expand, and my Wishes acquire a Turn of Sublimity. My throbbing Defires after worldly Grandeur, die away; and I find myself, if not possessed of Power, yet fuperior to its Charms .- Too long, must I own, have my Affections been pinioned by Vanity, and immured in this earthly Clod. But these Thoughts break the Shackles *. These Objects open the Door of Liberty. My Soul, fired by fuch noble Prospects, weighs Anchor from this little Nook; and coasts no longer about its contracted Shores; dotes no longer on its painted Shells. The Immensity of Things, is her Range; and an Infinity of Blifs, is her Aim.

Behold this immense Expanse, and admire the Condescension of thy God.—In this Manner, an inspired and princely Astronomer, improved his Survey of the noc-

Night-Thoughts, No IX.

^{*} The Soul of Man was made to walk the Skies, Pelightful Outlet of her Prison here! There, difincumber'd from her Chains, the Ties Of Toys terrestrial, she can rove at large; There freely can respire, dilate, extend, In full Proportion let loose all her Powers.

turnal Heavens. When I consider thy Heavens, even the Works of thy Fingers, the Moon and the Stars which Thou bast ordained; I am smitten with Wonder at thy Glory, and cry out in a Transport of Gratitude, LORD, what is Man, that then art mindful of him? or the Son of Man, that thou visitest him *? " How amazing, how charm-" ing, is that Divine Benignity, which is pleafed to bow "down its facred Regards, to fo foolish and worthless " a Creature! Yea, difdains not, from the Height of " infinite Exaltation, to extend its kind providential " Care, to our most minute Concerns!—This is amaz-" ing. But that the Everlafting Sovereign should give " his Son, to be made Flesh, and become our Saviour! " Shall I call it a Miracle of condescending Goodness? " Rather, What are all Miracles, what are all Myste-" ries, to this ineffable Gift!"

HAD the brightest Archangel been commissioned to come down, with the Olive-Branch of Peace in his Hand, fignifying his Eternal Maker's Readiness to be reconciled; on our bended Knees, with Tears of Joy, and a Torrent of Thankfulness, we ought to have received the transporting News. But when, instead of fuch an angelic Envoy, He fends His only-begotten Son; his Son beyond all Thought illustrious, to make us the gracious Overture:-- sends Him from the "Habitation " of his Holiness and Glory," to put on the Infirmities of Mortality, and dwell in a Tabernacle of Clay: -- fends Him, not barely to make us a transfient Visit, but to abide many Years in our inferior and miserable World: -fends Him, not to exercise Dominion over Monarchs, but to wear out his Life in the ignoble Form of a Servant; and, at last, to make his Exit under the insamous Character of a Malefactor! Was ever Love like this?

Did ever Grace stoop so low *?—Should the Sun be shorn of all his radiant Honours, and degraded into a Clod of the Valleys; should all the Dignitaries of Heaven be deposed from their Thrones, and degenerate into Insects of a Day; great, great would be the Abasement. But nothing to Thine, most blessed Jesus; nothing to Thine, Thou Prince of Peace; when, for us Men, and for our Salvation, Thou didst not abhor the coarse Accommodations of the Manger; Thou didst not decline even the gloomy Horrors of the Grave.

'Tis well, the facred Oracles have given this Doctime the most explicit Confirmation, and Evidence quite incontestable. Otherwise, a Favour so undeserved, so unexpected, and rich beyond all Imagination, might

This reminds me of a very noble Piece of facred Oratory, where, in a fine Series of the most beautiful Gradations, the Apostle displays the admirably condescending Kindness of our Saviour .- He thought it ne Robbery, it was His indisputable Right, to be equal with the infinite, self-existent, immortal GOD. Yet, in mercy to Sinners, He emptied Himfelf of the incommunicable Honours, and laid aside the Robes of incomprehenable Glory.-When He entered upon His mediatorial State, inflered of acting in the grand Capacity of universal Sovereign, He took upon him the Form of a Servant. And not the Form of those ministering Spirits, whose Duty is Dignity itself; who are throned, though adoring.—He took not on him the Nature of Angels, but dooped incomparably lower. Affumed a Body of animated Duft, and week made in the Likeness of Man; those inferior and deprayed Creacares - Aftonishing Condescension! but not sufficient for the overslowing Richnels of the Redeemer's Love. For, being found in Fashion as a lifen. He hembled Himfelf farther still. Occupied the lowest Place, where all was low and ignoble. He not only submitted to the Yoke of the Law, but also bore the Infirmities, and ministered to the Necefficies of Mortal. He even washed the Feet of others, and had not where to lay his own Head .-- Yea, He carried His meritorious Humiliation, to the very deepest Degrees of possible Abasement. He became obedient unto Deuth-And not to a common or natural Death, but a Death more infamous than the Gibbet; more torturous than the Rack; - oven the accurred Death of the Cross. Phil. ii. 6, 7, 8.

Hagger our Belief.—Could HE, who launches all these planetary Globes, through the illimitable Void; and leads them on, from Age to Age, in their extensive Career; could HE resign his Hands, to be confined by the girding Cord; and his Back to be plowed, by the bloody Scourge? Could HE, who crowns all the Stars with inextinguishable Brightness; be Himself desiled with Spitting, and dissigned with the thorny Scar? It is the greatest of Wonders, and yet the surest of Truths.

O! YE mighty Orbs, that roll along the Spaces of the Sky; I wondered, a little while ago, at your vast Dimensions, and ample Circuits. But now my Amazement ceases; or rather, is intirely swallowed up by a much more stupendous Subject. Methinks, your enormous Bulk is shrivelled to an Atom; your prodigious Revolutions are contracted to a Span; while I muse upon the far more elevated Heights, and unsathomable Depths; the infinitely more extended Lengths, and unlimited Breadths, of this Love of GOD in CHRIST JESUS*.

Contemplating this stately Expanse, I see a Mirror, which represents, in the most awful Colours, the Heinousness of human Guilt.—Ten thousand Volumes; wrote on purpose, to display the Aggravations of my various Acts of Disobedience; could not so effectually convince me of their inconceivable Enormity, as the Consideration of that all-glorious Person; who, to make an Atonement for them, spilt the last Drop of his Blood.—I bave sinned, may every Child of Adam say; and what spall I do unto Thee, O Thou Observer of Men; Shall I give ^{*} Eph. iii. 18, 19.

[†] Quo quisque altius ascendit in agnitione Christi, eo prosundias peccati atrocitatem cognoscet.

[†] Job vii. 20. Not Preserver, as it stands in our Version, but Observer of Men. Which Phrase, at it denotes the exact and incessant Ingive my First-born for my Transgression, the Fruit of my Body for the Sin of my Soul? Vain Commutation! and such as would be rejected by the blessed God, with the utmost Abhorrence.—Will all the Potentates that sway the Scepter in a thousand kingdoms, devote their royal and honoured Lives, to rescue an obnoxious Creature from the Stroke of Vengeance? Alas! it must cost more, incomparably more, to expiate the Malignity of Sin, and save a guilty Wretch from Hell.—Will all the Principalities of Heaven be content to assume my Nature, and resign themselves to Death for my Pardon *?

frection of the divine Eye; as it intimates the absolute Impossibility, that any Transgression should escape the divine Notice; is evidently most proper, both to assign the Reason, and heighten the Emphasis of the Context.

* MILTON fets this Thought, in a very poetical and striking Light.—All the Sanstities of Heaven, stand round the Throne of the Supreme Majesty. God foresees and foretels the Fall of Man; the Ruin, which will unavoidably ensue on his Transgression; and the utter Impessibility, of his being able to extricate himself, from the Abyss of Misery.

He, with his whole Posterity, must die; Die ke, or Justice must; unless for Him Some other able, and as willing pay The rigid Satisfaction, Death for Death.

After which affecting Representation, intended to raise the most tender Emotions of Pity; the following Inquiry is addressed to all the surrounding Angels;

Say, heav'nly Powers, where shall we find such Love? Which of you will be mortal, to redeem Man's mertal Crime? and die, the Dead to save?
He ask'd; but all the heav'nly Choir stood mute,
And Silence was in Heav'n—

There is, to me at least, an inimitable Spirit and Beauty, in the last Circumstance.—That such an innumerable Multitude, of generous and compassionate Beings, should be struck dumb with Surprize and Terror, at the very Mention of The deadly Forseiture and Ransom set! No Lan-

Even this, would be too mean a Satisfaction, for inexorable Justice; too scanty a Reparation, of God's injured Honour. So flagrant is human Guilt, that nothing, but a Victim of infinite Dignity, could constitute an adequate Propitiation.—He who said, "Let there be Light, and there was Light;" Let there be a Firmament, and immediately the blue Curtains floated in the Sky; He must take Flesh; He must seel the sierce Torments of Crucifixion; and pour out his Soul in Agonies, if ever such Transgressors are pardoned.

How vast is that Debt; which all the Wealth of both the Indies cannot discharge! How vitiated that Habit of Body; which all the Drugs produced by Nature herfelf, cannot rectify! But how much more ruined was thy Condition, O my Soul! how much more beinous were thy Crimes! Since nothing less than the Sufferings and Death of Messiah, the Son of God, and radiant Image of his Glory, could effect thy Recovery, or cancel thy Iniquity.—Though, perhaps, thou art not funk fo very deep in Pollution, as fome of the most abandoned Profligates; yet remember the inestimable Ranfom, paid to redeem thee from everlasting Destruction. Remember this; and " never open thy Mouth any " more *," either to murmur at the Divine Chastisements, or to glory in thy own Attainments. Remember this; and even " loath thyself + for the Multitude of thy Pro-" vocations," and thy great Baseness.

guage is so eloquent as this Silence. Words could not possibly have expressed, in so emphatical a Manner, the dreadful Nature of the Task; the absolute Inability of any or all Creatures to execute it; the supereminent and matchless Love of the Eternal Son, in undertaking the tremendous Work; not only without Reluctance, but unsought and unimplored; with Readiness, Alacrity, and Delight. Paradise Lost, Book III. Line 209. Edit. Bentl.

^{*} Ezek. xxvi. 63. + Ezek. xxxvi. 31. Once

ONCE more; Let me view this beautiful, this magnificent Expanse; and conceive some juster Apprehenfions of the unknown Richness of my Saviour's Atonement.—I am informed by a Writer, who cannot mistake, that the High-Priest of My Profession, who was also the Sacrifice for my Sins, is higher than the Heavens *: more exalted in Dignity, more bright with Glory, than all the heavenly Mansions, and all their illustrious Inhabitants. If my Heart was humbled, at the Confideration of its exceffive Guilt; how do all my drooping Powers revive, at this delightful Thought? The poor Criminal that seemed to be tottering on the very Brink of the infernal Pitt; is raifed, by fuch a Belief, even to the Portals of Paradife. My Self-abasement, I trust, will always continue; but my Fears, under the Influence of fuch a Conviction, are quite gone †. I do not, I cannot doubt the Efficacy of this Propitiation. While I

* Heb. vii. 26.

+ I am forry to find, that some of my Readers were a little disgusted at this Expression, " My Fears are quite gone." As thinking, it discovered a Tincture of Arrogance in the Writer, and tended to discourage the weak Christian. But, I hope, a more mature Consideration will acquit me, from both these Charges .- For, what has the Author faid? Only, that at some peculiarly kappy Moments, when the Holy Ghost bears Witness of Christ in his Heart, and He is favoured with a Glimpse of the Redcemer's matchless Excellency—that, in these brighter Intervals of Life, his trembling Fears, with regard to the decifive Sentence of the great Tribunal, are turned into pleafing Expectations. And what is there in such a Declaration, offensive to the strictest Madesty, or dispiriting to the weakest Believer? Instead of creating Discouragement, it points out the Way to obtain a fettled Tranquillity. Its natural Tendency is, to engage the ferious Mind in a more constant and attentive Meditation, on the unknown Merits of the Divine MEDIATOR. And were we more thoroughly acquainted, more deeply affected, with his unutterable Dignity; I am perfuaded, our uneasy Apprehensions would proportionably vanish; our Faith be established, our Hopes brightened, and our Joys inlarged.

fee a Glimple of its matchless Excellency; and verily believe myself, interested in its Merits; I know not what it is, to feel any misgiving Suspicions; but am stedsast in Faith, and joyful through Hope.

BE my Iniquities like Debts of Millions of Talents, here is more than full Payment for all that prodigious Sum. Let the Enemy of Mankind, and Accuser of the Brethren, load me with Invectives; this one Plea, A Divine Redeemer died, most thoroughly quashes every Indictment. For, though there be much Turpitude, and manifold Transgressions, "there is no Condemna-"tion to those that are in Christ Jesus."-Nay, were I chargeable with all the vileft Deeds, which have been committed in every Age of the World, by every Nation of Men; even in this most deplorable Case, I need not fink into Despair. Even such Guilt, though grievous beyond all Expression, is not to be compared with that Abundance of Grace and Righteousness, which dwell in the incarnate Divinity.-How great, how transcendently glorious, are the Perfections of the adored JE-HOVAH! So great, fo superlatively precious, is the Expiation of the dying Jesus. 'Tis impossible for the human Mind to exalt this Atonement *, too highly; 'tis impossible for the HUMBLE PENITENT, to confide in it, too fteadily. The Scriptures, the Scriptures of eternal

^{*} This Doctrine, though rich with Cansolation to the ruined Sinner; yet, is it not likely to open a Door for Licentiousness; and embolden Transgressors to prosecute their VICES?—No: It is the most powerful Motive to that genuine Repentance, which slows from an unseigned Love of God; and operates in a hearty Detestation of all Sin. One, who knew the unmeasurable Goodness of the Lord, and was no Stranger to the sinful Perverseness of our Nature, says, There is Mercy with thee: THEREFORE shalt thou be feared. Pfal. cxxx. 4.—Words, full to my Purpose; which at once add the highest Authority to this Sentiment, and direct our Minds to its proper Instuence, and due Improvement.

Truth, have faid it (exult, my Soul, in the Belief of it!) that the Blood on which we rely, is God's own Blood*; and therefore all-fufficient to expiate, omnipotent to fave.

DAVID, that egregious Sinner, but more exemplary Saint, feems to have been well acquainted with this comfortable Truth. What else can be the Import of that very remarkable, but most devout Declaration? Thou shalt purge me + with Hysiop, and I shall be clean: thou shalt wash me, and I shall be whiter than Snow .- " I " have been guilty, I must confess, of the most compli-"cated and shocking Crimes: Crimes, inflamed by "every aggravating Circumstance, with regard to "Myself, my Neighbour, and my God. Myself, who "have been bleffed above Men, and the diftinguished "Favourite of Providence; my Neighbour, who, in the " most dear and tender Interests, has been irreparably "injured; my GOD, who might justly expect the "most grateful Returns of Duty, instead of such "enormous Violations of his Law. Yet, all horrid " and execrable as my Offence is, it is nothing to the " superabundant Merit of that great Redeemer, who was "promifed from the Foundation of the World; in "whom all my Fathers trusted; who is the Hope of "all the Ends of the Earth. Though my Conscience "be more loathfome, with adulterous Impurity, than "the Dunghill; though Treachery and Murder have " rendered it even black as the Gloom of Hell; yet,

* Acts xx. 28.

⁺ Pfd. li. 7. Thou shalt purge. I preser this Translation, before the new one. Because this speaks the Language of a more steddast Belief, and gives the highest Honour to the Divine Goodness. Were the Words intended to bear no more than the common petitionary Sense; and not to be expressive of a noble Phrophery of Faith; they would rather have been many and course Imperatives, not Futures.

"wathed in the 'Fountain opened for Sin and for Uncleanness*,' I shall be—I say not, pure only, this were a Disparagement to the Efficacy of my Saviour's Death; but I shall be fair as the Lily, and white as the Snow. Nay, let me not derogate from the glorious Object of my Confidence; cleansed by this fovereign sanctifying Stream, I shall be fairer than the full-blown Lily, whiter than the new-fallen Snows."

POWER, faith the Scripture, belongeth unto GOD †.—And in what majestic Lines, is this Attribute of Jehovah written, throughout the whole Volume of the Creation? Especially, through those magnificent Pages, unfolded in yonder starry Regions. Which are therefore stilled by the sweet and seraphic Singer of Israel, "The Firmament of his Power ‡." Because the grand Exploits of Omnipotence are there displayed, with the utmost Pomp; and recorded, in the most legible Characters.

Who, that looks upward to the midnight Sky; and, with an Eye of Reason, beholds its rolling Wonders; who can forbear enquiring, Of what were those mighty Orbs formed?—Amazing to relate! They were produced without Materials. They sprung from Emptiness itself. The stately Fabric of universal Nature emerged out of Nothing.—What Instruments were used by the Supreme Architect, to sashion the Parts with such exquisite Niceness, and give so beautiful a Polish to the whole? How was all connected into one sinely-proportioned, and nobly-sinished Structure?—A bare Fiat accomplished all. Let them be, said God. He added no more; and immediately the marvellous Edifice arose; adorned with every Beauty; displaying innumerable Persections, and declaring, amidst enraptured Seraphs, its great Creator's Praise. "By the Word of the Lord were the Heavens made, and all the Host of them by the Breath of his Mouth*."—What forceful Machinery fixed some of those ponderous Globes, on an immoveable Basis? What irresistible Impulse bosvled others, through the Circuit of the Heavens? What coersive Energy confined their impetuous Courses, within Limits astonishingly large, yet most minutely true?—Nothing but his sovereign Will. For all Things were at first constituted, and all to this Day abide, according to his Ordinance.

^{*} Zech. xiii. 1. + Pfal. lxii. 11. 1 Pfal. cl. 1.

Without any toilsome Assiduity or laborious Process,—to raise—to touch—to speak such a Multitude of immense Bodies into Being—to launch them through the Spaces of the Sky, as an Arrow from the Hand of a Giant—to impress on such unwieldy Masses a Motion, far out-stripping the Swistness of the winged Creation †—and to continue them in the same rapid Whirl, for

^{*} If this Thought is admitted a Second Time, and suffered to ennoble the next Paragraph; it is partly, because of its unequalled Sublimity; partly, because it awakens the most grand Idea of creating Power; and partly, because the Practice of the Psalmis, an Authority too great to be controverted, is my Precedent.—The beautiful Stanza quoted from Psal. xxxiii. 6. is a Proof, how thoroughly the Royal Poet entered into the Majesty of the Mosaic Narration. The Repetition of the Sentiment, ver. 9, intimates, how peculiarly he was charmed, with that noble Manner, of describing the Divine Operations. While the Turn of his own Composition shews, how perfectly he possessed wrote the celebrated Way of thinking. And this, long before Longinus wrote the celebrated Treatise, which has taught the Heathen, as well as the Christian World, to admire the Dignity of the Jewish Legislator's Stile. Vid. Longin. de Sublim. Sect. IX.

[†] To give one Indance of this Remark,—The Earth, in the diurnal Revolution, which it performs on its own Axis, whirls about at the Pate of above a Thousand Miles an Hour. And as the great Orbit, for Thousands and Thousands of Years—What an amazing Instance of infinite Might is this!—Can any thing be impossible to the Lord, the Lord God; the Creator and Controuler, of all the Ends of the Earth, all the Regions of the Universe? Rather, is not all that we count difficult, perfect Ease to that glorious Being, who only spake, and the World was made *? Who only gave Command, and the stupendous Axle was lodged fast, the losty Wheels moved complete?—What a sure Desence, O my Soul, is this everlasting Strength of thy God! Be this thy continual Resuge, in the Article of Danger; this thy never-failing Resource, in every Time of Need.

What cannot this uncontroulable Power, of the great Jehovah, effect for his People? Be their Miseries ever so gailing, cannot this God relieve them? Be their Wants ever so numerous, cannot this God supply them? Be their Corruptions within, ever so inveterate; or their Temptations without, ever so importunate; cannot this mighty, mighty God subdue the former, and fortisy them against the latter?—Should Trials, with an incessant Vehemence, sift thee as Wheat; should Tribulation, with a Weight of Woes, almost grind thee to Powder; should Pleasure with her bewitching Smiles, which it describes annually round the Sun, is reckoned at 540 Millions of Miles, it must travel near a Million and Half, each Day.—What a Force must be requisite, to protrude so vast a Globe: and wheel it on, loaded as it is with hage Mountains, and ponderous Rocks, at such a prodigious Degree of Rapidity! It surpasses human Conception!—How natural, how pertinent, how almost necessary, after such an Observation, is the Acknowledgement made by holy Job! I know that Thou canst do every Thing, and that no Thought, no imaginable Scheme, can be with-holden from thee, can lie beyond thy Power to execute. Chap. xlii. 2.

folicit thee to delicious Ruin; yet "hold thee fast by "GoD," and lay thy Help upon Him, that is omnipotent *. Thou canst not be involved in such calamitous

* It is a most charming Description, as well as a most comfortable Promise, which we find in Isa. xl. 29, 30, 31.—He giveth Power to the Feeble; and to them that have no Might at all, He not only imparteth, but increaseth Strength; making it to abound, where it did not so much as exist. - Without this Aid of JEHOVAH, even the Youths, amidst the very Prime of their Vigour and Activity, shall become languid in their Work, and sweary in their Course. And the young Men, to whose Resolution and Abilities nothing seemed impracticable, shall not only not succeed, but atterly fall, and miscarry in their various Enterprizes-Whereas, they that wait upon the LORD, and confide in his Grace, shall press on, with a generous Ardor, from one Degree of religious Improvement to another. Instead of exhausting, they shall renew their Strength; Difficulties shall animate, and Toil invigorate them. They shall mount up, as with soaring Wings, above all Oppofition; they shall be carried through every Discouragement, as Eagles cleave the yielding Air. They shall run, with Speed and Alacrity, the Way of God's Commandments, and not be weary: They shall hold on, tragredientur, carpent iter) with Constancy and Perseverance, in those peaceful Paths, and not faint; but arrive at the End of their Progress, and receive the Prize of their High Calling.

To this most chearing Doctrine, permit me to add its no less beautiful and delightful Contrast. Eliphaz, speaking of the Enemies of the Righteous, fays-לא נכחד קימנו which is rendered by a great Critic in facred Learning, Nibil excifum factio nobis adversaria-We should reckon, our Language acquitted itself tolerably well, if, when depreciating the Abilities of an Adverfary, it should represent them weak as the forched Thread, feeble as the diffelving Smoke. But these are cold Forms of Speech, compared with the Eloquence of the East. According to the Genius of our Bible, All the Power that opposes the Godly, is a mere Nothing; or, to speak with a more emphatical Air of Contempt, a destroyed, an extirpated Nothing .- Admire this Expression, ye that are charmed with daring Images, and (what Tully calls verbum ardens) a spirited and glowing Diction .- Remember this Declaration, ye that fight the good Fight of Faith. The united Force of all your Enomies, be it ever so formidable to the Eye of Flesh, is, before your Almighty Guardian, Nibil nili:lissimum, not only Nothing, but less than nothing, and Vanity. Job xxii. 20.

Circum-

Circumstances, or exposed to such imminent Peril; but thy God, whom thou servest, is able to deliver thee from the one, and to support thee under the other.— To support! to deliver! Let me not dishonour the unlimited Greatness of his Power. He is able to exalt Thee, from the deepest Distress, to the most triumphant Joy; and to make even a Complication of Evils, work together for thy everlasting Good. He is able, not only to accomplish what I have been speaking, but to do exceeding abundantly above all that we can ask, or think *.

O! THE wretched Condition of the Wicked, who have this LORD of all Power for their Enemy! O! the defperate Madness of the Ungodly, who provoke the Almighty to Jealoufy!—Befotted Creatures! are you able to contend with your Maker, and enter the Lists against incensed Omnipotence? Can you bear the Fierceness of his Wrath, or sustain the Vengeance of his listed Arm? At his Presence, though awfully serene, the Hills melt like Wax, and the "Mountains skip like frighted "Lambs." At the least Intimation of his Displeasure, the Foundations of Nature rock, and the "Pillars of

" Heaven

^{*} I should, in this Place, avoid swelling the Notes any farther, was it not to take Notice of the inimitable Passage quoted above, and to be found Eph. iii. 25.—Which, if I do not greatly mistake, is the most complete Representation of Divine Power, that it is possible for Words to frame.—To do all that our Tongues can ask, is a Miracle of Might. But we often think more than we can express, and are actuated with "Groanings unutterable." Yet, to answer these vast Defires, is not beyond the Accomplishment of our heavenly Father.—Nay, to make his Gifts and his Blessings commensurate to the largest Stretch of human Expectations, is a small Thing with the God of Glory. He is able to do above all, that the most enlarged Apprehension can imagine; yea, to do abundantly more, exceeding abundantly more, than the Mind itself, in the utmost Exertion of all its Faculties, is capable of evising, or knows how to conceive.

"Heaven tremble." How then can a withered Leaf endure, when "his Lips are full of Indignation, and "his Tongue as a devouring Fire?"—Or can any thing fcreen a guilty Worm, when the great and terrible God shall whet his glittering Sword, and his Hand take hold on inexorable Judgment? When that Hand, which shoots the Planets, Masses of excessive Bulk *, with such furprifing Rapidity, through the Sky: that Hand, which darts the Comets to such unmeasurable Distances, beyond the Orbit of our remotest Planet, beyond the Purfuit of the strongest Eye: when THAT HAND is stretched out to punish, can the Munition of Rocks, the Intervention of Seas, or even interpoling Worlds, divert the Blow?-Confider this, Ambition; and bow thy haughty Creft. Confider this, Disobedience; and bend thy Iron Sinew. O! confider this, all ve that forget, or affront, the tremendous Jehovah. He can, by a fingle Act of his Will, lay the Universe in utter Ruin: and can He want Power to bring you, in a Moment, in the Twinkling of an Eye, to the Dust of Death, or to the Flames of Heli? He has-I fay not, Ten thousand Lightnings to fcorch you to Ashes; Ten thousand Thunders to crush you into Atoms; but, what is unspeakably more dreadful—He has an Army of Terrors, even in the Lock of his angry Countenance. His very Frown is worfe than Destruction.

^{*} One of the Planets (Saturn) is supposed to be more than 90 Times as big, as the Globe on which we live. According to the same Calculation, the largest of the Planets (Jupiter) is above 200 Times vaster, than this vast Collection of spacious Forests, towering Mountains, extensive Continents, and boundless Oceans.—Such enormous Magnitude! winged with such prodigious Speed!—It raises Astonishment beyond Expression.—With GOD is terrible Majesty! Johxxxvii. 22.—Wie spall not fear THEE, OLORD, and glerisy thy Name? Rev. xv. 4.

I CANNOT difinifs this Subject, without admiring the Patience of the bleffed God. Who, though fo ftrong and powerful, yet " is provoked every Day."—Surely, as is his Majesty, so is his Mercy; his Pity altogether commensurate to his Power. If I vilify but the Name of an earthly Monarch; I lose my Liberty, and am confined to the Dungeon. If I appear in Arms, and draw the Sword, against my national Sovereign; my Life is forfeited, and my very Blood will scarce atone for the Crime. But Thee I have dishonoured, O! thou King immortal and invisible! Against Thee my Breast has fomented fecret Disaffection; my Behaviour has rifen up in open Rebellion; and yet I am spared, yet I am preserved. Instead of being banished from thy Presence; I sit at thy Table, and am sed from thy Hand. Instead of pursuing me with Thunder-bolts of Vengeance, thy Favours furround me on every Side. That Arm, that injured Arm, which might justly fall, with irretrievable Ruin, on a Traitor's Head; is most graciously stretched out, to carefs him, with the tenderest Endearments; to cherish him, with every Instance of parental Kindness.—O! thou mightiest, thou best of Beings, how am I pained at my very Soul, for fuch shameful and odious Disingenuity! Let me always abominate myself, as the basest of Creatures; but adore that unwearied Long-suffering of thine, which refuses to be irritated; love that unremitted Goodness, which no Acts of Ingratitude could stop, or so much as check, in its gracious Current. O! let this stubborn Heart; which Duty could not bind; which Threatenings could not awe; be the Captive, the willing Captive, of fuch triumphant Beneficence.

I HAVE often been struck with Wonder at that Almighty Skill, which weighed the Mountains in Scales, and the Hills in a Balance; which proportioned the Waters in the Hollow of its Hand, and adjusted the Dust of the Earth * by a Measure. But how much more marvellous is that magnificent Œconomy, which poised the Stars, with inexpressible Nicety, and meted out the Heavens with a Span! Where all is prodigiously vast; immensely various; and yet more than mathematically exact. Surely, the Wisdom of God manifests itself in the Skies, and shines in those lucid Orbs. Shines on the contemplative Mind, with a Lustre incomparably brighter, than that which their united Splendors transinit to the Eye.

Behold yonder countless Multitude of Globes; confider their amazing Magnitude; regard them as the Sovereigns of so many Systems, each accompanied with his planetary Equipage. Upon this Supposition, what a Multiplicity of mighty Spheres, must be perpetually running their Rounds, in the upper Regions! Yet, ^{*} Ija. xl. 12. The Dust of the Earth, in this sublime Scripture, fignifies the dry Land, or folid Part of our Globe. Which is placed in Contradistinction to the whole Collection of fluid Matter, mentioned in the preceding Claufe .- Perhaps, this remarkable Expreffion may be intended to intimate, not only the extreme Niceness, which stated the Dimensions of the World in general, or in the gross; but also that particular Exactness, with which the very smallest Materials, that conflitute its Frame, (not excepting each individual Atom,) were calculated and disposed.—q. d. Tis a small Thing to fay, No fuch enormous Redundancies, as unnecessary Ridges of Mountains, were fuffered to fubfift. There was nor fo much as the least Grain of Sand superfluous, or a single Particle of Dust deficient .-As the grand Aim of the Description is, to celebrate the consummate Wisdom, exemplified in the Creation; and to display that perfect Proportion, with which every Part tallies, coincides, and harmonizes, with the Whole; I have taken Leave to alter the Word of our English Translation comprehend, and introduce in its Stead a Term, equally faithful to the Hebrean, and more fignificative of the Prophet's precise Idea.

none mistake their Way, or wander from the Goal; though they pass through trackless and unbounded Fields. None fix off from their Orbits, into extravagant Excursions; none press in upon their Centre, with too near an Approach. None interfere with each other in their perennial Passage; or intercept the kindly Communications of another's Influence *. But all their Rotations proceed in eternal Harmony; keeping such Time, and observing such Laws, as are most exquisitely adapted to the Persection of the Whole.

WHILE I contemplate this " excellent Wisdom, " which made the Heavens," and attunes all their Motions; how am I abashed at that Mixture of Arrogance and Folly, which has, at any Time, inclined me to murmur at thy Dispensations, O LORD! What is this, but a Sort of implicit Treason against thy Supremacy; and a tacit Denial of thy infinite Understanding?-Hast Thou so regularly placed such a wonderful Diverfity of Systems, through the Spaces of the Universe?— Didst Thou, without any probationary Essays, without any improving Retouches, speak them into the most consummate Perfection?—Dost Thou continually superintend all their Circumstances, with a Sagacity that never mistakes the minutest Tittle of Propriety? And shall I be so unaccountably stupid, as to question the Justness of thy Discernment, in "choosing my Inherit-"ance, and fixing the Bounds of my Habitation!"-Not a fingle Erratum, in modelling the Structure; determining the Distance +; and conducting the Career of ^{*} The Interception of Light, by means of an Eclipse, happens very rarely. And then is of so short a Continuance, as not to be available inconvenient. Nay, it is attended with such Circumstances, as render it rather useful, than prejudicial.

[†] The Sun in particular (and let this ferve as a Specimen of that most curious Exactness, with which the other celestial Eodies are of unnumbered Worlds! And shall my peevish Humour presume to censure thy Interposition, with regard to the Affairs of one inconsiderable Creature; whose Stature, in such a comparative View, is less than a Span; and his present Duration, little more than a Moment?
Y 2 constituted,

O! Thou God, "in whose Hand my Breath is, " and whose are all my Ways," let such Sentiments as now possess my Thoughts, be always lively on my Heart! These shall compose my Mind into a chearful Acquiescence, and a thankful Submission; even when Afflictions gall the Senfe, or Disappointment break my Schemes. Then shall I, like the grateful Patriarch *, in all the Changes of my Condition, and even in the Depths of Diftress, erect an Altar of adoring Resignation; and inscribe it with the Apostle's Motto, To GOD ONLY WISE. Then, shouldst Thou give me Leave to be the Carver of my own Fortunes, I would humbly defire to relinquish the Grant, and recommit the Dispofal of myfelf to thy unerring Beneficence. Fully perfuaded, that thy Counsels; though contrary to my froward Inclinations, or even afflictive to my Flesh; are incomparably more eligible, than the blind Impulse of my own Will, however foothing to animal Nature.

On a careless Inspection, you perceive no Accuracy or Uniformity in the Position of the heavenly Bodies. They appear like an illustrious Chaos; a promiscuous conflituted, and all their Circumstances regulated) the Sun is formed of fuch a determined Magnitude, and placed at fuch a convenient Distance—" as not to annoy, but only refresh us, and nourish the "Ground with its kindly Warmth. If it was larger, it would set [&]quot; the Earth on Fire; if fmaller, it would leave it frozen. If it was "nearer us, we should be scorched to Death; if farther from us, we [&]quot; should not be able to live for Want of Heat."

STACKHOUSE's History of the Bible.

^{*} See Gen. xii. 7, 8.

Heap of shining Globes; neither ranked in Order, nor moving by Line.—But, what feems Confusion, is all Regularity. What carries a Show of Negligence, is really the Result of the most masterly Contrivance. You think, perhaps, they rove in their aërial Flight; but they rove by the nicest Rule, and without the least Error. Their Circuits, though seemingly devious; their Mazes, though intricate to our Apprehensions *; are marked out, not indeed with golden Compasses, but by the infinitely more exact Determinations of the all-wise Spirit.

So, what wears the Appearance of Calamity, in the Allotments appointed for the Godly, has really the Na-ture of a Blessing. It issues from fatherly Love, and will terminate in the richest Good. If Joseph is snatched from the Embraces of an indulgent Parent, and abandoned to Slavery in a foreign Land; it is in order to fave the holy Family, from perishing by Famine; and to preserve "the Seed, in whom all the Nations of the "Earth should be blessed." If he falls into the deepest Difgrace, it is on purpose that he may rise to the highest Honours. Even the Confinement of the Prison, by the unsearchable Workings of Providence, opens his Way to the Right-hand of the Throne itself.—Let the most afflicted Servant of Jesus, wait the final Upshot of Things. He will then discover the apparent Expediency of all those Tribulations; which now, perhaps, he can hardly admit, without Reluctance; or fuffer, without fome Struggles of Diffatisfaction. Then, the gushing Tear, and the heaving Sigh, will be turned into Tides of Gratitude, and Hymns of holy Wonder.

^{* ——}Mazes intricate,
Eccentric, intervolv'd; yet regular
Then most, when most irregular they seem. Milt.

In the mean Time, let no audacious Railer, prefumptuously impeach the Divine Procedure; but. adoring where we cannot comprehend, let us expect the Evolution of the mysterious Plan. Then, shall every Eye perceive; that the feeming Labyrinths of Providence, were the most direct and compendious Way; to effect his general Purposes of Grace, and to bring about each One's particular Happiness *.—Then, also, shall it be clearly shewn, in the Presence of applauding Worlds; Why, Virtue pined in Want, while Vice rioted in Affluence. Why, amiable Innocence fo often dragged the dungeon Chain, while horrid Guilt trailed the Robe of State. That Day of universal Audit, that Day of everlasting Retribution, will not only vindicate, but magnify, the whole Management of Heaven. The august Sessions shall close with this unanimous, this glorious Acknowledgment: "Though Clouds and Darkness, impenetra-"ble by any human Scrutiny, were fometimes round " about the supreme Conductor of Things; yet Righte-" ousness and Judgment were the constant Habitation of his " Seat +; the invariable Standard of all his Administra-"tions."-Thus (if I may illustrate the grandest Truths, by inferior Occurrences) while we view the Arras, on the Side of least Distinction, it is void of any elegant Fancy; without any nice Strokes of Art; nothing but a confused Jumble of incoherent Threads. No sooner is the Piece beheld in its proper Ajpect, but the fuspected Rudeness vanishes, and the most curious Arrangement takes place. We are charmed with Defigns of the finest Taste, and Figures of the most graceful Form. All is shaped with Symmetry; all is clad in Beauty.

Which, though to Us it feems embroil'd, moves on In higher Order; fitted, and impell'd By Wiydom's fineft Hand, and issuing all In gen'ral Good.

THOMS. Wint. 1, 586, last Edit.

⁺ Pfal. xcvii. 2.

The Goodness of God is most eminently displayed in the Skies.—Could we take an understanding Survey, of whatever is formed by the Divine Architect, throughout the whole extent of material Things; our Minds would be transported with their Excellencies, and our Tongues echo back that great Encomium, They are "good, "very good *." Most beautiful † in themselves; contrived by unerring Wisdom, and executed with inimitable Skill. Most useful † in their Functions; exactly sitting the Places they fill, and completely answering the Purposes, for which they were intended.—All the Parts of the inanimate Creation proclaim, both by their intrinsic and relative Excellencies, the all-diffusive Beneficence of their Maker.

How much more wonderful are the Displays of Divine Indulgence, in the Worlds of Life! Because, dead Matter is incapable of Delight; therefore, the gracious Creator has raised innumerable Ranks of perceptive Existence. Such as are qualified to taste his Bounty, and enjoy each a Happiness suited to its peculiar State. With this View, He surnished the Regions of inferior Na-

* Gen. i. 31,

† † This καλοκαγαθια of the Universe, and all its Parts, has been very highly, and very justly extolled, by the ancient Inquirers into Nature. And was, indeed, an illustrious Scene, spread before the Sages of the Heathen World: wherein to contemplate the Goodness, and the Glories, of the Supreme Being.—It was nobly said, by a Pagan Philosopher, on this Occasion: Εις εχωδα μελαδοληθαναι τον Θεον μελλονία δημιογγείν. That GOD, ruben be undertook the Work of Creation, transformed Himself into Love.—But he need not transform Himself into this amiable Principle; for "God is Love." And was much more nobly said by One, whom that Philosopher would have termed a Barbarian.

1 John iv. 9.

ture, with an Order and a Series of sensitive Beings. The Waters teem with Shoals of sinny Inhabitants. The dry Land swarms with Animals of every Order. The Dwellings of the Firmament, are occupied by Multitudes of winged People. Not so much as a green Leaf, Philosophers say, but lodges, and accommodates, its puny animacule Tenants *.—And wherefore this Diversity, this Profusion of living Creatures; slying the Air, treading the Ground, and gliding through the Paths of the Sea? For this most glorious Reason—That the eternal Sovereign may exercise his superabundant Goodness: that his Table may be surnished, with Millions and Millions of Guests; that he may fill, every Hour, every Moment, their Mouths with Food, or their Hearts with Gladness.

But, what a finall Theatre are three or four Elements, for the Operations of Jehovah's Bounty! His mag-

* A very celebrated Poet, in a beautiful Paragraph on this Subject, informs his Readers; That all Nature fwarms with Life. In subterranean Cells, the Earth heaves with vital Motion. Even the hard Stone, in the very inmost Recesses of its impenetrable Citadel, holds Multitudes of animated Inhabitants. The Pulp of mellow Fruit, and all the Productions of the Orchard, feed the invisible Nations. Each Liquid, whether of acid Taste, or milder Relish, abounds with various Forms of sensitive Existence. Nor is the pure Stream, or transparent dir, without their Colonies of unseen People.—In which Constitution of Things, we have a wonderful Instance, not only of the Divine Goodness to those minute Beings, in giving them a Capacity for animal Gratifications; but of his tender Care for Mankind, in making them imperceptible to our Senses.

Thefe, conceal'd
By the kind Art of forming Heav'n, escape
The grosser Eye of Man: For, if the Worlds
In Worlds inclos'd should on his Senses burst;
From Cates ambrosial, and the nectar'd Bowl,
He'd turn abhorrent; and, in dead of Night,
When Silence sleeps o'er all, be stunn'd with Noise.

THOMSON'S Summer.

nificent Liberality, fcorns fuch fcanty Limits. If you ask, Wherefore has He created all Worlds, and replenished them with an unknown Multiplicity of Beings; rifing, one above another, in an endless Gradation of still richer Endowments, and still nobler Capacities? The Answer is—For the Manifestation of his own Glory. and especially for the Communication of his inexhaustible Beneficence *.- The great Creator could propose no Advantage to Himfelf. His Bliss is incapable of any Addition. "Before the Mountains were brought forth, " or ever the Earth and the World were made," He was fupremely happy, in his own independent and allfufficient Self. His grand Defign, therefore, in erecting fo many stately Fabrics; and peopling them with fo many Tribes of Inhabitants; was, To transfuse his exuberant Kindness, and impart Felicity in all its Forms. Ten Thousand Worlds, stocked with Ten thousand Times Ten thousand Ranks, of sensitive and intelligent Existence, are so many spacious Gardens; which, with Rivers of communicated Joy, this ever-flowing Fountain waters continually.

Boundless †, and (which raises our Idea of this Divine Principle, to the very highest Degree of Persection) disinterested † Muniscence! How inexpressibly amiable is the

^{*} A facred Writer, confidering this delightful Subject; and confining his Observation, within the narrow Limits of his own Country; cries out, with a Mixture of Amazement and Gratitude; How great is his Goodness, and how great is his Beauty!—Who then can forbear being lost in Wonder, and transported with Delight; when he extends his Survey, to those infinitely more copious Communications of Divine Bounty; which, like salutary and refreshing Streams, run through all Worlds; and make, not only the little Valleys of a single Kingdom, but the Immensity of Creation laugh and sing? Zech. ix. 17.

^{††} In this Sense, There is none good, but One, that is GOD. None universally and essentially good. None, whose Goodness extends itself.

the bleffed God, confidered in this charming Light! Is it-possible to conceive any Excellence, so adorable and lovely; as infinite Benevolence, guided by unerring Wifdom, and exerting Almighty Power, on purpose to make a whole Universe happy ?-O my Soul, what an irrefiftible Attractive is here! What a most worthy Object, for thy most fervent Affection! Shall now every glittering Toy, become a Rival to this transcendantly beneficent Being, and rob Him of thy Heart?—No. his all-creating Arm teach thee, to trust in the Fulness of his Sufficiency:—Let his all-fuperintending Eye incline thee, to acquiesce in the Dispensations of his Providence: - And let his Bounty; fo freely vouchfafed; fo amply diffused; induce thee to love Him, with all the Ardour of a grateful and admiring Soul; induce thee to ferve Him, not with a joylefs Awe, or flavish Dread, but with unfeigned Alacrity, and a delightful Complacency.

If the Goodness of God is so admirably seen, in the Works of Nature, and the Favours of Providence; with what a noble Superiority, does it even triumph, in the Mystery of Redemption *! Redemption is the brightest Mirror, itself, in an infinite Variety of Blessings, to every capable Object; or, who always dispenses his Favours, from the fole Principle of free and disinterested Benevolence.

^{*} In this, and in other Parts of the Contemplations, the Reader will observe: That the Attributes of the Deity are represented, as shining, with more distinguished Lustre, in the Wonders of Redemption, than in the Works of Creation. If fuch Remarks should seem to be unprecedented, or to stand in Need of a Vindication; permit me to subjoin the Sentiments of a great Critic, equally versed in both those sublime Theories.—" In a perfect Orator, He, says Tully, requires some Skill in the Nature of heavenly Bodies; because, his Mind will become more extensive and unconfined; and, when he descends to treat of human Affairs, He will both think and write in a more exalted and "magni-

Mirror, in which to contemplate this most lovely Attribute of the Deity. Other Gifts, are only as Mites from the Divine Treasury; but Redemption opens, I had almost faid exhausts, all the Stores of Indulgence and Grace. Herein, "God commendeth his Love *: not only manifests, but sets it off, as it were, with every bright and grand Embellishment: manifests it in so stupendous a Manner, that it is beyond Parallel; beyond Thought; "above all Bleffing and Praise."—Was HE not thy Son, Everlasting God, thy only Son; the Son of thy Bosom from eternal Ages; the highest Object of thy complacential Delight? Was not thy Love to this adorable Son, incomparably greater than the tenderest Affection of Any, or the united Affections of All, mortal Parents? Was not the bleffed Jesus more illustrious in Excellency, than all Angels; more exalted in Dignity, than all Heavens? Yet didft thou relign Him, for poor Mortals! for vile Sinners!—Couldit thou fee him defcend, from his Royal Throne; and take up his Abode, in the fordid Stable? See him forego the Homage of the Seraphim; and fland exposed to the reproachful Indignities, of an insolent Rabble; See Him arraigned at the Bar, and fentenced to Death; numbered with Malefactors, and nailed to the Gibbet; bathed in his own innocent Blood, and pouring out his Soul in Agonies of Sorrow? -Could the Father, the Father bimself, with unknown Philanthropy †, fay? "It shall, it shall, be so! My Pity "to rebellious Man pleads, and prevails. Awake, there-

[&]quot; magnificent Manner. For the fame Reason, that excellent Master would have recommended the Study of those great and glorious

[&]quot;Mysteries, which Revelation has discovered to Us; to which the "noblest Parts of this System of the World are as much inferior, as the [&]quot;Creature is less excellent than the Creator." Spect. Vol. VIII. No 633.

^{*} Rom. v. 8.

[†] Philanthropy, that is, Loving-kindness to Man.

"fore, O Sword *, edged with divine Wrath. Awake; and be sheathed in that immaculate Breast; pierce that dearly beloved Heart. I am content, that my Son endure the Sharpness of Death, rather than sinful Mortals perish for ever."—Incomprehensible Love! May it henceforward, be the favourite Subject of my Meditation; more delightful to my musing Mind, than Applause to the ambitious Ear! May it be the darling Theme of my Discourse; sweeter to my Tongue, than the Droppings of the Honeycomb to my Taste! May it be my choicest Comfort, through all the Changes of Life; and my reviving Cordial, even in the last Extremities of Disfolution itself!

A PROPHET contemplating, with a distant Survey, this unexampled Instance of Almighty Love, is wrapt into a Transport of Devotion. At a Loss for proper Acknowledgments, he calls upon the whole Universe to aid his labouring Breast, and supply his Lack of Praise. Sing melodiously, ye vaulted Heavens; exult, and even leap for Gladness, thou cumberous Earth; ye Mountains, break your long Silence, and burst into Peals of loudest Acclamation; for the Lord, by this precious Gift, and this great Salvation, bath comforted his People.—A sacred His-

* Zech. xiii. 7.

† Isa. xlix. 13.—I have not adhered to our common Translation, but endeavoured to preserve, somewhat more faithfully, the noble Pathos, and inimitable Energy, of the facred Original.—The Love of God, manifested in a Divine and dying Saviour, is a Blessing of such inconceivable Richness; as must render all Acknowledgments stat, and all Encomiums languid. Yet, I think, the most poetical and most emphatical Celebration of that unspeakable Instance of Goodness, is contained in this rapturous Exclamation of the Prophet. Which intimates, with a wonderful Majesty of Sentiment, that even the whole Compass of the inanimate Creation; could it be sensible of the Benesit, and capable of Delight; would express its Gratitude, in all these Demonstrations of the most lively and exuberant Joy.

torian hath left it upon Record; that, at the first Exhibition of this ravishing Scene, there was with the Angel, who brought the blessed Tidings, a Multitude of the heavenly Host; praising God, and making the Concave of the Skies resound with their Hallelujahs. At the Dawn of the Sun of Rightcousness, when He was beginning to rise with Healing in his Wings, the Morning Stars sang together, and all the Sons of GOD shouted for Joy.—And shall Man, whom this gracious Dispensation principally respects; shall Man, who is the Centre of all these gladdening Rays; shall He have no Heart to adore, no Anthem to celebrate, This Love without End, and without Measure Grace?

MILT.

How pure is the State of the Sky, and how clear its Aspect! Clearer than the limpid Stream; purer than the transparent Crystal; and more curiously fine, than the polished Mirror. That flately Cieling; fretted with Gold, and stretched to an Extent of many Millions of Leagues; is not disfigured with a fingle Flaw. That azure Canopy; embroidered with Stars, and spacious enough to form a Covering for unnumbered Worlds; is without the least Spot or Wrinkle.-Yet this, even this, will fcarce yield us, fo much as a faint Representation of the Divine Purity. God, is the God of matchless and transcendent Excellency. His Ways are Uprightness itself. His Counsels and Words are the very Sanctity of Wisdom and of Truth. The Laws, which he has given to univerfal Nature; are exquisitely contrived, and beyond all Poffibility of Improvement. The Precepts, which he has appointed for the human Race; are a complete Summary, of all that is honourable in itself, and perfective of the rational Mind.-Not the -least Oversight, in planning a Series of Events for all Futurity.

turity. Not the least Mal-administration, in managing the Affairs of every Age, since Time began; and of every Nation, under the whole Heavens.—Pardon these disparaging Expressions. A negative Perfection is far, far beneath thy Dignity, O Thou most Highest *. In all these Instances; in all thy Acts, and all thy Attributes; Thou art not only holy, but "glorious in Holiness."

So inconceivably holy is the LORD GOD of Hofts, that he fees Defilement even in the Brightness of the Firmament. The living Sapphire of the Heavens, before his Majesty, loses it Lustre. Yea, the Stars (though the most pure and resplendent Part of the Heavens) are not pure in his Sight. How much less Man, who in his fallen and deprayed State, is but as a Worm, that crawls in the

* O Thou most Highest.—This Expression occurs more than once, in the Psalms used by the Established Church. It is, I think, one of those Beauties; which, because often exhibited, generally escape our Notice. It is a Superlative formed on a Superlative; and, though not strictly conformable to grammatical Rules, is nobly superior to them all.—The Language scems to be sensible of its own Desciency: when the incomprehensible Jehovah is addressed, or celebrated. Oppressed, as it were, with the Glories of the Subject, it labours after a more emphatical Manner of Diction, than the ordinary Forms of Speech associations, if I rightly judge, one of those daring and happy Peculiarities of a masterly Genius, which Mr. Pope so finely describes; and, while he describes, exemplisses:

Great Wits fometimes may gloriously offend, Add rise to Faults true Critics dare not mend; From vulgar Bounds with brave Disorder part, And snatch a Grace beyond the Reach of Art.

Essay on Criticism.

St. Paul's—ελαχις δερος παθίων των αγιων—is a beautiful Passage of the like Nature. Which our Translators have very properly rendered; Less than the least of all Saints.—His πολλφ μαλλον κρεισσον is another Instance of the same Kind. But here the English Verson fails. Far better is extremely flaccid, compared with the nervous Original. And I greatly question, whether it is possible to translate the Sentence, with equal Concisences, and with equal Spirit. See Epb. iii. S. Phil. i. 23.

corrupted Carcase; and the Son of Man, who, by reason of his manifold actual Impurities, is too justly compared to an Insect, that wallows amidst Stench and Putresaction*?—Is there not then abundant Cause, for the most irreproachable and eminent of Mankind, to renounce all arrogant Pretensions; to lay aside every assuming Air; to take nothing but Shame and Consussion to themselves? A holy Prophet, and a holy Prince, selt such humbling Impressions, from a Glimpse of the uncreated Purity. I abbor myself in Dust and Ashes†, was the Declaration of the one: I am a Man of unclean Lips‡, the Consession of the other.—Should not this teach us all, to adore the Divine Mercies, for that precious purifying Fountain §.

* Job xxv. 5, 6. I submit it to the Judgment of the Learned, Whether this is not the true Meaning of the Text .- It may not, perhaps, recommend itself to the fqueamifbly nice Critic; or to those Persons who dream of, I know not what, Dignity in our fallen Nature. But it feems, in Preference to every other Interpretation, fuitable to the facred Context; and is far, far from being injurious to the Character of that apostate Race, which is "altogether become abominable," and " is as an unclean Thing."-On this Supposition, there is not only an apparent, but a very striking Contrast, between the Purity of Goo, and the Pollution of Man. The Purity of the most high God, which outshines the Moon, and eclipses the Stars; the Pollution of degenerate Man, which exclusive of a Saviour, would render him as loathsome to the all-feeing Eye, as the vilest Vermin are in ours .-- Without assigning this Sense to the Passage, I cannot discern the Force of the Antithesis, nor indeed the Propriety of the Sentiment. Worms, in the general, give us an Idea of Meanness and Infirmity; not of Defilement and Impurity. Unless they are Infects, hatched amidst Putrefaction, and confidered in such noisome Circumstances.-The two Words of the Original, and and are evidently used in this Signification, by Moses and Isaiah. By the former, to denote the Vermin, which devoured the putrefied Manna; by the latter, to express the Reptiles, which swarm in the Body that sees Corruption. Exod. xvi. 20. Is. xiv. II.

† Job xlii. 6. ‡ Isa, vi. 5.

§ In that Day there shall be a Fountain opened to the House of David, and to the Inhabitants of Jerusalem, for Sin and Uncleanagh. Zech. xiii. 1.

which was foretold from the Foundation of the World; but was opened at that awful Juncture, when knotty Whips tore the Flesh; when ragged Thorns mangled the Temples; when sharpened Nails cut fresh Sluices for the crimson Current; when the Gash of the Spear compleated the dreadful Work, and forthwith flowed there, from the wounded Heart, Blood and Water?

ESPECIALLY, fince God himself faw no Blemish in He looketh to the Moon, and it shineth not: his dear Son. yet his all-penetrating and jealous Eye, discerned nothing amis, nothing desective, in our glorious Redeemer. Nothing amiss? He bore this most illustrious Testimony, concerning his holy Child Jesus: " In Him I am " pleased; I am well pleased; I acquiesce, with intire "Complacency, and with the highest Delight, in his " Person; his Undertaking; and the whole Execution " of his Office."-How should this Thought, enliven our Hopes; while the other, mortifies our Pride? Should not our Hearts spring within us, and even leap for Joy; at the repeated Assurance given us by Revelation, That such a divinely excellent Person is our Mediator? What apparent Reason has every Believer, to adopt the blessed Virgin's Exclamation! " My Soul doth magnify the LORD " for his transcendent Mercy; and my Spirit rejoices, not " in wide extended Harvests, waving over my fertile "Glebe *; not in Armies vanquished, and leaving "the peculiar Treasure of Nations for my Spoil *, " but in an infinitely richer, nobler Bleffing, even in "GOD my Saviour."—That a Person so sublime and perfect, has vouchfafed to become my Surety: to give Himself for my Ransom, in the World below; and act as my Advocate, in the Royal Presence above: yea, to make my Recovery, the Reward of his Sufferings; my final Felicity, the Honour of his mediatorial Kingdom!

^{* *} The infpired Penman, from these Two Occasions of distinguished Joy, sets forth the incomparably greater Deligie, which arises from the Gift of a Saviour, and the Elesting of Redemption. Isa. ix. ver. 3. compared with ver. 6.

WHEN an innumerable Multitude * of Bodies, many of them more than a Hundred Thousand Miles in Diameter †, are all fet in Motion:-when the Orbits, in which they perform their periodical Revolutions, are extended at the Rate of several Hundreds of Millions: —when each has a distinst and separate Sphere, for finishing his vast Circuit:—when no one knows, what it is to be cramped; but each most freely expatiates, in his unbounded Career:—when every one is placed, at fuch an immense Remove from each other; that they appear to their respective Inhabitants, only as so many Spots of Light:-How aftonishing must be the Expanse, which yields Room for all those mighty Globes, and their widely-diffused Operations! To what prodi-gious Lengths, did the Almighty Builder stretch his Line, when he marked out the stupendous Platform! —I wonder at such an immeasurable Extent. My very Thoughts are loft, in this Abyss of Space. But, be it known to Mortals; be it never forgot by Sinners; that, in all its most surprising Amplitude, it is small, it is scanty, compared with the Bounty and the Mercy of its Maker

^{*} This refers, not only to the Planets which pass and repass about our Sun, but also to the other Planetary Worlds, which are supposed to attend the several fixed Stars.

[†] The Diameter of Jupiter is calculated at 130650 Miles, while his Orbit is reckoned to confift of 895,134,000. Which Computation, according to the Maxims of Astronomy, and the Laws of Proportion, may, as is taken for granted in the Contemplations, be applied to other Planets revolving round other Suns.

His Bounty is absolutely without Limits*, and without End. The most lavish Generosity cannot exhaust, or even diminish, his Muniscence. O! all ye Tribes of Men; or rather, all ye Classes of intelligent Creatures; ye are not streightened in the Liberality of your ever-bleffed Creator; be not streightened in your own Expestations. "Open your Mouth wide, and He shall "fill it," with copious and continual Draughts from the Cup of Joy. Your God, on whom is your whole Dependence, is more than able; is more than willing; to "fupply all your Need, according to his Riches in "Glory."—When the LORD JEHOVAH is the Giver, and his Grace + the Gift; let your Wishes be unbounded, and your Cravings infatiable. All that created Beings can possibly covet, is but a very finall Pittance of that unknown Happiness, which the Everlasting Benefactor is ready to bestow. Suppose every charitable Disposition, which warms the Hearts of the human Race, added to those more inlarged Affections, which glow in heavenly Bosoms; what were they all, even

^{*} By Bounty, I mean, not the actual Exercise, or the sensible Effects, of this Excellency in the Deity. These are, and always must be, through the immense Persection of the Attribute, and the necessary Scantiness of the Recipient, bounded. But, I would be understood, as speaking of the Divine Power, and the Divine Will, to exert Divine Beneficence. These can have no real, no imaginable Limits. These, after a Profusion of Blessings, distributed to unnumbered Worlds, continued through unnumbered Ages, must still have more to bestow; for ever have more to bestow; infinitely more to bestow, than it is possible for Creation itself to receive.

^{† 2} Cor. ix. 8. GOD is able to make all Grace abound towards you, that ye, having all Sufficiency in all Things, may abound to every good Work.—How beautiful, and emphatical, is this Description! Inferior to nothing, but that Extent of Ability, and those Riches of Liberality, which it so eloquently celebrates. Does it not exhaust all the Powers of Language; while it attempts to give us a Specimen, of the Munisicence of the LORD?

in their highest Exercise, compared with the Benignity of the Divine Nature?—Bless me then, Thou eternal Source of Love; bless all that reverence thy holy Name; according to thy own most profuse Goodness. Whose great Prerogative it is, to disdain all Measure. O! bless us, in proportion to that Grace; the Richness of which (unutterable by the Tongues of Men, and of Angels) was once spoken in the Groans, and written in the Wounds of thy expiring Son!

Spacious indeed are these Heavens! Where do they begin? Where do they end? What is their Extent? Can Angels answer my Question? Have Angels travelled the vast Circuit? Can Angels measure the Bounds of Space? No; 'tis boundless, 'tis unknown, 'tis amazing all.—How charming then to reslect, That the Mercy of GOD is "greater than the Heavens;" is more extensive than the Dimensions of the Sky. Transporting Reslection! Let me indulge Thee once more . Let me think over the delightful Displays of this lovely Attribute; and, while I admire the Trophies of forgiving Goodness, add one to the Number.—With what amiable and affecting Colours, is this represented in the Parable of the Prodigal! What could induce that foolish Youth, to forsake his Father's House? Had he not been tenderly cherished by the good Parent; and ^{} Once more refers to Page 81, of Reflections on a Flower-Garden.—The following Pages, to the 130th, exhibit a digressive View of the Divine Mercy. I thought it proper to apprise my Reader of this Excursion; though, I hope, it will be needless to offer an Apology, for enlarging upon a Theme incomparably joyous. Who can complain of Tediousness, while I speak Consolation to distressed, and Recovery to ruined Creatures? The Divine Mercy is the sole Fountain of all our present and suture Blessings. In Conformity to this benign Attribute, human Hopes arise, and human Felicity flows. Who, therefore, can be weary of viewing and reviewing; when the Lengths and Breadths of forgiving Grace, are the ravishing Prospect?

loaded with Benefits, from his indulgent Hand? Were not the Restraints of parental Government, an easy Yoke? or rather, a Preservative from Ruin? Notwithflanding every endearing Obligation, he revolts from his Duty; and launches into fuch fcandalous Irregularities, as were dishonourable to his Family, and destructive to himself .- When Necessity, not Choice, but tharp Necessity drove him to a submissive Return; does the injured Father stand aloof, or shut his Doors? Quite the Reverse. He espies him, while he is yet a great Way off; and, the Moment he beholds the profligate Youth, He has Compassion on Him. His Bowels yearn; they "found like an Harp," touched with Notes divinely foft. He never once thinks of his ungracious Departure, and infamous Debaucheries. Pity, parental Pity, passes an Act of Oblivion; and, in one Instant, cancels a Series of long-continued Provocations.—So strong are the Workings of fatherly Affection; that he is almost impatient to embrace the naked and destitute Wretch. The Son's Pace is slow, He arose and came; the Father's is swift, He sprung forth (aged as he was) and ran. And is there a fingle Frown in his Brow, or one upbraiding Word on his Tongue?—Instead of loathing the fordid Creature, or reproaching him for his odious Excesses; he falls on his Neck, clasps him in his Arms, and hugs him to his Bosom. Instead of disowning the riotous Spendthrift, or rejecting him for his undutiful Behaviour; He receives and welcomes him with Kiffes of Delight. He rejoices, at his Return from Extravagance and Vice; as he formerly rejoiced, on the Day of his Nativity.-When this Companion of Harlots opens his Mouth, before he speaks, the Father hears. rupts him, in the midst of his intended Speech. The Overflowings of his compaffionate Heart can brook no Delay. 3

Delay. He feems to be uneasy himself, till he has made the afflicted Penitent glad, with the Assurance of his Acceptance, and the choicest of his Favours.—While the poor abashed Offender seeks nothing more, than not to be abhorred; he is thoroughly reconciled, and honoured before the whole Family. While he requests no other Indulgence, than only to be treated as the meanest Servant; he is cloathed with the best Robe; he is feasted with the satted Calf; he is caressed as the dearest of Children.—Was there ever so bright and winning a Picture, of the tenderest Mercy; most freely vouchfassed, even to the most unworthy of Creatures? Yet thus, my Soul; and thus, my Fellow-sinner; will the Lord God of everlasting Compassions receive us; if, sensible of our Misery, and thirsting for Salvation, we turn to him through Jesus Christ.

WHERE Sin has abounded, fays the Proclamation from the Court of Heaven, Grace doth much more abound.

—Manasseh was a Monster of Barbarity; for He caused his own Children to pass through the Fire, and filled ferusalem with innocent Blood. Manasseh was an Adept in Iniquity; for He not only multiplied, and to an extravagant Degree, his own facrilegious Impieties; but He poisoned the Principles, and perverted the Manners of his Subjects, making them to do worse than the most detestable of the Heathen Idolaters *. Yet, through this super-abundant Grace, He is humbled; He is reformed; and becomes a Child of forgiving Love, an Heir of immortal Glory.—Behold that bitter and bloody Persecutor Saul; when, breathing out Threatenings †, and bent upon Slaughter, he worried the Lambs, and

* See 2 Chron. xxxiii.

[†] Acts ix. 1. Σαυλος εle εμπνεων απειλης και φοιθ, Saul yet breathing out Threatening and Slaughter.—What a Representation is here of a Z 3 Mind, put to Death the Disciples of Jesus. Who, upon the Principles of human Judgment, would not have pronounced Him a Vessel of Wrath, destined to unavoidable Damnation? Nay, would not have been ready to conclude; that, if there were heavier Chains, and a deeper Dungeon, in the World of Woe; they must furely be referved, for fuch an implacable Enemy of true Godliness? Yet, (admire, and adore, the inexhaustible Treasures of Grace!) This Saul, is admitted into the goodly Fellowship of the Prophets: is numbered with the noble Army of Martyrs, and makes a diftinguished Figure among the glorious Company of the Apostles.— The Corinthians, were flagitious even to a Proverb. Some of them wallowed in fuch abominable Vices, and habituated themselves to such outrageous Acts of Injustice, as were a Reproach to human Nature. Yet, even these Sons of Violence, and Slaves of Sensuality, "were washed; were fanctified; were justified *." Washed, in the precious Blood of a dying Redeemer;

Mind, mad with Rage, and abandoned to the fiercest Extremes of Barbarity! I scarce know, whether I am more shocked at the Persecutor's favage Disposition, or charmed with the Evangelist's lively Description.—The Adverb & seems referable to Chap. viii. Ver. 3. and has, in this Connexion, a peculiar Force. The Havock he had committed, the inoffensive Families he had already ruined, were not sufficient to assuage his vengeful Spirit. They were only a Taste; which, instead of glutting the Bloodhound, made him more closely pursue the Track, and more eagerly pant for Destruction. He is still athirst for Violence and Murder. So eager and infatiable is his Thirft, that he even breathes out Threatening and Slaughter. His Words are Spears and Arrows, and his Tongue a sharp Sword. 'Tis as natural for him to menace the Christians, as to breathe the Air .- Nay, they bleed every Hour, every Moment, in the Purposes of his rancorous Heart. It is only owing to Want of Power, that every Syllable he utters, every Breath he draws, does not deal about Deaths, and cause some of the innocent Disciples to fall.

^{* 1} Cor. vi. 9, 10, 11.

fantified, by the powerful Operations of the Bleffed Spirit; justified, through the infinitely tender Mercies of a gracious God. Those, who were once the Burden of the Earth, are now the Joy of Heaven, and the Delight of Angels.

THERE is another Instance in Scripture, which most loudly publishes that sweetest of the Divine Names, The LORD, the LORD GOD, merciful and gracious, long-suffering, and abundant in Goodness and Truth; keeping Mercy for Thousands, forgiving Iniquity, Transgression, and Sin . An Instance this, which exceeds all the former; which exceeds whatever can be imagined; which if I was to forget, the very Stones might cry out, and found it in my Ears. I mean the Case of those Sinners, who murdered the Prince of Peace, and LORD of Glory.—These Men, could scarce have the Shadow of an Excuse for their Crime; hardly a Circumstance, to extenuate their Guilt. They were well acquainted with his exemplary Conversation; they had often heard his heavenly Doctrines; they were almost daily Spectators of his unequalled Miracles. They therefore had all possible Reason to bonour Him, as the most illustrious of Beings; and to receive his Gospel, as the most inestimable of Blessings. Yet, notwithstanding all these engaging Motives to love Him, even above their own Lives; they feize his Person; asperse. his Character; drag him before a heathen Tribunal; and extort a Sentence of Death, against Innocence and Holiness itself. Never was the vilest Slave, so contumeliously abused; nor the most execrable Malefaster, fo barbaroufly executed. The Sun was confounded at the shocking Scene; and one cannot but wonder, how the avenging Lightnings could with-hold their Flashes, ^{} Exod. xxxiv. 6, 7.

The Earth trembled at the horrid Deed; and why, why did it not cleave afunder, and open a Passage, for fuch Blood-thirsty Miscreants, into the nethermost Hell? Shall These ever hope to obtain Forgiveness, from the righteous Judge? Shall not These be configned over to inexorable Wrath, and the feverest Torments? - O the miraculous Effects of Divine Grace! O the triumphant Goodness of God our Saviour! Many, even of these impious Wretches, at the Descent of the Holy Ghoft, were convinced of their miferable State; were wounded with penitential Remorfe; fled to the Sanctuary of the Cross; had their Pardon ratified by the baptifinal Seal; and, continuing in the Apostles Doctrine, were made Partakers of the Kingdom of Heaven. Where they now shine, as so many everlasting Monuments of most distinguished Mercy; and receive Beatitude past Utterance, from that very Redeemer, whom once "with wicked Hands they cruci-" fied and flew."

Well might the Prophet cry out, with a pleasing Amazement; "Who is a God like unto Thee, that "pardoneth Iniquity, and passeth by Transgression *!"—Let all Flesh know affiredly; let all Flesh rejoice greatly; That with the Lord there is such Mercy, and with his Christ such plentiful Redemption.—And O! for the Voice of an Arch-Angel, to circulate the Glad-Tidings through the Universe. That the American Savage, as well as the European Sage, may learn the exceeding Riches of Grace in Christ. Through whose infinitely satisfying Propitiation, all Manner of Sin, Barbarity, and Blasphemy, are freely forgiven unto Men.

What a grand, and majestic Dome, is the Sky! Where are the Pillars, which support the stately Concave? What Art, most exactly true, balanced the Presfure? What Props, of insuperable Strength, sustain the Weight? How is that immeasurable Arch upheld, unshaken and unimpaired; while so many Generations of busy Mortals, have funk and disappeared, as Bubbles upon the Stream ?-If those Stars are of such an amazing Bulk; how are they also fastened, in their lofty Situation? By what Miracle in Mechanics, are fo many Thousands of ponderous Orbs, kept from falling upon our Heads; kept from dashing, both the World to Pieces, and its Inhabitants to Death? Are they hung in golden, or adamantine, Chains? Rest they their enormous Load, on Rocks of Marble, or Columns of Brass?—No; they are pendulous in fluid Æther. Yet. are more immoveably fixed, than if the everlasting Mountains lent their Forests, for an Axle-Tree; or their Ridges, for a Basis. The Almighty Architect stretches out the North, and its whole starry Train, over the empty Place. He bangs the Earth, and all the ethereal Globes, upon nothing *. Yet are their Foundations laid fo fure, that they can " never be moved at any " Time."

^{*} Mic. vii. 18.

No unfit Representation, to the fincere Christian, of his final Perseverance †: Such as points out the Cause, which

* Job xxvi. 7.

† With Regard to the final Perseverance of the true Believer; I am sensible, this Point is not a little controverted.—The Sentiments, which follow, are my stedsast Belief. It is by no Means proper, in a Work of this Nature, to enter upon a Discussion of the Subject. Neither have I Room, so much as to hint, what might be urged for its Support.—Let my Reader observe, that I am far from delivering it, as essential to Christianity, or necessary to Salvation. Millions, of the very contrary Conviction, are, I doubt not, high in the Favour of God; and in a growing Meetness for his heavenly Kingdom. As I blame none for rejecting, none, I hope, will be offended with me for espousing, this particular Doctrine.—To be of different Opinions, at which effects it; and constitutes the Pledge, which afcertains it.—His Nature is all enseebled. He is not able, of himself, to think a good Thought. He has no visible Saseguard, nor any Sufficiency of his own.

least in some inferior Instances, seems an unavoidable Consequence of our present State: where Ignorance, in Part, cleaves to the wisest Minds; and Prejudice easily besets the most impartial Judgments. This may turn to our common Advantage; and afford Room for the Display and Exercise of those healing Virtues, Moderation, Meekness, and Forbearance.—Let me only be permitted toask, whether this Tenet does not evidently tend to establish the Confort of the Christian, and to magnify the Fidelity of God our Saviour? Whether, far from countenancing Sloth, or encouraging Remissiness, to know that our Labour shall not be in vain, is not the most prevailing Inducement to abound in the Work of the Lord? I Cor. xv. 58.

Is any One inclined to examine the Reasons, which made the Author a Proselyte to this Persuasion? He may find them displayed in the Memorial, delivered by several select and eminent Divines of the Church of England, at the renowned Synod of Dort.—(See Acta Synod. Dordrech. Par. II. Page 246. of the Latin Edition, published in a single Quarto Volume.)—Those, who have no Opportunity of consulting the Memoirs of that venerable Assembly; I would refer to the Works of the indefatigable and very learned Turretin, or to those of the candid and elegant Witsus.—Turret. Tom. II. Q. xvi. Wits. Occon. Lib. III. Cap. xiii.

The latest and fullest View of the Point, which I ever remember to have met with, in any of our English Writers, is in the Lime-street Lectures. Which are a Defence of several most important Doctrines of the Gospel, and contained in two Octavo Volumes; the united Labours of nine modern Divines; most of whom, are well known to the World by their other evangelical and useful Writings. In those Lectures, the final Perseverance of the Saints, is very particularly stated; and, to my Apprehension at least, most satisfactorily proved. The Arguments, usually urged against it, are impartially considered; and I cannot but think (with all due Deference to the Judgment of others) unanswerably consuted.

And here (not to swell this note any farther) I shall only just hint, that the judicious Hooker (an Authority, perhaps, as weighty and unexceptionable as any that can well be produced) gives a folemn Attestation to this Tenet, in a short Discourse on the Perpetuity of Faith, subjoined to his Ecclessaftical Polity. Fol. Edit.

And yet, whole Legions of formidable Enemies, are in a Confederacy to compass his Ruin. The World, lavs unnumbered Snares for his Feet: the Devil, is inceffantly urging the Siege, by a Multitude of fiery Darts, or wily Temptations: the Flesh, like a perfidious Inmate, under Colour of Friendship, and a specious Pretence of Pleafure, is always forward to betray his Integrity.— But, amidst all these threatening Circumstances, of perfonal Weakness, and imminent Danger, an invisible Aid is his Defence. "I will uphold thee, fays the bleffed "Gop, with the Right Hand of my Righteousness *." Comfortable Truth! The Arm, which fixes the Stars in their Orders, and guides the Planets in their Course, is ftretched out to preserve the Heirs of Salvation. "-My Sheep, adds the great Redeemer, are mine: " and they shall never perish; neither shall any pluck them "out of my Hand †." What Words are these! And did they come from HIM, who hath all Power in Heaven. and on Earth? And were they fpoke to the weakest of the Flock; to every unfeigned Follower of the great Shepherd? Then, Omnipotence itself must be vanquished; before they can be destroyed, either by the Seductions of Fraud, or the Affaults of Violence.

IF you ask therefore, What Security we have, of enduring to the End, and continuing faithful unto Death?

—The very fame that establishes the Heavens, and settles the Ordinances of the Universe. Can these be thrown into Consussion †? Then, may the true Believer draw back unto Perdition. Can the Sun be dislodged from his Sphere, and rush lawlessy through the Sky? Then, and then only, can the Faith of God's Elect § be finally overthrown.—Be of good Courage then, my Soul; rely on those Divine Succours, which are so solemnly stipulated, so faithfully promised. Though thy Grace be languid, as the glimmering Spark; though the Overflowings of Corruption, threaten it with total Extinction; yet, since the great Jehovah has undertaken to cherish the dim Principle, "many Waters cannot quench it, "nor all the Floods drown it." Nay, though it were feeble as the smooking Flax, Goodness and Faithfulness stand engaged, to augment the Heat; to raise the Fire, and feed the Flame; till it beam forth, a Lamp of immortal Glory, in the Heavens.

^{*} Ifa. xli. 10. § Tit. i. 2.

[†] John x. 28.

[‡] Jer. xxxi. 35, 36.

As to the Faithfulness of a covenanting God, this may be emblematically seen, in the Stability of the heavenly Bodies, and the Perpetuity of their Motions †.— Those that are fixed or stationary, continue unalterable in their grand Elevations. No injurious Shocks; no

* The Tenderness and Faithfulness of God to his People, are finely pictured by the Prophet Isaiah, Chap. xliii. Ver. 3. Which Passage, because of its rich Consolation, and uncommon Beauty, is deservedly adopted by St. Matthew, and ingrafted into the System of evangelical Truths .- He will not himself break, nor suffer to be broken by any other, the bruifed Reed; nor quench the smoaking Flax. Was it possible, to have chosen two more delicate, and expressive Representations?-Could any Image, be more fignificant of a very infirm, and enfeebled Faith; than the flexile Reed, that bends before every Wind? Which, besides its natural Weakness, is made abundantly weaker by being bruised: and so, is ready to fall in Pieces of itself .- Or could any Thing, with a more pathetical Exactness, describe the extreme Imbecility, of that other Principle of the Divine Life, Love? The State of the Flax, just beginning to burn, is liable to be put out by the least Blast: more liable still, is the Wick of the Lamp, when it is not so much as kindled into a glimmering Flame, but only breathing Smoke, and uncertain whether it shall take Fire or no .- Yet true Faith, and heavenly Love, though subfishing amidst such pitiable Infirmities, will not be abandoned by their great Author; shall not be extinguished by any Temptations; but be maintained, invigorated, and made finally triumphant. Matt. xii. 20.

Violence of conflicting Elements; are able to displace those everlasting Hinges, on which dependent Worlds revolve. Through the whole Flight of Time, they recede not, fo much as a Hair's Breadth, from the precife central Point of their respective Systems .- While the Erratic or Planetary, perform their prodigious Stages, without any Intermission, or the least Embarrassment. How foon, and how eafily, is the most finished Piece of human Machinery disconcerted! But all the celestial Movements, are fo nicely adjusted; all their Operations, fo critically proportioned; and their mutual Dependencies, so strongly connected; that they prolong their beneficial Courses, throughout all Ages .- While mighty Cities are overwhelmed with Ruin, and their very Names lost in Oblivion: While vast Empires are swept from their Foundations, and leave not fo much as a shadowy Trace of their ancient Magnificence: While all terrestrial Things are subject to Viciffitude, and fluctuating in Uncertainty: These are permanent in their Duration. These are invariable in their Functions. "Not one faileth."-Who doubts the constant Succession, of Day and Night; or the regular Returns, of Summer and Winter? And why, O! why shall we doubt the Veracity of God, or distrust the Accomplishment of his holy Word? Can the Ordinances of Heaven depart? Then only can God forget to be gracious; or neglect the Performance of his Promife.—Nay, our Lord gives us yet firmer Ground of Affiance. He affords us a furer Bottom for our Faith, than the Fundamental Laws of the Universe. Heaven and Earth, he fays, shall pass away; but my Words shall not, in a single Instance, or in one Tittle of their Import, pass away. No: his facred Word, whatever may obstruct it; whoever may oppose it; shall be fulfilled to the very uttermost.

O POWERFUL World! How aftonishing is its Efficacy! When this Word was iffued forth, a thousand Worlds emerged out of nothing. Should the mighty Orders be repeated, a thousand more would spring into Exis-By this Word, the vast System of created Things is upheld, in constant and immutable Persection. Should it give command, or cease to exert its Energy; the universal Frame would be diffolved, and all Nature revert to her original Chaos. And this very Word is pledged for the Safety, the Comfort, the Happiness of the Godly. This inviolable, this Almighty Word, speaks in all the Promises of the Gospel.-How strangely infatuated are our Souls, that we should value it so little? What Infidels are we in fact, that we should depend upon it no more! Did it create, whatever has a Being; and shall it not work Faith, in our Breasts? Do unnumbered Worlds, owe their Support to this Word: and fhall it not be fufficient, to buoy up our Souls in Troubles, or establish them in Trials? Is it the Life of the Universe, and shall it be a dead Letter to Mankind?

IF I wish to be heard, when I implore heavenly Bleffings; is not this Privilege most clearly made over to my Enjoyment, in that well-known Text, "ask, and "it shall be given you *?"—If I long for the Eternal Comforter, to dwell in my Heart, and sanctify my Nature; have I not an apparent Title to this high Prerogative, conferred in that sweet affertive Interrogation; "How much more shall your heavenly Father, give "the Holy Spirit to those that ask him †?"—If I earnestly covet the inestimable Treasures, that are comprised in the great IMMANUEL'S Mediation; can I have a firmer Claim to the noble Portion, than is granted in that most precious Scripture; "Him that cometh

^{*} Matt. vii. 7.

⁺ Luke xi. 13.

"to Me, I will in no-wife cast out *?"-What Assurance, of being interested in these unspeakable Mercies, would I defire? What Form of Conveyance; what Deed of Settlement; were it left to my own Option, should I choose? Here is the Word of a King; the King immortal and invisible; all whose Declarations † are Truth itself.—If a Monarch bestows Immunities on a Body of Men, and confirms them by an authentic Charter; no one controverts, no one questions, their Right to the Royal Favours. And why should we suspect the Validity of those glorious Grants, which are made by the everlasting Sovereign of Nature; which He has also ratified by an Oath, and sealed with the Blood of his Son?—Corporations may be disfranchifed, and Charters revoked. Even Mountains may be removed, and Stars drop from their Spheres. But a Tenure, founded on the Divine Promife, is unalienably fecure; is lasting, as Eternity itself.

We have endeavoured to spell a Syllable of the eternal Name, in the ancient Manuscript of the Sky. We have catched a Glympse of the Almighty's Glory, from the Lustre of innumerable Stars. But, would we behold all his Excellencies, pourtrayed in full Perfection; and drawn to the very Life; let us attentively consider the Redeemer.—I observe, there are some Parts of the Firmament, in which the Stars seem, as it were, to cluster. They are sown thicker, they lie closer, than usual; and strike the Eye with redoubled Splendor. Like the Jewels on a Crown, they mingle their Beams; and reslect an Increase of Brilliancy, on each other.—

* John vi. 37.

^{† ————}If these fail,

The pillar'd Firmament is Rottenness,

And Earth's Base built on Stubble. MILT. Comus.

Is there not such an Assemblage, such a Constellation of the Divine Honours, most amiably effulgent in the bleffed Jesus?

Does not infinite Wifdom * shine, with surpassing Brightness, in Christ? To the Making of a World there was no Obstacle; but to the Saving of Man, there seemed to be unsurmountable Bars. If the Rebel is suffered to escape; where is the inflexible Justice, which denounces "Death as the Wages of Sin?" If the Offender is thoroughly pardoned; where is the inviolable Veracity, which has folemnly declared, "The "Soul that finneth, shall die?" These awful Attributes are fet in terrible Array; and, like an impenetrable Battalion, oppose the Salvation of apostate Mankind. Who can fuggest a Method to absolve the traiterous Race; yet vindicate the Honours of Almighty Sovereignty? This is an Intricacy, which, the most exalted finite Intelligences, are unable to clear.—But, behold the unfearchable Secret revealed! revealed, in the wonderful Redemption, accomplished by a dying Saviour! So plainly revealed, that "He who runs may read;" and even Babes understand, what Minds of the deepest Penetration could not contrive.—The Son of God. taking our Nature, obeys the Law, and undergoes Death, in our Stead. By this means, the threatened Curse is executed, in all its Rigour; and free Grace is exercifed, in all its Riches. Justice maintains her Rights, and, with a steady Hand, administers impartial Vengeance; while Mercy dispenses her Pardons, and welcomes the repentant Criminal into the tenderest Embraces. Hereby, the seemingly thwarting Attributes are reconciled. The Sinner is faved, not only in full Consistence, with the Honour of the supreme Per-fections; but to the most illustrious Manifestation of them all.

^{*} See the next Note.

Where does the Divine Power * fo fignally exert itfelf, as in the Crofs of Christ, and in the Conquests of Grace !-Our LORD, in his lowest State of Humiliation, gained a more glorious Victory; than when, through the dividing Sea, and the waste howling Wildernek, "He rode upon his Chariots and Horses of "Salvation." When his Hands were riveted, with Irons, to the bloody Tree; He difarmed Death of its Sting, and plucked the Prey from the Jaws of Hell. Then, even then, while he was crucified in Weakness, He vanquished the strong Man, and subdued our most formidable Enemies. Even then, he spoiled Principalities; triumphed over the Powers of Darkness; and led Captivity captive.—Now he is exalted to his heavenly Throne, with what a prevailing Efficacy does his Grace go forth, "conquering, and to conquer!"-By this, the Slaves of Sin are rescued from their Bondage, and restored to the Liberty of Righteousness. By this, depraved Wretches, whose Appetites were fenfual, and their Dispositions devilish; are not only renewed, but renewed after the Image of God, and made Partakers of a Divine Nature. Millions, Millions of lost Creatures are fnatched, by the Interpolition of Grace, like Brands from the Burning; and, translated into everlasting Manfions, shine brighter than the Stars, shine bright as the Sun, in the Kingdom of their Father.

Would you then see an incomparably more bright Display of the Divine Excellence, than the unspotted ^{*} Christ, the Wisdom of GOD, and the Power of GOD. I Cor. i. 24.—To the Intent that now, unto the Principalities and Powers in heavenly Places, might be known by the Church (by the amazing Contrivance, and Accomplishment of its Redemption) the deep, extensive, and (wolvewershoe) greatly diversified Wisdom of GOD. Eph. iii. 10.

Firmament, the Spangles of Heaven, or the golden Fountain of Day exhibit? Contemplate Jesus of Nazareth. He is the Brightness of his Father's Glory, and the express Image of his Person. In his immaculate Nature; in his heavenly Tempers; in his most holy Life; the moral Perfections of the Deity are represented, to the highest Advantage *.- Hark! how Mercy, with her charming Voice, speaks in all He utters. See! how Benevolence pours her choicest Stores, in all He does. Did ever Compassion look so amiably soft, as in those pitying Tears; which fwelled his Eyes, and trickled down his Cheeks, to bedew the Rancour of his inveterate Enemies?—Was it possible for Patience to assume a Form fo lovely; as that fweetly-winning Conduct, which bore the Contradicton of Sinners? Which intreated the Obstinate, to be reconciled; befought the Guilty, not to die!—In other Things, we may find some feattered Rays of Jehovah's Glory; but in Christ they are all collected and united. In Christ, they beans forth, with the strongest Radiance, with the most delightful Effulgence. Out of Sion, and in Sion's great Redeemer, hath GOD appeared in perfect Beauty.

SEARCH then, my Soul, above all other Pursuits, search the Records of redeeming Love. Let these be the principal Object of thy Study. Here employ thyself, with the most unwearied Assiduity.—In these are kid all the Treasures of Wisdom and Knowledge †. Such Wisdom;

^{*} In this Sense, that Saying of our Lord is eminently true. He that bath seen ME, bath seen the FATHER. John xiv. 9.

[†] Coloff. ii. 3.—Not a mean Degree, but a Treasure; not one Treasure, but many; not many only, but all Treasures, of true Wisdom, and saving Knowledge; are in Christ, and his glorious Gospel.—The transcendent Excellency of those Treasures seems to be finely intimated, in that other Expression αποκρυφοι, kid; (which may be interpreted)

Wisdom; as charms and aftonishes the very Angels: Engages their closest Attention, and fills them with the deepest Adoration *. Such Knowledge; as qualifies the Possessor, if not for Offices of Dignity on Earth, yet for the most honourable Advancements in the Kingdom of Heaven. Difunited from which Knowledge, all Application is but elaborate Impertinence; and all Science, no better than pompous Ignorance.—These Records contain the faultless Model of Duty, and the noblest Motives to Obedience. Nothing fo powerful, to work a lively Faith, and a joyful Hope; as an attentive Confideration of our Lord's unutterable Merits. Nothing fo fovereign, to antidote the pestilential Influence of the World, and deliver our Affections from a Slavery to ignoble Objects; as an habitual Remembrance of his extreme Agonies. The genuine, the ever-fruitful Source of all Morality, is the unfeigned Love of CHRIST; and preted by the Hebrew Evinon, Job. iii. 21.) laid up, with the utmost Care, and the greatest Sasety. Not lest at all Adventures, to be stumbled upon, by every giddy Wanderer; or to fall into the Arms of the yawning Sluggard; but, like Jewels of the brightest Lustre, or Riches of the highest Value, kept in Store to adorn and reward the diligent Searcher.

* This, I believe, is the Import of the Apostle's Language, though it is not a literal Translation of sis a insurpressi wasparely as, I Pet. i. 12.—I never had such a lively Apprehension of the beautiful Signification of the last Word, as when I have attended a Dissection of some Part of the animal Body. In order to discern the Minutiae of the admirable Frame; the latent Wonders of Art and Mechanism; the Eye is so sharpened, and its Application so intensely bended, as gives a very just experimental Comment on that expressive Phrase waspardan—With such earnest Attention, is the everlasting Gospel contemplated, by the Angelic Orders! How much more, if it were possible, does it deserve the devour and incessant Consideration of human Minds? Since by them, it is not only to be speculated, as a bright and ravishing Display of the Divine Attributes; but to be applied to their fallen Nature, as a most benign Scheme of recovering Grace; as the sure and only Method of obtaining Life and Immortality:

the Cross, the Cross, is the appointed * Altar, from which we may fetch a Coal †, to inkindle this facred Fire.

BEHOLD, therefore, the Man; the matchless and stupendous Man; whose Practice was a Pattern of the most exalted Virtue, and his Person the Mirror of every Divine Perfection. Examine the Memoirs of his heavenly Temper, and exemplary Conversation. Contemplate that Choir of Graces, which were affociated in his Mind, and shed the highest Lustre on all his Actions. Familiarize to thy Thoughts his instructive Discourses, and enter into the very Spirit of his refined Doctrines. That the Graces may be transfused into thy Breast, and the Doctrines transcribed in thy Life.-Follow Him to Calvary's horrid Eminence; to Calvary's fatal Catastrophe. Where Innocence, Dignity, and Merit, were made perfect through Sufferings: each shining, with all possible Splendor, through the tragical Scene; fomewhat like his own radiant Bow, then glowing with the greatest Beauty, when appearing on the darkest Cloud.—Be thy most constant Attention fixed, on that lovely and forrowful Spectacle. Behold the spotless Victim, nailed to the Tree, and stabbed to the Heart. Hear Him pouring out Prayers, for his Murderers; before He poured out his Soul, for Transgressors. See the Wounds, that stream with Forgiveness, and bleed Balm for a distempered World. O! fee the Justice of the Almighty and his Goodness; his Mercy and his Vengeance; every tremendous and gracious Attribute manifested; manifested er de la la companya de la companya

^{*} And I, fays our LORD, if I be lifted up from the Earth, and extended on the Crofs. will draw all Men unto me: will give such a rich and transcendent Display of my Love, as shall constitute the most powerful and prevailing Attractive of theirs. John xii. 32.

[†] Alluding to Isaiah vi. 6.

with inexpressible Glory, in that most ignominious, yet grandest, of Transactions.

SINCE GOD is so inconceivably great, as these his marvellous Works declare;

Since the great Sov'reign fends Ten Thousand Worlds, To tell us, He resides above them all, In Glory's unapproachable Recess *;

how can We forbear hastening, with Moses, bowing Ourfelves to the Earth, and worshipping.

O! what an honourable, as well as advantageous Employ, is Prayer!—Advantageous. By Prayer, We cultivate that improving Correspondence with JEHO-VAH, We carry on that gladdening Intercourse with his SPIRIT, which must begin Here, in order to be completed in Eternity.—Honourable. By Prayer, we have Access to that mighty Potentate; whose Sceptre sways universal Nature, and whose rich Regalia fill the Skies with Lustre. Prayer, places us in his Presence-Chamber; while "the Blood of Sprinkling," procures us a gracious Audience.

SHALL I then blush to be found prostrate, before the Throne of Grace? Shall I be ashamed to have it known; that I offer up social Supplications in the Family, or am

.

^{*} For this Quotation, and feveral valuable Hints, I acknowledge myfelf indebted to those beautiful and sublime Poems, intituled Night-Thoughts.—Of which I shall only say, That I receive fresh Pleasure, and richer Improvement, from every renewed Perusal. And, I think, I shall have Reason to bless the indulgent Bestower of all Wisdom, for those instructive and animating Compositions, even in my last Moments. Than which, nothing can more emphatically speak their superior Excellence, nor give a more solid Satisfaction to their worthy Author.—Happy should I think myself, if these little Sketches of contemplative Devotion, might be honoured with the most inserior Degree of the same Success. Might receive a Testimony, not from the Voice of Fame, but from the dying Lips of some edified Christian.

conscientious in observing my private Retirement? Rather, let me glory in this unspeakable Privilege. Let me reckon it the neblest Posture, to fall low on my Knees before his Footstool; and the highest Honour to enjoy Communion with his most exalted Majesty.—Incomparably more noble, than to sit, in Person, on the triumphal Chariot; or to stand, in Essigy, amidst the Temple of Worthies.

Most inestimable, in such a View, is that Promise; which fo often occurs in the prophetic Writings, and is the crowning Benefit of the new Covenant, I will be thy God*.—Will this supremely excellent, and Almighty Being, vouchsafe to be my Portion? To settle upon a poor Sinner, not the Heritage of a County; not the Possession of the whole Earth; but his own ever-blessed Self? May I then, through his free condescending Grace, and the unknown Merits of his Son, look upon all thefe infinitely noble Attributes as my Treasure? May I regard the Wisdom, which superintends such a Multitude of Worlds, as my Guide; the Power, which produced, and preserves them in Existence, as my Guard; the Goodness, which, by an endless Communication of Favours, renders them all fo many Habitations of Happiness, as my exceeding great Reward?—What a Fund of Felicity, is included in fuch a Bleffing? How often does the Israelitish Prince exult in the Assurance, that this unutterable and boundless Good is his own? Interested in this, he bids Defiance to every Evil, that can be dreaded; and rests in certain Expectation of every Bleffing, that can be defired. The LORD is my Light, and my Salvation; whom then shall I fear? The LORD, with an Air of Exultation, he repeats both his Affiance, and his Challenge, is the Strength of my Life; of whom then shall I be afraid *? Nothing so efficient, as his appropriating Faith, to inspire a Dignity and in, superior to transitory Trisles; or to create a Calmness of Temper, unalarmed by vulgar Fears, unappalled by Death itself.—The LORD is my Shepherd, says the same truly gallant and heroic Personage: therefore shall I lack nothing †. How is it possible, He should suffer Want, who has the All-sufficient Fulness for his Supply? So long as unerring Wisdom is capable of contriving the Means; so long as uncontroulable Power is able to execute them; such a One cannot fail of being safe and happy; whether he continue amidst the Vicissitudes of Time, or depart into the unchangeable Eternity.

Here, let us stand a Moment, and humbly contemplate this great God, together with ourselves, in a relauve View.—If we reflect on the Works of material Nature, their Number incomprehensible, and their Extent unmeasurable: each of them apart, so admirably framed; the Connections of the Whole, fo exquisitely regulated; and all derived, from one and the fame glorious Agent. -If we recollect the far more noble Accomplishments of elegant Taste, and discerning Judgment; of refined Affections, and exalted Sentiments; which are to be found, among the feveral Orders of intelligent Existence: and all of them flowing, in rich Emanations, from the one fole Fountain of intellectual Light.-If we farther confider this Author of material Beauty, and moral Excellency, as a Guardian, a Governor, and Benefactor to all his Creatures: supporting the whole System, and protecting each Individual, by an ever-watchful Providence; presiding over the minutest Affairs, and causing all Events to terminate in the most extensive Good; heaping, with unremitted Liberality, his Benefits upon every capable Object, and making the Circuit of the Universe a Seminary of Happiness—Is it possible for the human Heart, under such captivating Views, to be indifferent towards this most benign, most bountiful Original of Being and of Bliss? Can any be so immersed in Stupidity, as to say unto the Almighty—in the Language of an irreligious Temper, and licentious Life, to say? "Depart from Us; we implore not thy Favour; nor desire the Knowledge of thy Ways."—Wonder, O Heavens! be amazed, O Earth! and let the Inhabitants of both express their Astonishment, at this unparalleled Complication of disingenuous, ungrateful, destructive Perversenes!

^{*} Pſal. xxvii. 1.

3 L . . .

Is we consider our fallen and impersett State; frail in our Bodies; enseebled in our Minds; in every Part of our Constitution, and in all the Occurrences of Life, "Eke a tottering Wall, or a broken Hedge."—If we survey our indigent and instrum State; without Holiness; without spiritual Strength; our Possession of present Conveniencies, intirely dependent on God's sovereign Pleasure; yea, forseited, justly sorseited, with every survey Hope, by a thousand aggravated Iniquities.—If we add the various Disasters of our Condition; agitated as we are by tumultuous Passions; oppressed with dispiriting Fears; held in Suspense by a Variety of perplexing * Cares:

* Perplexing—Those who read the original Language of the New Testament, are sufficiently apprised, that such is the Significancy of that benevolent Dissuative, urged by our Lord, un mercuavale, Matt. vi. 25.—I beg Leave, for the Sake of the unlearned Reader, to observe; That our Translation, though for the most Part saithful and excellent, has here misrepresented our Divine Master's Meaning, Take no Thought for your Food, for your Raiment, for your bodily Welfare, is not only not the true Sense, but the very Reverse of the Scriptural Doctrine. We are required to take a prudent and moderate Thought, for the Necessaries of Life. The Sluggard, who neglects this decent Presenting Cares: liable to Pains, and exposed to Troubles; Troubles from every Quarter; Troubles of every Kind—Can we, amidst so many Wants, under such deplorable Infirmities, and subject to such disastrous Accidents-can we be unconcerned, whether God's omnipotent, irrefiftible, all-conducting Hand be against Us, or for Us? Imagination itself shudders at the Thought!-Can we rest satisfied, without a well-grounded Persuasion, that we are reconciled to this fupreme LORD, and the Objects of this unchangeable Goodness!—If there be an abandoned Wretch, whose Apprehensions are so fatally blinded; who is fo utterly loft to all Sense of his Duty, and of his Interest; let me bewail his Misery, while I abhor his Impiety. Bewail his Mifery; though Popularity, with her choicest Laurels, adorn his Brow; though Affluence, with her richest Delicacies, load his Table; though half a Nation, or half a World, conspire to call him bappy.

MAY I, by a believing Application, folace myfelf in this everlafting Source of Love, Perfection, and Joy? Grant me this Request, and I ask no more.—Only, that I may expect, not with a reluctant Anxiety, but with a ready Chearfulness, the Arrival of that important Hour; when this Veil of Flesh shall drop, and the Shadows of Mortality slee away. When I shall no longer complain of obscure Knowledge; languid Affections; and imperfect Fruition—but shall see the uncreated and immortal Majesty. See Him, not in this distant and unaffecting Me-caution, is feverely reprimanded; is fent to one of the meanest Animals, to blush for his Folly, and learn Discretion from her Conduct, Prov. vi. 6. Our Saviour's Precept, and the exact Sense of his Expression, is, Take no anxious Thought; indulge no perplexing Care. No such Care, as may argue an unreasonable Distrust of Providence; or may rend and tear your Minds with distressing, with pernicious Solicitude.

thod, of reasoning from his Works; but with the most clear and direct Intuition of the Mind.—When I shall love Him, not with a cold and contracted Spirit; but with the most lively and inlarged Emotions of Gratitude.

—When I had incessantly enjoy the Light of his Countenance; and be united, inseparably united to his allglorious Godhead.—Take, ye Auditious, unenvied and unopposed, take to yourselves the Toys of State. May I be enabled to rejoice in this blessed Hope; and to triumph in that amiable, that adorable, that delightful Name, the Lord My God! And I shall scarce bestow a Thought, on the splendid Pageantry of the World, unless it be to despise its empty Pomp, and to pity its deluded Admirers.

ALL these Bodies, though immense in their Size, and almost infinite in their Multitude, are obedient to the Divine Command. The God of Willom "telleth their "Numbers," and is intimately acquainted with their various Properties. The God of Power "calleth them "all by their Names," and assigns them whatsoever Office He pleases.—He marshals all the starry Legions, with infinitely greater Ease, and nicer Order; than the most expert General, arranges his disciplined Troops. He appoints their Posts; he marks their Route; he fixes the Time for their Return. The Posts, which he appoints, they occupy, without fail. In the Route, which he settles, they persevere, without the least Deviation. And to the Instant *, which he fixes for their Return, they are precifely punctual.—He has given them a Law, which, through a long Revolution of Ages, shall not be broken; unless his sovereign Will interposes, for its Repeal. Then indeed, the Motion of the celestial Orbs is controuled; their Action remains suspended; or their Influence receives a new Direction.—The Sun, at his Creation, iffued forth with a Command, to travel perpetually through the Heavens. Since which, he has never neglected to perform the great Circuit; "rejoicing as " a Giant to run his Race." But, when it is requisite to accomplish the Purposes of Divine Love, the Orders are countermanded; the flaming Courier remits his Career; flands still in Gibeon *; and, for the Conveniency of the chosen People, holds back the falling Day.—The Moon was dispatched with a Charge, never to intermit her revolving Course, till Day and Night come to an End. But when the Children of Providence, are to be favoured with an uncommon Continuance of Light, she halts in her March; makes a folemn Pause in the Valley of Ajalon +; and delays to bring on her attendant Train of Shadows.—When the Enemies of the LORD are to be discomfited, the Stars are levied into the Service; the Stars are armed, and take the Field; the Stars, in their Courfes, fought against Sisera 1.

^{* &}quot;The Planets, and all the innumerable Host of heavenly Bodies, "perform their Courses and Revolutions, with so much Certainty and Exactness, as never once to fail; but, for almost 6000 Years, come constantly about to the same Period, in the hundredth Part of Minute." STACKHOUSE's Hist. Bible.

So

* This is spoken in Conformity to the Scripture Language, and according to the common Notion. With respect to the Power which effected the Alteration; it is much the same Thing, and alike miraculous; whether the Sun or the Earth, be supposed to move.

† Josh. x. 12, 13.—The Prophet Habakkuk, according to his lofty Manner, celebrates this Event; and points out, in a very poetical Diction, the Defign of so surprising a Miracle.—The Sun and Moon stood still in their Habitation: In the Light, the long-continued and miraculous Light, thy Arrows, edged with Destruction, walked on their awful Errand; in the clear Shining of the Day, protracted for this very Purpose, thy glittering Spear, launched by thy People, but guided by thy Hand, sprung to its Prey. Hab. iii. 11.

† Judg. v. 20.—The scriptural Phrase fought against, will, I hope, be a proper Warrant for every Expression, I have used on this Occasion.

So dutiful is material Nature! So obsequious, in all her Forms, to her Creator's Pleasure!-The bellowing Thunders, liften to his Voice; and the vollied Lightnings, observe the Direction of his Eye. The flying Storm, and impetuous Whirlwind, wear his Yoke. The raging Waves revere his Nod: they shake the Earth; they dash the Skies; yet, never offer to pass the Limits, which he has prescribed.—Even the planetary Spheres; though vastly larger, than this wide-extended Earth; are, in his Hand, as Clay in the Hands of the Potter. Though, swifter than the Northern Blast, they sweep the long Tracts of Æther; yet, are they guided by his Reins, and execute whatever He injoins.—All those enormous Globes of central Fire, which beam through the boundless Azure; in comparison of which, an Army of Planets, were like a Swarm of Summer Infects; those, even those, are conformable to his Will, as the melting Wax to the impressed Seal .- Since all, ALL is obedient, throughout the whole Ascent of Things, shall Man be the only Rebel against the Almighty Maker? Shall these unruly Appetites, reject his Government, and refuse their Allegiance? Shall these headstrong Passions, break loose fion.—The Passage is generally supposed to signify, that some very dreadful Meteors (which the Stars were thought to influence) such as sierce Flashes of Lightning; impetuous Showers of Rain; and rapid Storms of Hail; were employed by the Almighty to terrify, annoy, and overthrow the Enemics of Israel. If so, there cannot be a more clear and lively Paraphrase on the Text, than those sine Lines of a sewish Writer.—His severe Wrath shall HE sharpen for a Saword; and the World shall sight with him against the Ungedly. Then, shall the right-aiming Thunderbolts go abroad; and from the Clouds, as from a well-drawn Bow, shall they sly to the Mark. And Hail-stones, full of Wrath, shall be cast out of a Stone Bow; and the Water of the Sea shall rage against them; and the Floods (as was the Case of the River Kishon) shall cruelly drown them. Yea, a mighty Wind shall stand up against them; and, like a Storm, shall blow them away. Wisd. v. 20, 21, 22, 23.

from Divine Restraint; and run wild, in exorbitant Sallies, after their own Imaginations?

O My Soul, be stung with Remorfe, and over-whelmed with Confusion, at the Thought! Is it not a righteous Thing, that the bleffed God should sway the Sceptre, with the most absolute Authority, over all the Creatures; which his Power has formed? Especially over those Creatures; whom his diftinguishing Favour, has endued with the noble Principle of Reason, and made capable of a blissful Immortality? Sure, if all the Ranks of inanimate Existence, conform to their Maker's Decree, by the Necessity of their Nature; this more excellent Race of Beings, should pay their equal Homage, by the willing Compliance of their Affections .- Come then, all ye Faculties of my Mind; come, all ye Powers of my Body; give up yourfelves, without a Moment's Delay, without the least Referve, to his Governance. Stand, like dutiful Servants, at his Footstool; in an everlafting Readiness, to do whatsoever He requires: to ^{} This Argument, I acknowledge, is not absolutely conclusive. But it is popular and striking. Nor can I think myself obliged, in such a Work; where Fancy bears a confiderable Sway; to proceed always with the Caution and Exactness, of a Disputer in the Schools. If there be some Appearance of Analogy, between the Fact and the Inference, it feems fufficient for my Purpose; though the Deduction should not be necessary, nor the Process strictly syllogystical .- One of the Apostolic Fathers, has an affecting and fublime Paragraph, which runs intirely in this Form: Ηλιος τε και σεληνη αςερων τε χοροι, καθα την διαθαίην αυθε εν ομονοια, διχα σιασής σιαρεκδασεως, εξελισσυσιν τυς επιθελαγμένος αυτοις egrouse. The Sun, the Moon, and the flarry Choir, without the leaft Deviation, and with the utmost Harmony, perform the Revolutions a pointed them by the supreme Decree. From which Remark, and Abundance of other similar Instances, observable in the Occonomy of Nature; he exhorts Christians, to a cordial Unanimity among themselves, and a dutiful Obedience to God. Vid. Clem. Roman. 1 Ep. ad Corinth. Sect. 20. -See also a beautiful Ode in Dr. Watts's Lyric Poems, intituled The Comparison and Complaint, which turns upon this very Thought.

be whatfoever He appoints. To further, with united Efforts, the Purposes of his Glory in this earthly Scene: or else to separate, without Reluctance, at his Summons; the one, to sleep in the filent Dust; the other, to advance his Honour, in some remoter Colony of his Kingdom.—Thus, may I join with all the Works of the Lord, in all the Places of his Dominion, to recognize his universal Supremacy; and proclaim Him Sovereign of Souls, as well as Ruler of Worlds.

AT my first coming abroad, all these Luminaries were eslipsed, by the overpowering Lustre of the Sun. They were all placed in the very fame Stations; and played the same sprightly Beams; yet, not one of them was feen. As the Daylight wore away, and the fober Shades advanced; Hesperus, who leads the starry Train, disclosed his radiant Forehead, and catched my Eye. While I stood gazing on his bright and beautiful Aspect, feveral of his Attendants peeped through the blue Curtains. Scarce had I turned to observe these fresh Emanations of Splendor; but others dropt the Veil: others stole into View. When lo! faster and more numerous, Multitudes fprung from Obscurity; they poured, in shining Troops, and in sweet Consusion, over all the empyrean Plain. Till the Firmament seemed, like one vast Constellation; and "a Flood of Glory burst from " all the Skies."

Is not such the Rise, and such the Progress of a true Conversion, in the prejudiced Insidel, or inattentive Sinner? During the Period of his vainer Years, a Thousand interesting Truths, lay utterly undiscovered; a Thousand momentous Concerns, were intirely disregarded. But, when divine Grace dissipates the delusive Glitter, which dazzled his Understanding, and beguiled his Affections; then, he begins to discern, dimly to discern, the Things which belong unto his Peace. Some Admonition of Scripture, darts Conviction into his Soul; as the Glimmering of a Star, pierces the Gloom of Night. -Then, perhaps, another awful, or chearing Text, impresses Terror, or diffuses Comfort. A Threatening alarms his Fears, or a Promise awakens his Hopes. This, posfibly, is fucceeded by some afflistive Dispensation of Providence; and improved by forme edifying and instructive Conversation. All which is established, as to its Continuance; and inlarged, as to its Influence; by a diligent Study of the facred Word.—By this Means, new Truths continually pour their Evidence. Scenes of refined and exalted, but hitherto unknown Delight, address Him with their Attractives. New Defires take Wing; new Pursuits are set on foot. A new Turn of Mind forms his Temper; a new Habit of Conversation regulates his Life. In a Word; old Things are passed away; and all Things become new. He, who was sometime Darkness, is now Light, and Life, and Joy in the LORD.

the

THE more attentively I view the crystal Concave, the more fully I difcern the Richness of its Decorations. Abundance of minuter Lights, which lay concealed from a superficial Notice, are visible on a closer Examination. Especially in those Tracts of the Sky, which are called the Galaxy; and are diffinguishable, by a fort of milky Path. There, the Stars are crouded, rather than diffeminated. The Region feems to be all on a Blaze, with their blended Rays.—Besides this vast Profusion, which in my prefent Situation the Eye discovers; was I to make my Survey, from any other Part of the Globe, lying nearer the Southern Pole; I should behold a new Choir of starry Bodies, which have never appeared within our Horizon.—Was I (which is still more wonderful) either Here or There, to view the Firmament with the Virtuofo's Virtuoso's Giass; I should find a prodigious Multitude of flaming Orbs, which, immerfed in Depths of Æther. escape the keenest unaffisted Sight *-Yet, in these various Situations; even with the Aid of the Telescopic Tube; I should not be able to descry the Half, perhaps not a Thousandth Part, of those majestic Luminaries, which the vast expansive Heavens contain † .- So, the more diligently I pursue my Search, into those Oracles of eternal Truth, the Scriptures; I perceive a wider, a deeper, an ever increasing Fund of spiritual Treasures. I perceive the brighter Strokes of Wisdom, and the richer Displays of Goodness; a more transcendent Excellency in the illustrious Messiah, and a more deplorable Vileness in fallen Man; a more immaculate Purity in Gop's Law; and more precious Privileges in his Gofpel. Yet, after a Course of Study, ever so assiduous; ever so prolonged; I should have Reason to own myself, a mere Babe, in heavenly Knowledge; or, at most, but a puerile Proficient, in the School of Christ.

AFTER all my most accurate Inspection, those strrry Orbs appear but as glittering Points. Even the Planets,

* Come forth, O Man, yon azure Round furvey,
And view those Lamps, which yield eternal Day.
Bring forth thy Glasses: Clear thy wond'ring Eyes;
Millions beyond the former Millions rise:
Look farther:—Millions more blaze from remoter Skies.

See an ingenious Peem, intitled the Universe.

† How noble, considered in this View, are the Celebrations of the Divine Majedy, which frequently occur in the facred Writings! It is the LORD that made the Heavens. Pfal. xevi. 5.—What a prodigious Dignity, does such a Sense of Things give to that devout Ascription of Fraise! Thou, even Thou, art LORD clone; Thou hast made Heaven, the Heaven of Heavens, with all their Hest. Nehem. ix. 6.—Examined by this Rule, the beautiful Climax in our inspired Hymn, is sublime beyond Compare. Praise HIM, Sun and Moon; Praise HIM, all ye Start of Light: Praise HIM, ye Heaven of Heavens. Pfal. exhviii.

though fo much nearer our earthly Mansion, feem only like burning Bullets. If then, we have fuch imperfest Apprehensions of visible and material Things: how much more scanty and inadequate, must be our Notions of invisible and immortal Objects!—We behold the Stars. Though every one is incomparably bigger, than the Globe we inhabit; yet they dwindle, upon our Survey, into the most diminutive Forms. Thus, we see by Faith the Glories of the bleffed Jesus; the atoning Efficacy of his Death; the justifying Merit of his Righteousness; and the Joys, which are referved for his Followers. But alas! even our most exalted Ideas, are vastly below the Truth. As much below the Truth; as the Report, which our Eyes make of those celestial Edifices, is inferior to their real Grandeur.—Should we take in all the magnifying Affiftances, which Art has contrived; those luminous Bodies, would elude our Skill, and appear as fmall as ever. Should an Inhabitant of Earth, travel towards the Cope of Heaven; and be carried forwards, in his aërial Journey, more than a Hundred and fixty Millions of Miles *; even in that advanced Situation, those Oceans of Flame, would look no larger, than radiant Specks.—In like manner, conceive ever fo magnificently, of the Redeemer's Honours; and of the Blifs, which he has purchased for his People; yet you will fall short. Raife your Imagination higher; stretch your Invention wider; give them all the Scope, which a foaring and excursive Fancy can take; still, your Conceptions will be extremely disproportionate, to their genuine Perfec-

^{*} This, incredible as it may seem, is not a mere Supposition, but a real Fact. For, about the Twenty-sirst of December, we are above 160,000,000 of Miles nearer the Northern Parts of the Sky, than we were at the Twenty-sirst of June. And yet, with regard to the Stars situate in that Quarter, we perceive no Change in their Aspest, nor any Augmentation of their Magnitude.

tions.—Vast are the Bodies, which roll in the Expanse of Heaven: vaster far are those Fields of Æther, through which they run their endless Round: But the Excellency of Jesus, and the Happiness laid up for his Servants, are greater than either; than both; than all. An inspired Writer calls the former, "The unsearchable Riches of "Christ;" and stiles the latter, "An exceeding great and eternal Weight of Glory."

Ir those Stars, are so many inexhaustible Magazines of Fire, and immense Refervoirs of Light; there is no Reason to doubt, but they have some very grand Uses, fuitable to the Magnificence of their Nature. To fpecify, or explain, the particular Purposes they answer; is altogether impossible, in our present State of Distance and Ignorance. This, however, we may clearly difcern; they are disposed in that very Manner, which is most pleasing and most serviceable to Mankind .- They are not placed at an infinite Remove, so as to lie beyond our Sight; neither are they brought fo near our Abode, as to annoy us with their Beams. We see them shine on every Side. The deep Azure, which ferves them as a Ground, heightens their Splendor. At the fame Time, their Influence is gentle, and their Rays are destitute of Heat. So that we are furrounded with a Multitude of fiery Globes, which beautify and illuminate the Firmament, without any Risk, either to the Coolness of our Night, or the Quiet of our Repose.—Who can sufficiently admire that wondrous Benignity; which on our Account, strews the Earth with Bleffings of every Kind; and vouchfafes to make the very Heavens, subservient to our Delight?

It is not folely to adorn the Roof of our Palace, with coftly Gildings; that God commands the celeftial Luminaries, to glitter through the Gloom. We also reap confiderable Benefits, from their Ministry.—They divide our Time, and fix its folemn Periods. They fettle the Order of our Works; and are, according to the Deftination mentioned in facred Writ, "for Signs, and for "Seasons; for Days, and for Years." The Returns of Heat and Cold alone, would have been too precarious a Rule. But these radiant Bodies; by the Variation, and also by the Regularity, of their Motions; afford a Method of calculating, absolutely certain, and sufficiently obvious. By this, the Farmer is instructed, when to commit his Grain to the Furrows, and how to conduct the Operations of Husbandry. By this, the Sailor knows when to proceed on his Voyage, with least Peril; and how to carry on the Business of Navigation with most Success.

Why should not the Christian, the Probationer for Eternity, learn from the same Monitors, to number—for nobler Purposes, to number his Days; and duly to trans-act the grand—grand Affairs of his everlasting Salvation? Since God has appointed so many bright Measurers of our Time, to determine its larger Periods, and to minute down its ordinary Stages; fure, this most strongly inculcates its Value, and should powerfully prompt us to improve it.—Behold! the supreme Lord marks the Progress of our Life, in that most conspicuous Kalendar above. Does not fuch an Ordination tell us, and in the most emphatical Language; That our Life is given for Use, not for Waste? That no Portion of it is delivered, but under a strict Account; that all of it is entered as it passes, in the Divine Register: and, therefore, that the Stewards of fuch a Talent, are to expect a future Reckoning?—Behold! the very Heavens are bid to be the Accomptants, of our Years, and Months, and Days. O! may this induce us to manage them, with a vigilant Frugality; to part with them, as Misers with their boarded Treasure, warily and circumspectly; and, if pos-B b 2 fible, as Merchants with their rich Commodities, not without an Equivalent, either in personal Improvement, or social Usefulness!

How bright the starry Diamonds shine! The Ambition of Eastern Monarchs could imagine no Distinction, more noble and fublime, than that of being likened to those beaming Orbs . - They form Night's richest Dress; and sparkle upon her sable Robe, like Jewels of the finest Lustre. Like Jewels! I wrong their Character. The lucid Stone has no Brilliancy; quenched is the Flame even of the golden Topaz; compared with those glowing Decorations of Heaven.—How widely are their radiant Honours diffused! No Nation so remote, but sees their Beauty, and rejoices in their Usefulness. They have been admired by all preceding Generations; and every rifing Age, will gaze on their Charms, with renewed Delight.—How animating, then, is that Promise, made to the faithful Ministers of the Gospel! "They "that turn many to Righteousness, shall shine as the "Stars for ever and ever †." Is not this a most winning Encouragement, "to spend and be spent," in the Service of Souls? Methinks, the Stars beckon, as they twinkle. Methinks they shew me their Splendors, on purpose to inspire me with Alacrity, in the Race set before me; on purpose to enliven my Activity, in the Work that is given me to do .- Yes; ye majestic Monitors, I understand your Meaning. If Honour has any Charms; if true Glory, the Glory which cometh from God, is any Attractive; you display the most powerful Incitements, to exercise all Assiduity in my holy Vocation. will, henceforth, observe your Intimation; and, when Zeal becomes languid, have recourse to your heavenly ^{} Numb. xxiv. 17. Dan. viii. 10.

[†] Dan. xii. 3.

Lamps. If so be, I may rekindle its Ardor, at those inextinguishable Fires.

OF the Polar Star, it is observable; that, while other Luminaries alter their Situation, this feems invariably fixed *. While other Luminaries, now, mount the Battlements of Heaven, and appear upon Duty; now, retire beneath the Horizon, and refign to a fresh Set, the Watches of the Night; this never departs from its Station. This, in every Season, maintains an uniform Pofition; and is always to be found, in the fame Tract of the Northern Sky.-How often has this beamed bright Intelligence on the Sailor; and conducted the Keel, to its defired Haven? In early Ages, those, who went down to the Sea in Ships, and occupied their Business in great Waters, had fcarce any other fure Guide for their wandering Vessel. This therefore they viewed, with the most folicitous Attention. By this, they formed their Observations, and regulated their Voyage. When this was obscured by Clouds, or inveloped in Mists; the trembling Mariner was bewildered, on the watery Waste. His Thoughts fluctuated, as much as the floating Surge; and he know not, where he was advanced, or whither he should steer. But, when this auspicious Star broke through the Gloom; it diffipated the Anxiety of his Mind, and cleared up his dubious Passage. He re-assumed, with Alacrity, the Management of the Helm; and was able to shape his Course, with some tolerable Degree of Satisfaction and Certainty.

SUCH, only much clearer in its Light, and much furer in its Direction, is the Holy Word of God, to those Myriads of intellectual Beings, who are bound for the eternal Shores. Who, embarked in a Veffel of feeble Flesh, are to pass the Waves of this tempestuous and perilous World. In all Difficulties, those sacred Pages shed an encouraging Ray; in all Uncertainties, they fuggest the right Determination, and point out the proper Procedure. What is still a more inestimable Advantage; they, like the Star which conducted the Eastern Sages, make plain the Way of Access to a Redeemer. They display his unspeakable Merits: they discover the Method of being interested in his great Atonement; and lead the weary Soul, toffed by Troubles, and shattered by Temptations, to that only Harbour of peaceful Repose.—Let us, therefore, attend to this unerring Directory, with the same Constancy of Regard, as the Sea-faring Man observes his Compass. Let us become as thoroughly acquainted with this facred Chart, as the Pilot is with every trusty Mark, that gives Notice of a lurking Rock; and with every open Road, that yields a fafe Passage into the Port. Above all, let us commit ourselves to this infallible Guidance, with the fame implicit Refignation; let us conform our Conduct to its exalted Precepts, with the fame fedulous Care; as the Children of Ifrael, when fojourning in the trackless Desert, followed the Pillar of Fire, and the Motions of the miraculous Cloud. So, will it introduce us, not into an earthly Ganaan, flowing with Milk and Honey; but into an immortal Faradife, where is the Fulness of Toy, and where are Pleasures for evermore. It will introduce us into those nappy, happy Regions, where our Sun shall no more go down, nor our Moon withdraw itself; for the LORD shall be our everlasting Light, and the Days of our Mourning, together with the Fatigues of our Pilgrimage, shall be ended *. .

^{*} I fpeak in Conformity to the Appearance of the Object. For, though this remarkable Star revolves round the Pole, its Motion is fo flow, and the Circle it describes so fmall; as render both the Revolution and Change of Situation, hardly perceiveable.

I PERCEIVE a great Variety, in the Size and Splendor of those Gems of Heaven. Some, are of the first Magnitude; others, of an inferior Order. Some glow, with intense Flames; others glimmer, with fainter Beams. Yet, all are beautiful; all have their peculiar Lustre, and distinct Use; all tend, in their different Degrees, to enamel the Cope of Heaven, and embroider the Robe of Night.—This Circumstance is remarked by an Author, whose Sentiments are a Source of Wisdom, and the very Standard of Truth. "One Star, "says the Apostle of the Gentiles, differeth from anom ther Star in Glory: So also is the Resurrection of the Dead."

In the World above, are various Degrees of Happiness, various Seats of Honour. Some will rise to more illustrious Distinctions, and richer Joys *. Some, like Veffels of ample Capacity, will admit more copious Accessions of Light and Excellence. Yet, there will be no Want, no Deficiency, in any; but a Fulness both of Divine Satisfactions, and personal Persections. Each will enjoy all the Good; and be adorned with all the Glory; that his Heart can wish, or his Condition receive.-None will know what it is to envy. Nor the least Malevolence, nor the least Selfishness, but everlafting Friendship prevails, and a mutual Complacency in each other's Delight. Love, cordial Love, will give every particular Saint, a Participation of all Fruitions +; which are diffused through the whole Asfembly of the Bleffed.—No one eclipses, but each reflects

^{* 1} Cor. xv. 41, 42. The great Mr. Mede prefers the Sense here given; and the learned Dr. Hammond admits it, into his Paraphrase. Whose joint Authority, though far from excluding any other, yet is a sufficient Warrant for this Application of the Words.

[†] Tolle Invidiam, & tuum est quod habeo: Tolle Invidiam, & meum est quod habes, Augustine.

Light upon his Brother. A fweet Interchange of Rays subsist; all enlightened by the great Fountain, and all enlightening one another. By which reciprocal Communication of Pleasure and Amity, each will be continually receiving from, each incessantly adding to, the general Felicity.

HAPPY, fupremely happy they, who are admitted into the celestial Mansions. Better to be a Door-keeper in those "Ivory Palaces *," than to fill the most gorgeous Throne on Earth. The very lowest Place at Goo's Right-hand, is distinguished Honour, and consummate Bliss.—O! that we may, in some measure, anticipate that beatistic State, while we remain in our Banishment below! May we, by rejoicing in the superior Prosperity of another, make it our own! And, provided the general Result is Harmony, be content, be pleased, with whatsoever Part is assigned to our Share, in the universal Choir of Assign.

WHILE I am confidering the heavenly Bodies, I must not intirely forget those fundamental Laws of our modern Astronomy, Projection and Astraction. One of which is the all-combining Cement, the other is the ever-operative Spring, of the mighty Frame.—In the Beginning, the all-creating Fiat impressed a proper Degree of Motion, on each of those whirling Orbs. Which, if not controuled, would have carried them on, in straight Lines, and to endless Lengths; till they were even lost, in the Abyss of Space. But, the gravitating Property, being added to the projectile Force, determined their Courses to a circular † Form; and obliged the

* Pfal. xlv. 8.

[†] I am aware, the planetary Orbits are not strictly circular, but rather elliptical. However, as they are but a small Remove from the perfectly round Figure; and partake of it incomparable more, than the reluctant Rovers, to perform their destined Rounds. -Were either of those Causes to suspend their Action, all the harmoniously moving Spheres would be disconcerted. Would degenerate into fluggish inactive Masses: and falling into the central Fire, be burnt to Ashes. Or elfe, would exorbitate into wild Confusion; and each. by the Rapidity of its Whirl, be dissipated into Atoms, But, the impulsive and attractive Energy, being most nicely attempered to each other; and, under the immediate Operation of the Almighty, exerting themselves in perpetual Concert; the various Globes run their radiant Races, without the least Interruption or the least Deviation. So as to create the alternate Changes of Day and Night; and distribute the useful Vicissitudes of succeeding Seasons. So as to answer all the great Ends of a gracious Providence; and procure every comfortable Convenience, for univerfal Nature.

Does not this Constitution of the material, very naturally lead the Thoughts, to those grand Principles of the moral and devotional World, Faith and Love? These are often celebrated by the inspired Apostle, as a comprehensive Summary of the Gospel*. These inspired the Breast, and regulated the Progress, of each the Trajectories of the Comets; I choose to represent the Thing in this View. Especially, because the Notion of a Circle, is so much! more intelligible to the Generality of Readers, than that of an Ellipsis; and because I laid it down for a Rule, not to admit any such abstraction, or difficult Expression, as should demand a painful Attention, instead of raising an agreeable Idea. For which Reason, I have avoided technical Terms; have taken no Notice of Jupiter's Satellites, or Saturn's Ring; have not so much as mentioned the Names of the Planets, nor attempted to wade into any Depths of the Science. Lest to those who have no Opportunity of using the Telescope, or of acquainting themselves with a System of Astronomy, I should propound Riddles, rather than display entertaining and edifying Truths.

^{*} Col. i. 4. Philem. ver. 5.

private Christian. These united the whole Congregation of the Faithful to God, and one another. To God. the great Centre, in the Bonds of Gratitude and Devotion; to one another, by a reciprocal Intercourse of brotherly Affections, and friendly Offices .- If you ask; Why is it impossible for the true Believer, to live at all Adventures? to ftagnate in Sloth, or habitually to deviate from Duty ?-We answer; It is owing to "his "Faith, working by Love *." He affuredly trusts, that CHRIST has fustained the Infamy, and endured the Torment, due to his Sins. He firmly relies on that Divine Propitiation, for the Pardon of all his Guilt; and humbly expects everlasting Salvation, as the Purchase of his Saviour's Merits. This produces such a Spirit of Gratitude, as refines his Inclinations, and animates his whole Behaviour. He cannot, he cannot run to Excess of Riot; because Love to his adorable Redeemer, like a strong, but filken Curb, sweetly restrains him. He cannot, he cannot lie lulled in a lethargic Indolence; because Love to the same infinite Benefactor, like a pungent, but endearing Spur, pleasingly excites him.—In a. Word; Faith supplies the powerful Impulse, while Love gives the determining Biafs; and leads the willing Feet, through the whole Circle of Gop's Commandments. By the united Efficacy of these heavenly Graces, the Christian Conduct is preserved, in the Uniformity and Beauty of Holiness; as by the blended Power of those Newtonian Principles, the folar System revolves, in a steady and magnificent Regularity.

How admirable, how extensive, how diversified, is the Force of this single Principle, Attraction +!—This ^{*} Gal. v. 6.

⁺ I mean the Attraction both of Gravitation and Cohesion.

penetrates the very Essence of all Bodies, and diffuses itself to the remotest Limits of the mundane System.— By this, the Worlds impressed with Motion, hang felf-balanced on their Centres *; and, though Orbs of immense Magnitude, require nothing, but this amazing Property, for their Support.—To this we ascribe a Phænomenon, of a very different Kind, the Pressure of the Atmosphere. Which, though a yielding and expansive Fluid; yet constipated by an attractive Energy; furrounds the whole Globe, and incloses every Creature, as it were with a tight Bandage. An Expedient this, absolutely necessary to preserve the Texture of our Bodies; and indeed, to maintain every Species of animal Existence.—Attraction! Urged by this wonderful Impetus, the Rivers circulate, copious and unintermitted, among all the Nations of the Earth: fweeping with Rapidity down the Steeps, or foftly ebb-ing through the Plains. Impelled by the fame mysterious Force, the nutricious Juices are detached from the Soil; and, ascending the Trees, find their Way through Millions of the finest Meanders, in order to transfuse vegetable Life into all the Branches. This confines the Ocean, within proper Bounds. Though the Waves thereof roar; though they tofs themselves, with all the Madness of indignant Rage; yet, checked by this potent, this inevitable Curb, they are unable to pass even the light Barrier of Sand. To this the Mountains owe that unshaken Firmness, which laughs at the Shock of careering Winds; and bids the Tempest, with all its mingled Horrors, impotently rave.—By virtue of this invisible Mechanism; without the Aid of Crane or Pulley, or any Instrument of human Device; many Thoufand Tons of Water are raifed, every Moment, into the Regions of the Firmament. By this, they continue fuspended in thin Air, without any capacious Cistern, to contain their Substance; or any massy Pillars, to fustain their Weight. By this same variously acting Power, they return to the Place of their native Residence; diffilled in gentle Falls of Dew, or precipitated in impetuous Showers of Rain. They flide into the Fields in fleecy Flights of Snow, or are darted upon the Houses in clattering Storms of Hail.—This occafions the strong Cobesion of folid Bodies. Without which, our large Machines could exert themselves with no Vigour; and the nicer Utenfils of Life, would elude our Expectations of Service. This affords a Foundation, for all those delicate or noble mechanic Arts: which furnish Mankind with numberless Conveniences, both of Ornament and Delight .- In short; this is the prodigious Ballast, which composes the Equilibrium, and constitutes the Stability of Things: this, the great Chain, which forms the Connexions of universal Nature; and the mighty Engine, which prompts, facilitates, and, in good measure, accomplishes all her Ope-fations.—What complicated Effects, from a single Cause *! What Profusion, amidst Frugality! An unknown Profusion of Benefits, with the utinost Frugality of Expence!

And what is this Attraction? Is it a Quality in its Existence, inseparable from Matter; and, in its Acting, independent on the DEITY!—Quite the reverse. It is the very Finger of God: the constant Impression of Divine Power: a Principle, neither innate in Matter, nor intelligible by Mortals.—Does it not, however, bear a confiderable Analogy to the Agency of the HOLY GHOST, in the Christian Œconomy? Are not the gracious Operations of the Bleffed Spirit, thus extensive, thus admirable, thus various?-That Almighty Being transmits his Gifts, through every Age: and communicates his Graces, to every Adherent on the Redeemer. All, either of illustrious Memory, or of beneficial Tendency; in a Word, "all the Good that " is done upon Earth, He doth it himself." Strong in bis Aid, and in the Power of bis Might, the Saints of all Times, have trod Vice under their Feet; have triumphed over this abject World; and conversed in Heaven, while they dwelt on Earth. Not I, but the Grace of GOD which was with me*, is the unanimous Acknowledgment of them All.—By the fame kindly Succours, the whole Church is still enlightened, quickened, and governed. Through his benign Influences, the Scales of Ignorance, fall from the Understanding; the Leprofy of evil Concupifcence, is purged from the Will; and the Fetters, the more than adamantine Fetters of babitual Iniquity, drop off from the Conversation. He breathes even upon dry Bones +, and they live: They are animated with Faith; they pant with ardent and heavenly Desire; they exercise themselves in all the Duties of Godliness.—His real, though secret, Inspiration, dissolves the Flint in the impenitent Breast; and binds up the Sorrows, of the broken Heart. Raifes the Thoughts high, in the Elevations of holy Hope; yet lays them low, in the Humiliations of inward Abasement. Steels the Soul with impenetrable Resolution, and persevering Fortitude; at the same time, foftens it into a Dove-like Meekness, and melts it in penitential Sorrow.

^{*} See another remarkable Instance of this Kind, in the Reflections on a Flower Garden, page 121.—together with a fine Observation, quoted in the corresponding Note.

^{* 1} Cor. xv. 10.

⁺ See that beautiful Piece of facred and allegorical Imagery displayed, Exek. xxxvii.

When I contemplate those ample and magnificent Structures, erected over all the æthereal Plains:—When I look upon them as so many splendid Repositories of Light, or fruitful Abodes of Life:—When I remember, that there may be other Orbs, vastly more remote, than those which appear to our unaided Sight; Orbs, whose Effulgence, though travelling ever since the Creation, is not yet arrived upon our Coasts*:—When I stretched my Thoughts to the innumerable Orders of Beings, which inhabit all those spacious Systems; from the lostiest Seraph, to the lowest Reptile; from the Armies of Angels, which surround the Throne of Jehovah; to the puny Nations, which tinge with Blue the

* If this Conjecture (which has no less a Person than the celebrated Mr. Huygens for its Author) concerning unseen Stars, be true—If, to this Observation, be added, what is affirmed by our skilful Astronomers; that the Motion of the Rays of Light is so surprisingly swift, as to pass through ten Millions of Miles in a single Minute—How vast; beyond Imagination vast and unmeasurable, are the Spaces of the Universe!—While the Mind is distended with the grand Idea; or rather, while she is dispatching her ablest Powers of piercing Judgment, and excursive Fancy; and finds them all drop short; all bassled by the amazing Subject: Permit me to apply that spirited Exclamation, and noble Remark—

Say, proud Arch,
Built with divine Ambition; in Disdain
Of Limit built; built in the Taste of Heav'n!
Vast Concave! Ample Dome! Wast thou design'd
A meet Apartment for the Deity?
Not so: That Thought alone thy State impairs:
Thy Lossy sinks; and shallows thy Profound;
And streightens thy Diffusive.—

Night-Thoughts, No IX.

Surface of the Plum *, or mantle the standing Pool with Green:—How various appear the Links, in this immense Chain! How vast the Gradations, in this universal Scale of Existence! Yet all these, though ever so vast and various, are the Work of God's Hand, and are full of his Presence.

He rounded in his Palm those dreadfully large Globes, which are pendulous in the Vault of Heaven. He kindled those astonishingly bright Fires, which fill the Firmament with a Flood of Glory. By Him they are suspended in fluid Æther, and cannot be shaken: By Him they dispense a perpetual Tide of Beams, and are never exhausted.—He formed, with inexpressible Nicety, that delicately fine Collection of Tubes: that unknown Multiplicity of subtile Springs; which organize, and actuate, the Frame of the minutest Insect. He bids the crimson Current roll; the vital Movements play; and affociates a World of Wonders, even in an animated Point †.—In all these, is a signal Exhibition of creating Power:

* Ev'n the blue Down the purple Plum furrounds, A living World, thy failing Sight confounds.

To Him a peopled Habitation shews,

Where Millions taste the Bounty God bestows.

See a teautiful and instructive Poem, stiled-DEITY.

† There are living Creatures, abundantly smaller than the Mite. Mr. Bradley, in his Treatise on Gardening, mentions an Insect, which, after accurate Examination, he found to be a Thousand Times less than the least visible Grain of Sand. Yet such an Insect, though quite imperceptible to the naked Eye, is an Elephant, is a Whale, compared with other Animalcules almost infinitely more minute, discovered by Mr. Lewenboek.—If we consider the several Limbs, which compose such an organized Particle: The different Muscles, which actuate such a Set of Limbs: The Flow of Spirits, incomparably more attenuated, which put those Muscles in Motion: The various Fluids, which circulate: The different Secretions, which are performed: Together with the peculiar Minuteness of the Solids, before they arrive at their full Growth:

Power; to all these, are extended, the special Regards of preserving Goodness. From hence, let me learn to rely on the Providence, and to revere the Presence, of the Supreme Majesty.

To rely on his Providence. -- For, amidst that inconceivable Number and Variety of Beings, which fwarm through the Regions of Creation, not one is overlooked, not one is neglected, by the great omnipotent Cause of all. However inconsiderable in its Character, or diminutive in its Size, it is still the Production of the universal Maker, and belongs to the Family of the Almighty Father.—What? though inthroned Archangels, enjoy the Smiles of his Countenance! Yet, the low Inhabitants of Earth, the most despicable Worms of the Ground, are not excluded from his providential Care. Though the Manifestation of his Perfections, is vouchfafed to holy and intellectual Effences; his Ear is open, to the Cries of the young Raven. His Eye is attentive, to the Wants, and to the Welfare of the very meanest Births of Nature.-How much less then, are his own People difregarded? Those, for whom he has delivered his beloved Son to Death, and for whom He has prepared Habitations of eternal Joy. They difregarded! No. They are "kept as the Apple "of an Eye." The very Hairs of their Head are all numbered. The fondest Mother may forget the Infant, that is "dandled upon her Knees," and fucks at her Breast *: much sooner than the Father of everlasting

Com-

Growth: Not to mention other more aftonifping Modes of Diminution:—Sure, we shall have the utmost Reason to acknowledge, that the adored Maker is—Maximus in minimis; greatly glorious even in his smallest Works.

^{*} Ifa. xlix. 15. Can a Woman forget her fucking Child, that she should not have compassion on the Son of her Womb? Yea, they may forget;

Compassions can discontinue, or remit, his watchful Tenderness to his People—his Children—his Heirs.

Let this teach me also a more lively Sense of the Divine Presence.—All the rolling Worlds above; all the living Atoms below; together with all the Beings that intervene, betwixt these wide Extremes: are Vouchers for an ever-present Deity. "God has not left Him-"felf without Witness." The Marks of his Footsteps are evident in every Place, and the Touches of his get; yet will I not forget thee .- How delicate and expressive are the Images, in this charming Scripture! How full of Beauty, if beheld in a critical, how rich with Confolation, if considered in a believing, View !- Can a Woman? One of the fofter Sex; whose Nature is most impressible, and whose Passions are remarkably tender—Can such a one, not barely disregard, but intirely forget; not suspend her Care for a while, but utterly erase the very Memory-Of her Child; her own Child, not another's; a Child, that was formed in her Womb, and is a Part of herself?—Her Son; the more important, and therefore more desirable Species; to whom it peculiarly belongs, to preserve the Name, and build up the Family-Her only Son; for the Word is fingular; and refers to a Case, where the Offspring, not being numerous, but centered in a fingle Birth, must be productive of the fondest Endearment-Can she divest herself of all Concern for such a Child; not when he is grown up to Maturity, or gone abroad from her House; but, while he continues in an infantile State, and must owe his whole Safety to her kind Attendance; while he lies in her Bosom, rests on her Arm, and even sucks at her Breast?-Especially, if the poor Innocent be racked with Pain, or feized by some severe Afflica tion; and so become an Object of Compassion, as well as of Love. Can she hear its piercing Cries; can she see it all restless, all helpless under its Misery; and feel no Emotions of Parental Pity?-If one such Monster of Inhumanity might be found; could all (here the Prophet, to give his Comparison the utmost Energy, changes the fingular Number into the plural. It is not איז, or חחא בם, but מכה אלה) could all Mothers be so degenerate? This, sure, cannot be suspected, need not be feared. Much less need the true Believer be apprehensive of the Failure of my Kindness. An universal Extinction of those strongest Affections of Nature, is a more supposeable Case; than that I should ever be unmindful of my People, or regardless of their Interests.

Finger distinguishable in every Creature. " Thy Name " is so nigh, O Thou all-supporting, all-informing " LORD! and that do thy wondrous Works declare *. "Thy Goodness warms in the Morning Sun, and re-" freshes in the Evening Breeze. Thy Glory shines in the Lamps of Midnight, and smiles in the Blossoms " of Spring. We see a Trace of thy incomprehensible "Grandeur, in the boundless Extent of Things; and a "Sketch of thy exquisite Skill, in those almost evanescent "Sparks of Life, the Insect Race."—How stupid is this Heart of mine, that amidst such a Multitude of Remembrancers, thronging on every Side, I should forget Thee a single Moment! Grant me, Thou great I AM; Thou Source, and Support, of universal Existence-O! grant me an enlightened Eye, to discern Thee in every Object; and a devout Heart, to adore Thee on every Occasion. Instead of living without God in the World; may I be ever with Him, and fee all Things full of Him!

The glitt'ring Stars,
By the deep Ear of Meditation heard,
Still in their Midnight Watches sing of HIM.
He nods a Calm. The Tempest blows his Wrath.
The Thunder is his Voice; and the red Flash
His speedy Sword of Justice. At his Touch
The Mountains slame. He shakes the solid Earth,
And rocks the Nations. Nor in these alone,
In ev'ry common Instance GOD is seen.

THOMSON'S Spring,

Is the beautiful Spangles, which a clear Night pours on the Beholder's Eye: if those other Fires, which beam in remoter Skies; and are discoverable only by,

that Revelation to the Sight, the Telescope: if all those bright Millions, are so many Fountains of Day; enriched with native and independent Lustre; illuminating Planets, and enlivening Systems of their own *: What Pomp, how majestic and splendid, is disclosed in the Midnight Scene! What Riches are disseminated, through all those numberless Provinces of the great JEHOVAH'S Empire!—Grandeur beyond Expression! —Yet, there is not the meanest Slave, but carries greater Wealth in his own Bosom, possesses superior Dignity in his own Person. The Soul, that informs his Clay;-the Soul, that teaches him to think, and enables him to choose; that qualifies him to relish rational Pleasure, and to breathe sublime Desire +; the Soul, that is endowed with fuch noble Faculties; and, above all, is diffinguished with the dreadful, the glorious Capacity, of being pained, or bleffed, for ever-this Soul surpasses in Worth, whatever the Eye can see; whatever, of material, the Fancy can imagine. Before one fuch intellectual Being, all the Treasure, and all the Magnificence of unintelligent Creation, becomes poor and contemptible 1. For this Soul, Omnipotence itself has

* Consult with Reason, Reason will reply,
Each lucid Point, which glows in yonder Sky,
Informs a System in the boundless Space,
And fills, with Glory, its appointed Place:
With Beams unborrow'd, brightens other Skies;
And Worlds, to Thee unknown, with Heat and Life supplies.

The Universe.

† In this respect, as vested with such Capacities, the Soul even of fallen Men, has an unquestionable Greatness and Dignity; is majestic, though in Ruin.

† I beg Leave to transcribe a pertinent Passage, from that celebrated Master of Reason, and universal Literature, Dr. Bentley; whom no one can be tempted to suspect, either tinctured with Enthusiasm, or warped to Bigotry.—" If we consider, says he, the Dignity of an in-has waked, and worked, through every Age. To convince this Soul, the fundamental Laws of Nature have been controuled; and the most amazing Miracles, have alarmed all the Ends of the Earth. To instruct this Soul, the Wisdom of Heaven has been transsused into the sacred Page; and Missionaries have been sent from the Great King, who resides in Light unapproachable. To sendify this Soul, the Almighty Comforten takes the Wings of a Dove; and, with a sweet transforming Influence, broods on the human Heart. And O! to redeem this Soul from Guilt; to rescue it from Hell; the Heaven of Heavens was bowed, and God himself came down to dwell in Dust.

:

LET me pause, a while, upon this important Subject.—What are the Schemes, which engage the Attention of eminent Statesmen, and mighty Monarchs, compared with the grand Interests of an Immortal Soul? The Support of Commerce, and the Success of Armies, though extremely weighty Affairs; yet if laid in the Balance against the Salvation of a Soul, are lighter than the downy Feather, poised against Talents of Gold. To save a Navy from Shipwreck, or a Kingdom from Slavery, are Deliverances of the most momentous Nature, which the Transactions of Mortality can admit. But O! how they shrink into an inconsiderable Trisse, if (their Aspect upon Immortality forgot) they are set in Competition with the Delivery of a

[&]quot;telligent Being, and put that in the Scale against brute and inani-"mate Matter, we may affirm, without over-valuing human Nature, that the Soul of one virtuous and religious Man is of greater Worth and Excellency, than the Sun, and his Planets, and all the Stars in fingle Soul, from the Anguish and Horrors of a distressed Eternity *!

[&]quot; the World."

See his Sermons at Boyle's Lect. No 8.

Is fuch the Importance of the Soul! What Vigilance then can be too much; or rather what holy Solicitude can be fufficient; for the Overfeers of the Saviour's Flock, and the Guardians of this great, this venerable, this invaluable Charge?—Since, fuch is the Importance of the Soul; wilt thou not, O Man, be watchful for the Preservation of thy own? Shall every casual Incident, awaken thy Concern; every transitory Toy, command thy Regard? And shall the Welsare of thy Soul, a Work of continual Occurrence; a Work of endless Consequence; sue in vain, for thy serious Care?—Thy Soul, thy Soul, is thy All. If this be secured, thou art greatly rich, and wilt be unspeakably happy. If this be lost, a whole World acquired, will leave thee in Poverty; and all its Delights enjoyed, will abandon thee to Misery.

I have often been charmed, and awed at the Sight of the nocturnal Heavens; even before I knew how to confider them, in their proper Circumstances of Majesty and Beauty. Something, like Magic, has struck my Mind, on a transient and unthinking Survey of the exthereal Vault; tinged throughout with the purest Azure, and decorated with innumerable starry Lamps. I have selt, I know not what, powerful and aggrandizing Impulse; which seemed to snatch me from the low Intanglements of Vanity, and prompted an ardent Sigh for sublimer Objects. Methought, I heard, even from the silent Spheres, a commanding Call, to spurn the abject

Not all you Luminaries quench'd at once Were half so sad, as one benighted Mind, Which gropes for Happiness, and meets Despair. Night Thoughts, No IX.

Earth, and pant after unseen Delights.—Hencesorward, I hope to imbibe more copiously, this moral Emanation of the Skies; when, in some such Manner as the preceding, they are rationally seen, and the Sight is duly improved. The Stars, I trust, will teach as well as shine; and help to dispel, both Nature's Gloom, and my intellectual Darkness. To some People, they discharge no better a Service, than that of holding a Flambeau to their Feet, and softening the Horrors of their Night. To me and my Friends, may they act as Ministers of a superior Order; as Counsellors of Wisdom, and Guides to Happiness! Nor will they fail to execute this nobler Office, if they gently light our Way, into the Knowledge of their adored Maker; if they point out, with their Silver Rays, our Path to his beatisfic Presence.

I GAZE, I ponder. I ponder, I gaze; and think inestable Things.—I roll an Eye of Awe and Admiration, Again and again I repeat my ravished Views; and can never satiate either my Curiosity, or my Inquiry. I spring my Thoughts into this immense Field, till even Fancy tires upon her Wing, I find Wonders, ever new; Wonders, more and more amazing.—Yet, after all my present Inquiries, what a mere Nothing do I know; by all my future Searches, how little shall I be able to learn; of those vastly distant Suns, and their circling Retinue of Worlds! Could I pry with Newton's piercing Sagacity, or launch into his extensive Surveys: even then, my Apprehensions would be little better, than those dim and scanty Images, which the Mole, just emerged from her Cavern, receives on her feeble Optic. -This, fure, should repress all impatient or immoderate Ardor to pry into the Secrets of the Starry Structures; and make me more particularly careful, to cultivate my Heart. To fathom the Depths of the Divine Essence; or to scan universal Nature, with a critical Exactness: Exactness; is an Attempt, which fets the acutest Philofopher, very nearly on a Level with the Idiot. Since it is almost, if not altogether, as impracticable by the former, as by the latter.

Be it, then, my chief Study, not to pursue, what is absolutely unattainable; but rather to seek, what is obvious to find; easy to be acquired; and of inestimable Advantage, when possessed. O! let me seek that Charity, which edifieth *; that Faith, which purisieth. Love, humble Love, not conceited Science, keeps the Door of Heaven. Faith, a child-like Faith in Jesus; not the haughty self-sufficient Spirit, which scorns to be ignorant of any Thing; presents a Key † to those Abodes of Bliss.—This present State, is the Scene destined to the Exercise of Devotion; the invisible World, is the Place appointed for the Enjoyment of Knowledge. There, the Dawn of our infantile Minds, will be advanced to the Maturity of persect Day; or rather, there our midnight Shades, will be brightened into all the Lustre of Noon. There, the Souls which come

^{* 1} Cor. viii. 1. I need not inform my Reader, that in this Text; in that admirable Chapter, 1 Cor. xiii. and in various other Passages of Scripture; the Word Charity, should by no means be confined to the peculiar Act of Alms-giving, or external Beneficence. It is of a much more exalted and extended Nature. It signifies that divinely precious Grace, which warms the Soul with supreme Love to God, and enlarges it with disinterested Assection for Men. Which renders it the reigning Care of the Life, and chief Delight of the Heart, to promote the Happiness of the One, and the Glory of the Other.—This, this, is that Charity of which so many excellent Things are every where spoken. Which can never be too highly extolled, or too earnestly coveted, since it is the Image of God, and the very Spirit of Heaven,

⁺ The Righteousness of Christ. This is what Milton beautifully stiles;

The golden Key,
That opes the Palace of Eternity.

from the School of Faith and bring with them the Principles of Love, will dwell in Light itself; will be obscured with no Darkness at all; will know, even as they are known *.—Such an Acquaintance, therefore, do I desire to form, and to carry on such a Correspondence, with the heavenly Bodies; as may shed a benign Instuence on the Seeds of Grace, implanted in my Breast. Let the exalted Tracts of the Firmament, sink my Soul into deep Humiliation. Let those eternal Fires, kindle in my Heart an adoring Gratitude, to their Almighty Sovereign. Let yonder ponderous and enormous Globes, which rest on his supporting Arm; teach me an unshaken Affiance, in their incarnate Maker. Then shall I be—if not wise as the Astronomical Adept, yet wise unto Salvation.

Having now walked and worshipped, in this univerfal Temple, that is arched with Skies; emblazed with Stars; and extended even to Immensity—Having cast an Eye, like the inraptured Patriarch; an Eye of Reason and Devotion, through the magnificent Scene. With the former, having discovered an Infinitude of Worlds; and with the latter, having met the Deity in every View—Having beheld, as Moses in the slaming Bush, a Glimpse of Jehovah's Excellencies! reslected from the several Planets, and streaming from Myriads of celestial Luminaries—Having read various Lessons, in that stupendous Book of Wisdom; where unmeasurable Sheets of Azure compose the Page; and Orbs of Radiance write, in everlasting Characters, a Comment on our Creed—What remains, but that I close the mid-

^{* 1} Cor. xiii. 12.

⁺ Gen. xv. 5.

For Heaven
Is as the Book of God before thee fet, Wherein to read his wondrous Works.—MILTON.

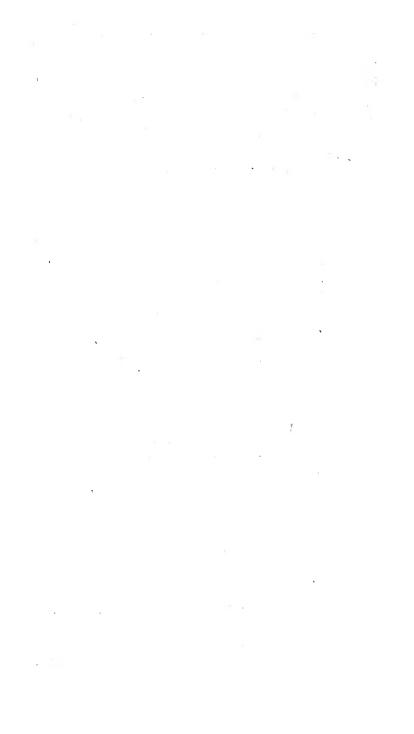

night Solemnity, as our LORD concluded his grand Sacramental Institution, with a Song of Praise?—And behold a Hymn, suited to the sublime Occasion; indited by * Inspiration itself; transferred into our Language, by † one of the happiest Efforts of human Ingenuity.

The spacious Firmament on high,
With all the blue æthereal Sky,
And spangled Heav'ns, a shining Frame,
Their great Original proclaim:
Th' unweary'd Sun from Day to Day,
Does his Creator's Pow'r display;
And publishes, to ev'ry Land,
The Work of an Almighty Hand.

Soon as the Evining Shades prevail,
The Moon takes up the wondrous Tale;
And nightly, to the listining Earth,
Repeats the Story of her Birth:
While all the Stars, that round her burn,
And all the Planets in their Turn,
Confirm the Tidings as they roll,
And spread the Truth from Pole to Pole.

What though, in solemn Silence, all Move round the dark terrestrial Ball? What though, nor real Voice nor Sound Amid their radiant Orbs be found? In Reason's Ear they all rejoice, And utter forth a glorious Voice, For ever singing, as they shine, The Hand that made Us, is divine.

• Pfal. xix. † Addison, Spect. Vol. VI. No 465.

A

WINTER-PIECE,

"Storms and Tempests may calm the Soul—Snow and "Ice be taught to warm the Heart, and praise the "Creator."

Anonym, Lett, to the Author. See p. 398.

H -

WINTER-PIECE.

IS true, in the delightful Seasons, HIS Tenderness and HIS Love, are most eminently displayed .- In the vernal Months, all is Beauty to the Eye. and Music to the Ear. The Clouds drop Fatness; the Air fostens into Balm; and Flowers, in rich Abundance, fpring where-ever we tread, bloom where-ever we look. -Amidst the burning Heats of Summer, HE expands the Leaves, and thickens the Shades. He spreads the cooling Arbor, to receive us; and awakes the gentle Breeze, to fan Us. The Moss swells into a Couch, for the Repose of our Bodies; while the Rivulet softly rolls, and fweetly murmurs, to footh our Imagination .- In Autumn, HIS Bounty covers the Fields, with a Profufion of nutrimental Treasure; and bends the Boughs, with Loads of delicious Fruit. He furnishes his hospitable Board with present Plenty, and prepares a copious Magazine for future Wants .- But, is it only in these smiling Periods of the Year, that God, the all-gracious God is feen? Has Winter, stern Winter, no Tokens of his Presence? Yes: All Things are eloquent of his Praise. "His Way is in the Whirlwind." Storms and Tempests fulfil his Word, and extol his Power. Even piercing Frosts bear Witness to his Goodness; while they bid the shivering Nations, tremble at his Wrath.—Be Winter, then, for a while, our Theme *. Perhaps, those barren Scenes, may be fruitful of intellectual Improvement. Perhaps that rigorous Cold, which binds the Earth in icy Chains; may serve to enlarge our Hearts, and warm them with holy Love.

SEE! how the Day is shortened!—The Sun, detained in fairer Climes, or engaged in more agreeable Services, rifes, like an unwilling Vifitant, with tardy and reluctant Steps. He walks, with a shy Indifference, along the Edges of the Southern Sky; casting an oblique Glance, he just looks upon our dejected World; and scarcely scatters Light, through the thick Air. Dim in his Appearance, languid are his Gleams, while he continues. Or, if He chance to wear a brighter Aspect, and a cloudless Brow: yet, like the Young and Gay in the House of Mourning, He feems uneasy, till He is gone; is in Hafte to depart.—And let Him depart. Why should we wish for his longer Stay; fince He can shew us nothing, but the Creation in Distress? The slowery Families lie dead, and the tuneful Tribes are struck dumb. The Trees, stript of their Verdure, and lashed by Storms, fpread their naked Arms to the enraged and relentless Heavens. Fragrance no longer floats in the Air; but ^{*} A Sketch of this Nature, I must acknowledge, is quite different from the Subject of the Book; and, I cannot but declare, was as far distant from the Thoughts of the Author. But, the Desire of several Acquaintance, together with an Intimation of its Usefulness, by a very polite Letter from an unknown Hand (which has undesignedly furnished me with the best Motto, I could recollect), prevailed with me to add a few descriptive Touches and improving Hints, on what is so often experienced in the Northern Regions. I hope, the Attempt I have made to oblige these Gentlemen, will obtain the Approbation, or at least, the Excuse, of my other Readers.

chilling Damps hover, or cutting Gales blow. Nature, diverted of all her beautiful Robes, fits, like a forlorn difconfolate Widow, in her Weeds. While Winds, in doleful Accents, howl; and Rains, in repeated Showers, weep.

WE regret not, therefore, the speedy Departure of the Day. When the Room is hung with funeral Black, and difmal Objects are all around; who would defire to have the glimmering Taper kept alive? Which can only discover Spectacles of Sorrow; can only make the Horror visible.—And, since this mortal Life is little better than a continual Conflict with Sin, or an unremitted Struggle with Mifery; is it not a gracious Ordination. which has reduced our Age to a Span? Fourfcore Years of Trial, for the Virtuous, are fufficiently long; and more than fuch a Term, allowed to the Wicked, would render them beyond all Measure, vile. Our Way to the Kingdom of Heaven, lies through Tribulations. Shall we then accuse, shall we not rather bless, the Providence, which has made the Passage short? Soon, soon, we cross the Vale of Tears; and then arrive on the happy Hills. where Light for ever shines, where Joy for ever smiles.

Sometimes, the Day is rendered shorter still; is almost blotted out from the Year*. The Vapours gather; they thicken into an impenetrable Gloom; and obscure the Face of the Sky. At length, the Rains descend. The Sluices of the Firmament are opened; and the low hung Clouds pour their congregated Stores. Copious and unintermitted, still they pour; and still are unexhausted. The Waters drop incessantly from the Eves, and rush in rapid Streams from these Spouts. They roar along the channelled Pavements, and stand in soul

^{*} Involvere Diem Nimbi & Nox humida Cœlum
Abstulit—
VIRG.

Shallows amidst the Village-Streets. Now, if the inattentive Eye, or negligent Hand, has left the Roof but scantily covered; the infinuating Element finds its Wav into every Flaw, and oozing through the Cieling, at once upbraids and chaftifes the careless Inhabitant. Ploughman, foaked to the Skin, leaves his half-tilled The poor Poultry, dripping with Wet, croud into Shelter. The Tenants of the Bough fold up their Wings, afraid to launch into the streaming Air. The Beasts, joyless and dispirited, ruminate under their Sheds. The Roads fwim, and the Brooks fwell.—The River, amidst all this watry Ferment, long contained itself within its appointed Bounds. But, fwollen by innumerable Currents; and roused, at last, into uncontroulable Rage; bursts over its Banks; shoots into the Plain; bears down all Opposition; spreads itself far and wide; and buries the Meadow under a brown, fluggish, soaking Deluge.

How happy for Man, that this Inundation comes, when there are no flowery Crops in the Valley, to be overwhelmed; no Fields flanding thick with Corn, to be laid waste! At such a Juncture, it would have been Ruin to the Husbandman and his Family: but, thus timed, it yields Manure for his Ground, and promifes Him Riches in Reversion .- How often, and how long, has the Divine Majesty bore with the most injurious Affronts from Sinners! His Goodness triumphed over their Perverseness, and graciously refused to be exasperated. But, O prefumptuous Creatures, multiply no longer your Provocations. Urge not, by repeated Iniquities, the Almighty Arm to strike; lest his Long-suffering cease, and his fierce Anger break forth; break forth, like a Flood of Waters *, and fweep you away, into irrecoverable and everlasting Perdition.

How mighty! how majestic! and O! how mysterious are thy Works, Thou GOD of Heaven, and LORD of Nature! When the Air is calm, where sleep the stormy Winds? In what Chambers are they reposed, or in what Dungeons confined! Till Thou art pleased to awaken their Rage, and throw open their Prison-Doors. Then, with irresistible Impetuosity they sly forth, scattering Dread, and menacing Destruction.

The Atmosphere is hurled into the most tumultuous Consussion. The aereal Torrent bursts its Way over Mountains, Seas, and Continents. All Things feel the dreadful Shock. All Things tremble before the furious Blast. The Forest, vexed and tore, groans under the Scourge. Her sturdy Sons are strained to the very Root, and almost sweep the Soil, they were wont to shade. The stubborn Oak, that distains to bend, is dashed headlong to the Ground; and, with shattered Arms, with prostrate Trunks, blocks the Road.—While the slexile Reed, that springs up in the Marsh, yielding to the Gust (as the meek and pliant Temper, to Injuries; or the resigned and patient Spirit, to Missortunes); eludes the Force of the Storm, and survives amidst the wide-spread Havock.

For a Moment, the turbulent and outrageous Sky, feems to be affuaged: but, it intermits its Wrath, only to increase its Strength. Soon, the sounding Squadrons of the Air return to the Attack, and renew their Ravages with redoubled Fury. The stately Dome rocks, amidst the wheeling Clouds. The impregnable Tower totters on its Basis; and threatens to overwhelm, whom it was intended to protect. The ragged Rock is rent in Pieces*; and even the Hills, the perpetual Hills, on their deep Foundations, are scarcely secure.—Where, now, is the Place of Safety? When the City reels, and Houses become Heaps! Sleep affrighted flies. Diversion is turned into Horror. All is Uproar in the Element; all is Confternation among Mortals; and nothing, but one wide Scene of rueful Devastation, through the Land.—Yet, this is only an inferior Minister of divine Displeasure. The Executioner of milder Indignation. How then,—O! bow will the losty Looks of Man be bumbled, and the Haughtiness of Man be bowed down *; when the LORD GOD Omnipotent shall meditate Terror—when He shall set all his Terrors in Array—when He arises, to judge the Nations, and to shake terribly the Earth!

^{* 1} Kings xix. 11.

THE Ocean swells with tremendous Commotions. The ponderous Waves are heaved from their capacious Bed, and almost lay bare the unsathomable Deep. Flung into the most rapid Agitation, they sweep over the Rocks; they lash the losty Cliffs; and tos themselves into the Clouds. Navies are rent from their Anchors; and, with all their enormous Load, are whirled, swift as the Arrow, wild as the Winds, along the vast Abyss.—Now, they climb the rolling Mountain; they plow the frightful Ridge; and seem to skim the Skies. Anon, they plunge into the opening Gulf; they lose the Sight of Day; and are lost themselves to every Eye. How vain is the Pilot's

Mortalia Corda Per Gentes humilis stravit Pavor.—

One would almost imagine, that Virgil had read Isaiah, and borrowed his Ideas from Chap. ii. Ver. 11. The humilis and stravit of the one, so exactly correspond with the—humbled—boxed down—of the other. But, in one Circumstance, the Prophet is very much superior to the Poet. The Prophet, by giving a striking Contrast to his Sentiments, represents them with incomparably greater Energy. He says not, Men in the gross, or the Human Islant in general: but Men of the most elated Looks; Hearts big with the most arrogant Imaginations. Even these shall stoop from their supercilious Heights; even these shall grovel in the Dust of Abasement, and shudder with all the Extremes of an abject Pusilianimity.

Art! How impotent the Mariner's Strength! They reel to and fro, and stagger in the jarring Hold; or cling to the Cordage, while bursting Seas soam over the Deck. Despair is in every Face, and Death sits threatening on every Surge.—But why, O ye astonished Mariners, why should you abandon yourselves to Despair? Is the LORD's Hand shortened, because the Waves of the Sea rage horribly? Is his Ear deasened, by the roaring Thunders, and the bellowing Tempest? Cry, cry, unto HIM, who "holdeth the Winds in his Fist, and the "Waters in the Hollow of his Hand." HE is all-gracious, to hear; and almighty, to save. If He command, the Storm shall be hushed to Silence: the Billows shall subside into a Calm: the Lightnings shall lay their fiery Bolts aside: and, instead of sinking in a watry Grave, you shall find Yourselves brought to the desired Haven.

Sometimes, after a joyless Day, a more dismal Night succeeds.—The lazy, louring Vapours had wove so thick a Veil, as the meridian Sun could scarcely penetrate. What Gloom then must overwhelm the nocurn of Hours! the Moon withdraws her Shining. Not a single Star, is able to struggle through the Deep Arrangement of Shades. All is pitchy Darkness, without one enlivening Ray. How solemn! How awful! 'Tis like the Shroud of Nature, or the Return of Chaos. I don't wonder, that it is the Parent of Terrors, and so apt to ingender Melancholy.—Lately, the Tempest marked its rapid Way with Mischief; now, the Night dresses her silent Pavilion with Horror.

I HAVE fonetimes left the beaming Tapers, withdrawn from the ruddy Fire, and plunged into the thickest of these sooty Shades; without regretting the Change, rather exulting in it as a welcome Deliverance. The very Gloom was pleasing, was exhilarating, compared with the Conversation, I quitted. The Speech of my Companions (how does it grieve me, that I should even once have occasion to call them by that Name!) was the Language of Darkness: was Horror to the Soul, and Torture to the Ear .- Their Teeth were Spears and Arrows, and their Tongue a sharp Sword, to stab and affassinate, their Neighbour's Character. Their Throat was an open Sepulchre, gaping to devour the Reputation of the Innocent, or tainting the Air with their virulent and polluted Breath. Sometimes, their licentious and ungovernable Discourse, shot Arrows of Profaneness against Heaven itself; and, in proud Defiance, challenged the Resentment of Omnipotence.—Sometimes, as if it was the Glory of human Nature, to cherish the groffest Appetites of the Brute; or the Mark of a Gentleman, to have ferved an Apprenticeship in a Brothel; the filthiest Jests of the Stew (if low Obsecuity can be a Jest) were naufeoufly obtruded on the Company. All the modest Part were offended and grieved; while the other befotted Creatures laughed aloud, though the Leprofy of Uncleanness appeared on their Lips.—Are not these Perfons Prisoners of Darkness; though blazing Sconces, pour artificial Day, through their Rooms? Are not their Souls immured in the most baleful Shades; though the Noontide Sun is brightened, by flaming on their gilded Chariots?-They discern not that great and adorable Being, who fills the Univerte with his infinite and glorious Prefence: who is all Eye, to observe their Actions; all Ear, to examine their Words. They know not the all-fufficient Redeemer, not the unspeakable Blessedness of his heavenly Kingdom. They are groping for the Prize of Happiness; but will certainly grasp the Thorn of Anxiety. They are wantonly fporting on the Brink of a Precipice; and are every Moment in Danger of falling headlong, into irretvievable Ruin, and endless Despair.

Тнеу

THEY have forced me out, and are, perhaps, deriding me in my Absence: are charging my Reverence for the ever-present GOD, and my Concern for the Dignity of our rational Nature, to the Account of Humour and Singularity; to Narrowness of Thought, or Sourness of Temper.—Be it so.—I will include no Indignation against them. If any Thing like it should arise, I will convert it into Prayer—" Pity them, O Thou Fa-" ther of Mercies!-Shew them the Madness of their " Profaneness !- Shew them the Baseness of their vile " Ribaldry !-Let their diffolute Rant be turned into " filent Sorrow and Confusion. Till they open their " Lips, to adore thine infulted Majesty, and to implore " thy gracious Pardon. Till they devote to thy Ser-" vice, those social Hours, and those superior Faculties, " which they are now abusing—to the dishonour of thy "Name—to the Contamination of their own Souls— " and (unless timely Repentance intervene) to their ever-" lafting Infamy and Perdition."

I RIDE home amidst the gloomy Void. All darkling and solitary, I can scarce discern my Horse's Head; and only guess out my blind Road. No Companion, but Danger; or, perhaps, "Destruction ready at my Side *."—But, why do I fansy myself folitary? Is not the Father of Lights; the God of my Life; the great and everlasting Friend; always at my Right-hand? Because the Day is excluded, is his Omnipresence vacated? Though I have no earthly Acquaintance near, to affist in case of a Missortune; or to beguile the Time, and divert uneasy Suspicions, by entertaining Conferences; may I not lay my Help upon the Almighty, and converse with God by humble Supplication? For this Exercise, no Place is improper; no Hour unseasonable; and no Posture incommodious. This is Society, the best of Society, even in Solitude. This is a Fund of Delights, easily portable, and quite inexhaustible. A Treasure this, of unknown Value; liable to no Hazard, from Wrong or Robbery; but perfectly secure, to the lonely Wanderer, in the most darksome Paths.

^{*} Job xviii. 12.

And why should I distress myself with Apprehensions of Peril? This Access to God, is not only an indefeafible Privilege, but a kind of ambulatory Garrison. Those, who make known their Requests unto God, and rely upon his protecting Care; He gives his Angels Charge over their Welfare. His Angels are commissioned, to escort them in their Travelling; and to hold up their Goings, that they dash not their Foot against a Stone *. Nay, He Himfelf condescends to be their Guardian, and "keeps " all their Bones, so that not one of them is broken." Between these Persons, and the most mischievous Objects, a Treaty of Peace is concluded. The Articles of this grand Alliance, are recorded in the Book of Revelation; and will, when it is for the real Benefit of Believers, assuredly be made good, in the Administrations of Providence. In that Day, faith the LORD, will I make a Covenant for them with the Beasts of the Field, and with the Fowls of Heaven, and with the creeping Things of the Ground; and they shall be in League with the Stones of the Field +. Though they fall headlong on the Flints; even the Flints, fitted to fracture the Skull, shall receive them as into the Arms of Friendship; and not offer to hurt, whom the Lord is pleased to preserve.

MAY I then enjoy the Presence of this gracious God, and Darkness and Light shall be both alike. Let HIM whisper Peace to my Conscience; and this dread Silence shall be more charming, than the Voice of Eloquence, or the Strains of Music. Let HIM reveal his ravishing Persections in my Soul; and I shall not want the saffron Beauties of the Morn, the golden Glories of Noon, or the impurpled Evening Sky. I shall sigh only for those most desirable and distinguished Realms; where, the Light of HIS Countenance perpetually shines, and confequently—" there is * no Night there."

^{*} Pfal. xci. 11, 12. + Job v. 23. Hof. ii. 18.

How furprifing are the Alterations of Nature! I left her, the preceding Evening, plain and unadorned. But, now, a thick Rime has shed its hoary Honours over all. It has shagged the Fleeces of the Sheep, and crisped the Traveller's Locks. The Hedges are richly fringed, and all the Ground is profusely powdered. The downward Branches are tasseled with Silver, and the upright are seathered with the plumy Wave.

THE Fine, are not always the Valuable. The Air, amidst all these gaudy Decorations, is charged with chilling and unwholesome Damps. The raw hazy Influence fpreads wide; fits deep; hangs heavy and oppressive on the Springs of Life. A liftless Languor clogs the animal Functions; and the purple Stream glides but faintly through its Channels, In vain, the Ruler of the Day exerts his beaming Powers: In vain, He attempts to disperse this Insurrection of Vapours. The sullen, malignant Cloud refuses to depart. It envelops the World, and intercepts the Prospect. I look abroad for the neighbouring Village; I fend my Eye in quest of the rifing Turret; but am scarce able to discern the very next House. Where are the blue Arches of Heaven? Where is the radiant Countenance of the Sun? Where the boundless Scenes of Creation? Lost, lost are their Beauties; quenched their Glories. The thronged Theatre of the Universe, seems an empty Void; and all its elegant Pictures, an undiftinguished Blank.-Thus would it have been with our intellectual Views, if the Gospel had not come in to our Relief. We should have known, neither our true Good, nor real Evil. We had been a Riddle to ourselves; the present State all Consusion, and the future impenetrable Darkness. But, the Sun of Righteousness, arising with potent and triumphant Beams, has diffipated the interpoling Cloud. Has opened a Profpect, more beautiful, than the Blossoms of Spring; more chearing, than the Treasures of Autumn; and far more inlarged, than the Extent of the visible System. Which, having led the Eye of the Mind, through Fields of Grace, over Rivers of Righteoufness, and Hills crowned with Knowledge; terminates, at length, in the Heavens; fweetly losing itself, in Regions of infinite Bliss, and endless Glory.

^{*} Rev. xxi. 25.

As I walk along the Fog, it seems, at some little Distance, to be almost solid Gloom; such as would shut out every Glimpse of Light, and totally imprison me in Obscurity. But, when I approach, and enter it; I find myself agreeably mistaken, and the Mist much thinner, than it appeared.—Such is the Case, with regard to the Sufferings of the present Lise; they are not, when experienced, so dreadful, as a timorous Imagination surmised. Such also is the Case, with reference to the Gratifications of Scrift; they prove not, when enjoyed, so substantial, as a sanguine Expectation represented. In both Instances, we are graciously disappointed. The keen Edge of the Calamity is blunted, that it may not wound us with incurable Anguish: the exquisite Relish of the Prosperity is palled, that it may not captivate our Affections, and enslave them to inserior Delights.

Sometimes, the Face of Things wears a more pleafing Form; the very Reverse of the foregoing. The sober

Even-

Evening advances, to close the short-lived Day. The Firmament, clear and unfullied, puts on its brightest Blue. The Stars, in thronging Multitudes, and with a peculiar Brilliancy, glitter through the fair Expanse. While the Frost pours its subtle and penetrating Influence, all around. Sharp and intenfely fevere, all the long Night, the rigid Æther continues its Operations. When, late and flow, the Morning opens her pale Eye; in what a curious and amusing Disguise, is Nature dressed! The Icicles, jagged and uneven, are pendent on the Houses. A whitish Film incrusts the windows, where mimic Landscapes rise, and fansied Figures swell. The fruitful Fields are hardened to Iron; the moistened Meadows are congealed to Marble; and both refound (an Effect unknown before) with the Peasant's hasty Tread. The Stream is arrefted in its Career, and its everflowing Surface chained to the Banks. The fluid Paths become a folid Road; where the finny Shoals were wont to rove, the sportive Youth flide, or the rattling Chariots roll *. And (what would feem, to an Inhabitant of the Southern World, as unaccountable as the deepest Mysteries of our Religion) that very same Breath of Heaven, which cements the Lakes into a crystal Pavement; cleaves the Oaks, as it were with invisible Wedges: "breaks in Pieces the " Northern Iron, and the Steel;" even while it builds a Bridge of Icy Rock, over the Seas †.

^{*} Undaque jam tergo ferratos fustinet orbes,
Puppibus illu prius patulis, nunc hospita plaustris.
Æraquæ distiliunt vulgo.
Virg.

[†] Job xxxviii. 30. The Waters are bid, locked up from the Cattle's Lips, and secured from the Fisher's Net, as Wells were wont to be closed with a ponderous and impenetrable Stone. And not only Lakes and Rivers, but the Surface of the great Deep with its restless and uncontroulable Surges, is taken Captive יחלברו by the Frost, and bound in shining Fetters.

THE Air is all Serenity. Refined by the nitrous Particles, it affords the most distinct Views, and extensive Prospects. The Seeds of Infection are killed; and the Pestilence destroyed, even in Embryo. So, the Cold of Affliction tends to mortify our Corruptions, and fubdue our vicious Habits.—The crouding Atmosphere conftringes our Bodies, and braces our Nerves. The Spirits are buoyant, and fally brifkly on the Execution of their Office. In the Summer-Months, fuch an unclouded Sky, and fo bright a Sun, would have melted us with Heat, and foftened us into Supineness. We should have been ready to throw our Limbs under the spreading Beach, and to lie at Ease by the murmuring Brook. But, now, none loiters in his Path; none is feen with folded Arms. All is in Motion; all is Activity. Choice, prompted by the Weather, supplies the Spur of Necessity. Thus, the rugged School of Misfortune, often trains up the Mind, to a vigorous Exertion of its Faculties. The bleak Climate of Adversity, often inspirits us with a manly Refolution. When a foft and downy Affluence, perhaps, would have relaxed all the generous Springs of the Soul; and have left it enervated with Pleasure, or dissolved in Indolence.

" COLD cometh out of the North." The Winds, having fwept those Defarts of Snow, arm themselves with Millions of frozen Particles, and make a fierce Descent upon our Isle. Under black and scowling Clouds, they drive, dreadfully whizzing, through the darkened Air. They growl around our Houses; affault our Doors; and, eager for Entrance, fasten on our Windows. Walls can scarce restrain them; Bars are unable to exclude them; through every Cranny they force their Way. Ice is on their Wings; they scatter Agues through the Land; and Winter, all Winter, rages as they go. Their Breath is as a fearing * Iron to the little Verdure, left in the Plains. Vaftly more pernicious to the tender Plants, than the sharpest Knife; they kill their Branches, and wound the very Root. Let not the Corn venture to peep too freely from the Entrenchment of the Furrow; let not the fruit-bearing Blossoms dare to come abroad, from their Lodgment in the Bark; lest these murderous Blasts intercept and seize the unwary Strangers, and destroy the Hopes of the advancing Year.

O, 'tis feverely cold! Who is fo hardy, as not to fhrink at this excessively pinching Weather? See! Every Face is pale. Even the blooming Cheeks contract a gelid Hue; and the Teeth hardly forbear chattering.-Ye that fit easy and joyous, amidst your commodious Apartments, folacing yourselves in the diffusive Warmth of your Fire; be mindful of your Brethren, in the chearless Tenement of Poverty. Their shattered Panes are open to the piercing Winds; a tattered Garment, scarcely covers their shivering Flesh; while a few faint and dying Embers on the squalid Hearth, rather mock their Wishes, than warm their Limbs .- While the generous Juices of Oporto, sparkle in your Glasses; or the Streams, beautifully tinged and deliciously flavoured with the Chinese Leaf, finoke in the elegant Porcelain: O remember, that many of your Fellow-Creatures, amidst all the Rigour of these inclement Skies, are emaciated with Sickness; benumbed with Age; and pining with Hunger. Let "their Loins bless you," for comfortable Cloathing. Restore them with Medicine; regale them with Food; and baffle the raging Year. So, may you never know any of their Distresses, but only by the Hearing of the Ear; the Seeing of the Eye; or the Feeling of a tender Commiseration!—Methinks, the bitter blustering Winds plead for the poor Indigents. May they breathe Pity into your Breasts; while they blow Hardfhips into their Huts!-Observe those blue Flames, and ruddy Coals, in your Chimney: quickened by the Cold, they look more lively, and glow more ftrongly. Silent, but feafonable Admonition to the gay Circle, that chat and smile around them! Thus, may your Hearts, at such a Juncture of Need, kindle into a peculiar Benevolence! Detain not your fuperfluous Piles of Wood. Let them hasten to the Relief of the starving Family. Bid them expire in many a willing Blaze, to mitigate the Severity of the Seafon, and chear the bleak Abodes of Want. So shall they ascend, mingled with Thanksgivings to God, and ardent Prayers for your Welfare-ascend, more grateful to Heaven, than Columns of the most costly Incenfe.

^{*} This, I suppose, is the Meaning of that figurative Expression, used by the Prophet Habakkuk; who, speaking of the Chaldeans invading Judæa, says—Their Faces, or the Incursions they make, shall supp, shall swallow greedily, shall devour utterly, the Inhabitants of the Country, and their valuable Effects; as the keen, corroding Blasts of the East Wind, destroy every green Thing in the Field. Hab.i. 9.

Now the Winds cease. Having brought their Load, they are dismissed from Service. They have wasted an immense Cargo of Clouds, which empty themselves in Snow. At first a few scattered Shreds come wandering down the saddened Sky. This slight Skirmish is succeeded by a general Onset. The Flakes, large, and numerous, and thick-wavering, descend. They dim the Air, and hasten the Approach of Night. Through all the Night, in softest Silence, and with a continual Flow, this sleecy Shower salls. In the Morning, when we awake, what a surprising Change appears!—Is this the same World? Here is no Diversity of Colour! I can hardly distinguish the Trees, from the Hills on which they grow. Which are the Meadows, and which the Plains?

Where are the green Paftures, and where the fallow Lands? All Things he blended in bright Confusion. So bright, that it heightens the Splendor of Day, and even dazzles the Organs of Sight.—The Lawn is not so fair, as this showy Mantle, which invests the Fields; and even the Lilly, was the Lilly to appear, would look tarnished in its Presence. I can think of but one Thing, which excels or equals the glittering Robe of Winter. Is any Person desirous to know my Meaning? He may find it explained in that admirable Hymn*, composed by the Royal Penitent. Is any desirous to possess this matchless Ornament? He will find it offered to his Acceptance, in every Page of the Gospel.

SEE! (for the Eye cannot fatisfy itself, without viewing again and again the curious, the delicate Scene) See! how the Hedges are habited, like spotless Vestals! The Houses are roofed with Uniformity and Lustre. The Meadows are covered with a Carpet of the finest Ermine †. The Groves bow, beneath the lovely Burden: and all, all below, is one wide, immense, shining Waste of White.—By deep Snows, and heavy Rains, GOD sealeth up the Hand of every Man. And for this Purpose, adds our facred Philosopher, that all Men may know his Work ‡. He confines them within their Doors, and puts a Stop to their secular Business; that they may consider the Things, which belong to their spiritual Welfare. That, having a Vacation from their ordinary Em-

^{*} Can any Thing be whiter than Snow? Yes, faith David; if God be pleased to wash me from my Sins in the Blood of Christ, I shall be even whiter than Snow. Psal. li. 7. See Page 314.

[†] This Animal is Milk-white. As for those black Spors, which We generally see, in Linings of Ermine, they are added by the Furrier; in order to diversify the Appearance, or heighten the Leauty, of the native Colour.

[‡] Job xxxvii. 7.

ploy, they may observe the Works of his Power, and become acquainted with the Mysteries of his Grace.

And worthy, worthy of all Observation, are the Works of the great Creator. They are prodigiously various and perfectly amazing. How pliant and ductile is Nature, under his forming Hand! At his Command, the self-same Substance assumes the most different Shapes; and is transformed into an endless Multiplicity of Figures. If HE ordains, the Water is moulded into Hail, and discharged upon the Earth like a Volley of Shot; or, it is consolidated into Ice, and defends the Rivers, "as it were with a Breast-plate." At the bare Intimation of his Will, the very same Element is scattered in Hoar-Frost, like a Sprinkling of the most attemated Ashes; or, is spread over the Surface of the Ground, in these Couches of swelling and slaky Down.

THE Snow, however it may carry the Appearance of Cold, affords a warm Garment for the Corn; screens it from nipping Frosts, and cherishes its infant Growth. It will abide for a while, to exert a protecting Care, and exercise a fostering Influence. Then, touched by the Sun, or thawed by a foftening Gale; the furry Vefture, melts into genial Moisture; finks deep into the Soil, and faturates its Pores with the diffolving Nitre; replenishing the Glebe with those Principles of vegetative Life, which will open into the Bloom of Spring, and ripen into the Fruits of Autumn.-Beautiful Emblem this, and comfortable Representation of the Divine Word; both in the fucceisful, and advantageous Issue of its Operation! As the Rain cometh down, and the Snow from Heaven, and returneth not thither, but watereth the Earth, and maketh it bring forth and bud, that it may give Seed to the Sower, and Bread to the Eater: So shall my Word be, that goeth forth out of my Mouth: it shall not return unto me void, but shall accomplish plish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the Thing whereunto I sent it *.

NATURE, at length, puts off her lucid Veil. She drops it, in a trickling Thazv. The loofened Snow, rolls in Sheets from the Houses. Various Openings fpot the Hills; which, even while we look, become larger, and more numerous. The Trees rid themfelves, by Degrees, of the hoary Incumbrance. Shook from the fpringing Boughs, Part falls heavy to the Ground, Part flies abroad in shining Atoms. Our Fields and Gardens, lately buried beneath the drifted Heaps, rise plain and distinct to View.—Since we see Nature once again, has she no verdant Traces, no beautiful Features, lest? They are, like real Friends, very rare; and therefore the more particularly to be regarded, the more highly to be valued.—Here and there, the Holly hangs out her glowing Berries; the Laurustinus spreads her graceful Tusts; and both, under a Covert of unfading Foliage.-The plain, but hardy Ivy cloaths the decrepit, crazy Wall; nor shrinks from the friendly Office, tho' the Skies frown, and the Storm roars.—The Laurel, firm, erect, and bold, expands its Leaf of vivid Green. In spite of the united, the repeated Attacks of Wind, and Rain, and Frost, it preferves an undifmayed lively Look; and maintains its Post, while withering Millions fall around. Worthy, by vanquishing the rugged Force of Winter, worthy to adorn the triumphant Conqueror's Brow.—Nor must I forget the Bay-tree; which scorns to be a mean Pensioner, on a few transient sunny Gleams; or, with a fervile Obsequiousness, to vary its Appearance, in Conformity to the changing Seasons. By such Indications of sterling Worth, and staunch Resolution, reading a Lecture to the Poet's Genius; while it weaves the Chaplet for his Temples.—These, and a few other Plants, clad with native Verdure, retain their comely Aspect, in the bleakest Climes, and in the coldest Months.

^{*} Ifa. lv. 10, 11.

Such, and so durable, are the Accomplishments of a refined Understanding, and an amiable Temper. The tawdry Ornaments of Dress, which catch the unthinking Vulgar, soon become insipid and despicable. The rubied Lip, and the rosy Cheek sade. Even the sparkling Wit*, as well as the sparkling Eye, please but for a Moment. But the virtuous Mind has Charms, which survive the Decay of every inserior Embellish-

* "How little does God effeem the Things that Men count great; the Endowments of Wit and Eloquence, that Men admire in fome! Alas! how poor are they to Him! He respected not any who are wise in Heart: they are nothing, and less than nothing, in his Eyes. Even wise Men admire, how little it is that Men know; how small a Matter lies under the Sound of these popular Wonders, a learned Man, a great Scholar, a great Statesiman. How much more doth the all-wise God meanly account of These! He often discovers, even to the World, their Meanness. He befools them. So Valour, or Birth, or worldly Greatiness, these He gives, and gives as Things He makes no great Reckoning of, to such as shall never see his Face; and calls to the Inheritance of Glory poor despised Creatures, that are looked on as the Off-scourings, and Refuse of the World."

—THUS fays an excellent Author; who writes with the most amiable Spirit of Benevolence; with the most unaffected Air of Humility; and like the facred Originals, from which he copies, with a majestic Simplicity of Stile.—Whose felect Works I may venture to recommend, not only as a Treasure, but as a Mine of genuine, sterling, evangelical Piety.—See Page 520 of Archbishop Leighton's felect Works, the Edinburgh Edition, Octavo. Which it is necessary to specify, because the London Edition does not contain that Part of his Writings, which has supplied me with the preceding Syctation.

ment. Charms, which add to the Fragrancy of the Flower, the Permanency of the Ever-green.

Such, likewise, is the Happiness of the sincerely Religious; like a Tree, says the inspired Moralist, "whose Leaf shall not fall." He borrows not his Peace from external Circumstances; but has a Fund within, and is "fatisfied from himself *." Even though impoverished by calamitous Accidents; He is rich in the Possession of Grace, and richer in the Hope of Glory. His Joys are infinitely superior to, as well as nobly independent on, the transitory Glow of sensual Delight, or the capricious Favours of, what the World calls, Fortune.

If the Snow composes the light-armed Troops of the Sky; methinks, the Hail constitutes its heavy Artillery †. When driven by a vehement Wind, with what dreadful Impetuosity, does that stony Shower fall! How it rebounds from the frozen Ground, and rattles on the resounding Dome! It attenuates the Rivers into Smoke, or scourges them into Foam. It crushes the infant Flowers; cuts in Pieces the Gardener's early Plants; and batters the feeble Fortification of his Glasses into Shivers. It darts into the Traveller's Face: He turns, with Haste, from the Stroke; or feels, on his Cheek, for the gushing Blood. If he would retreat into the House, it follows him even thither; and, like a determined Enemy, that pushes the Pursuit, dashes through the crackling Panes.—But, the sierce Attack is quickly over. The Clouds have foon spent their Shafts; foon unstrung their Bow. Happy for the Inhabitants of the Earth, that a Sally so dreadfully furious, should be so remarkably short! What else could endure the Shock, or escape Destruction.

* Prov. xiv. 14.

[†] He casteth forth his Ice like Morsels. Psal. cxlvii. 17. Which, in modern Language, might be thus expressed: He poureth his Hail like a Volley of Shot. The Word DDD, inadequately translated Morsels, alludes, I think, to those Fragments of the Rock, or those smooth Stones from the Brook, which, in the Day of Eattle, the Warriors hurled from their Slings.

But, behold a Bow, of no hostile Intention! A Bow, painted in variegated Colours, on the difburdened Cloud. How vast is the Extent, how delicate the Texture, of that showery Arch! It compasseth the Heavens with a glorious Circle; and teaches us to forget the Horrors of the Storm. Elegant its Form, and rich its Tincture; but more delightful its facred Significancy. While the Violet and the Rose, blush in its beautiful Aspect; the Olive-branch smiles in its gracious Import. It writes, in radiant Dyes, what the Angels fung in harmonious Strains; "Peace on Earth, "and Good-will towards Men." It is the Stamp of Infurance, for the Continuance of Seed-Time, and Harvest; for the Preservation and Security of the visible World*. It is the comfortable Token +, of a better State, and a happier Kingdom-a Kingdom, where Sin shall cease, and Misery be abolished; where Storms shall beat, and Winter pierce no more; but Holiness, Happiness, and Joy, like one unbounded Spring, for ever, ever bloom.

^{*} Gen. ix. 12-16.

[†] Rev. iv. 3.

T A B L E

OF THE

T E X T S,

More or less illustrated in this WORK.

N.B. As Dr. Shaw, in the Supplement to bis Excellent Book of Travels, and several other Authors of the greatest Eminence, have given an Index of Scriptures, occasionally explained in their Writings; I doubt not, but I shall oblige many of my Readers, by what I here subjoin; those especially, whose Taste is happily formed to relish the Beauties of the sacred Records.

Chap.	Ver.	Page.
	GENESIS	•
XXX.	I.	27.
	Deur.
XXXII.	29.	7.
	Josн.
X.	12, 13.	363.
	Jube.
V.	20.	363.
V.	30.	113.
	1 SAM.
XXXVIII.	19.	59.
	T KINGS
VIII.	27.	4.
XX.	40.	233.
	NEHEM.
IX.	6.	368.

TEXTS Illustrated.

Chap.	Ver.	Page.
	Ј О В
IV.	{14, 15, 16, } {17, 18, 19.}	251, 252, 253.
IV.	19.	15.
V.	23.	406.
VII.	20.	309.
IX.	8.	61.
IX.	2 5, 26.	225.
XIX.	² 5•	163.
XXII.	14.	61.
XXII.	r6.	279.
XXII. XXV.	20.	318.
XXVI.	5, 6.	335•
XXXVIII.	14.	303.
XXXVIII.	25.	142.
211121 1 111.	30.	409.
	PSALMS
VIII.	3, 4.	307.
XXIII.	I.	359•
XXVII.	ı.	3 59•
XXVII. XXXIII.	4.	117.
XLV.	6, 9.	317.
LI.	8.	110.
XCVI.	7.	314.
XCVII.	5· 2.	368. 326.
CIV.	3.	6 ₁ .
CIV.	3° 24.	120.
CVIII.	4.	81.
CX.	3⋅	91—93.
CX.	7.	93.
CXXXVI.	9.	275.
CXXXIX.	2.	238.
CXXXIX.	7, 8, 9.	223.
CXXXIX.	I @.	237:
	Proverss
IV.	15.	156.
	Eccles.	3
XII.	3, 5.	. 36.

T E X T S Illustrated.

Chap.	· Ver.	Page.
	CANTIC.
II.	Ι.	117.
ŶĨ.	IO.	280.
	Isa.
II.	II.	402.
IX.	3•	336.
XIV.	23.	267.
XXIX.	8.	246.
XXXIII.	15.	156.
XXXIII.	x 7 ·	116.
XXXV.	Ι.	145.
XXXVIII.	II.	232.
XL. XL.	12. 15.	322 . 304.
XL.	29, 30, 31.	318.
XLI.	10.	347.
XLII.	3.	348.
XLIX.	13.	332.
LI.	16.	176.
LIII.	3∙	183.
LV.	13.	145.
LVIII.	10.	147.
LXI.	10.	114-
	JEREM.
XXXI.	12.	145.
XLIX.	ĭī.	31.
	Ezek.
XVI.	63.	311.
	DAN.	-
IX.	24.	281.
XII.	3∙	372.
	HABAK.
I.	9•	411.
III.	4.	130.
III.	11.	363.
	Zесн.
IX.	17.	329.
XIII.	í.	335-
	MATT.
.1V	25.	36 0.
	-

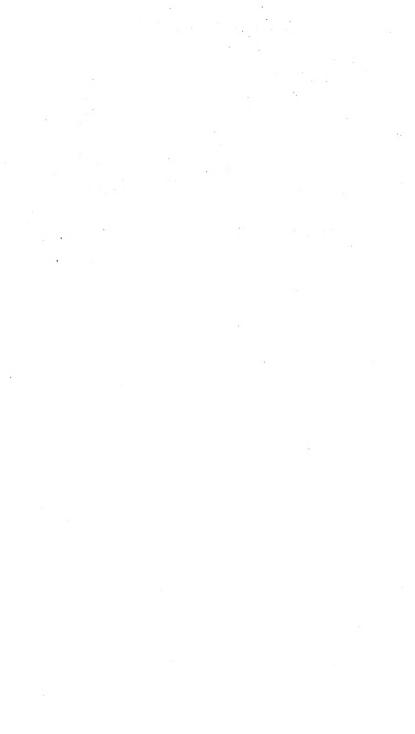

TEXTS Illustrated.

Chap.	Ver.	Page.
	Luke
VH.	12.	26 r.
XIV.	23.	124.
XV.	LI, &c.	339, 343
XVIII.	19.	329.
	John
I.	3.	131.
III.	3.	255-
V.	17.	105.
X.	9.	150.
XI.	26.	62.
XH.	3 2.	356.
XIV.	6.	150.
XIV.	9.	354.
	Acrs
YX.	I.	341.
XX.	28.	314.
	Rom.
v.	8.	331.
VI.	20.	341.
XIII.	14.	114.
	ICOR.
Ţ.	24-	353.
I.	30.	276.
XV.	41, 42.	375.
	2 Cor.
IV.	17.	²³⁹ .
VI	16.
IX.	8.	338.
	GAL.
II.	20.	153.
	Ерн.
III.	10.	353⋅
III.	18, 19.	309.
HIF.	20.	319.
	Риглир.	^
11.	6, 7, 8.	308.
III.	10.	154.
	Coross.
11.	3∙	354.

TEXTS Illustrated.

Chap.	Ver.	Page
	HEE.
I.	2, 3.	¥32.
VII.	26.	312.
VIII.	10.	358.
XII.	2.	148.
	r Per.
I.	12.	355•
	2 Per.
HII.	10.	. 269.
	REV.
₩	{1, 2, 3, } {4, 5, 6.}	228.
X	24, 5, 6.5
XII.	I.	178.
XXI.	£.	186.

FINIS.

Princeton Theological Seminary Libraries

1 1012 01195 3314

